'SHARKS? SHUCKS!'

PALM BEACH, Fla. (UPI)—President Kennedy swam and his wife water-skied Saturday in an ocean area which local boatmen say abounds with sharks.

Capt. Bob Owen, skipper of the fishing boat "Honeychile," said he was amazed that the Kennedys were swimming in that area.

"Any fishing - boat skipper will tell you that these waters are loaded with sharks," Owen said. "You could not get me to swim out there for $10,000."

RUSS EXPERT ON ORIENT TAKES OVER KEY POST

Zorin Out as Delegate to U.N.

MOSCOW, Sunday (AP) — Valerian A. Zorin, veteran hard-line Russian negotiator tripped up by the Kremlin's soft-line switch in the Cuban crisis, was removed today as Soviet delegate to the United Nations.

Nikolai T. Fedorenko, now ambassador to Japan, was named his successor, Tass reported.

In announcing the change, Tass mentioned no new assignment for Zorin and left unclear whether Zorin's rank as a deputy foreign minister was affected. When a senior Soviet official loses his rank, this normally is made clear.

(Newsmen's inquiries at Soviet U.N. delegation headquarters in New York brought only expressions of surprise. Callers were told no official word of the change had been received.

(Zorin was at the delegation's country house in Glen Cove on Long Island. U.N. acquaintances of Zorin suggested health might be a factor in the change. They said Zorin was tired and seemed somewhat unsure of himself at a news conference Saturday reviewing the U.N. General Assembly session.)

The Tass announcement said:

"The U.S.S.R. Council of Ministers has appointed Nikolai Fedorenko as Soviet permanent representative at the U.N. and the U.S.S.R.'s representative in the U.N. Security Council.

"U.S.S.R. Deputy Foreign Minister Valerian Zorin, who had held these posts, is relieved of his duties."

Fedorenko, 50, is a Far Eastern-affairs expert who also has served in the Russian Embassy in Peking.

The standing of the 60-year-old Zorin apparently suffered because of the Cuban crisis. In the United Nations, he flatly denied U.S. charges in October that Soviet missile bases were being built in Cuba, only to have Premier Khrushchev admit their existence shortly afterward.

U.S. Chief Delegate Adlai Stevenson exhibited aerial photographs of the missile sites and then—in one of the most dramatic confrontations in the history of the U.N. Security Council — demanded to know if Zorin denied the existence of the sites.

Zorin replied, "I am not in an American courtroom . . . In due course, sir, you will have your reply." To this, Stevenson retorted, "I am prepared to wait for my answer until Hell freezes over."

Zorin eventually denied existence of the sites.

* * * *

ZORIN ALSO was overshadowed in the negotiations that followed in the United Nations. The Soviet Union sent First Deputy Foreign Minister Vassily V. Kuznetsov, known among Westerners as more of a soft-line diplomat. First Deputy Premier Anastas I. Mikoyan also took part in the talks after a lengthy stay in Cuba.

Since then, Western diplomats here had speculated about the possibility of Zorin's dismissal.

Shuffles in the high ranks of the Soviet Foreign Office often have been followed by a change of policy.

Zorin, regarded by Western diplomats as a hard-line negotiator, in particular has expressed the Kremlin's rigid stand against international inspection as a part of disarmament.

If the change heralds any new Soviet approach, it may become known after the disarmament talks reopen Jan. 15 in Geneva.

* * * *

EAST European Communist sources have hinted recently that new Soviet proposals would be offered at Geneva about Feb. 1. They did not disclose what these might contain.

Zorin has ranked with Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko at the front of Soviet diplomacy since the death of Andrei Vyshinsky and the downfall of Vya-

Freed Cuban Captives to Land Today

First Plane Due in Florida This Morning at 8:30

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — U.S. official sources said Saturday night the first planeload of Cuba invasion prisoners would be flown to Florida about 8:30 a.m. (EST) today.

The source, at Homestead Air Force Base where the captives are to be landed, said a Pan American World Airways plane would depart at 6 a.m. from Miami International Airport for Havana.

A second flight will leave Miami at 6:30 a.m., the spokesman said.

Meanwhile other Pan Am planes will fly to Havana carrying cargo which will supplement the drugs and food demanded by Fidel Castro in modern history's biggest ransom deal for 1,113 men captured in the April 17, 1961, invasion of the Bay of Pigs in southwest Cuba.

WORKERS toiled Saturday night, and a ransom-laden freighter sailed from Port Everglades, Fla., for Havana.

The activities, implementing a $53-million ransom demand by Castro, all had one objective—to free the men for Christmas reunion with their kinfolk.

The work had the fervent blessing of prisoners' relatives fighting to remain calm over impending reunion. It drew vigorous op-

NIGHTMARE ON FREEWAY

200 Autos Crash, 1 Dead, 100 Hurt

Two hundred cars piled up on the Santa Ana Freeway Saturday in a massive traffic nightmare that killed one person and injured more than 100 others.

The California Highway Patrol report on the cause of the fantastic wreck was terse and to the point: "Too much fog, driving too fast."

Crushed to death when the car in which she was riding was struck by a produce truck was Sister Mary Refuge, 28-year-old Roman Catholic nun, principal of the School of Our Lady in Santa Ana. The driver of the car, Sister Angelina Chavez, 24, a fourth-grade teacher at the school, was reported in "only fair" condition at Santa Ana Community Hospital, where 24 of the others injured were hospitalized Saturday.

* * * *

FIFTEEN other persons were released after treatment at the hospital and nine others were treated at El Toro Marine Air Station dispensary. Officers said more than 50 other injured persons went to their own physicians.

The pileup was the result of three separate accidents in a two-mile stretch of freeway between Myford and Jeffrey Roads near the El Toro Air Station in Orange County.

At least 60 cars were involved in the first accident in which the nun was killed. Officers said the nuns' vehicle swerved to avoid hitting a car in the fog and was struck by the truck. Sister Mary Refuge was crushed to death when the truck ran over the car.

* * * *

THE ACCIDENT precipitated a chain of collisions on the freeway as motorists, unable to see in the thick fog, plowed into the wreckage in front of them in the southbound lanes. Other minor mishaps occurred when northbound lane motorists slowed to see the wreckage and were struck from behind by other cars.

Police called 27 towtrucks and 10 ambulances to the scene. The trucks hauled 57 disabled cars off the freeway to clear lanes for traffic, which was backed up for more than 12 miles.

Visibility at the time of the pileup was reported to be 50 feet or less.

* * * *

THE SCENE was described by one of the injured motorists, Marine Maj. V. J. Smith of El Toro:

"I was driving along the freeway in perfectly clear weather and the visibility was fine. Suddenly, I hit the thick fog. Just as suddenly, I saw the pileup of cars in front of me. I couldn't stop in time to avoid plowing into it."

The wreckage was not cleared away for more than three hours, although officers and towtruck crews worked at top speed.

CHP Sgt. Jim Taylor called the wreck "the worst series of accidents I've ever seen in 25 years with the Highway Patrol."

* * * *

POLICE SAID the nuns were on their way to the University of San Diego to take courses during their Christmas vacation.

The two other accidents on the freeway, which began similar chain-reaction pileups, were not so serious, officers said, and there were no fatalities.

The fog caused another crash marathon near Oceanside, where 19 persons were injured, 11 seriously, in a 16-car pileup on U.S. 101. Police said a trailer truck jackknifed across the highway to avoid a slow-moving car. The truck was rammed by north and southbound traffic and other cars smashed into the wreckage.

The fog blanket settled over the Long Beach area and most other coastal sections of the state for the third day late Saturday afternoon, and was expected to slow holiday traffic to a crawl until this morning.

Arts Buildings Urged for Fair

By GEORGE ERES

Reconstruction and remodeling of the Long Beach Municipal Auditorium to provide a concert hall seating about 2,700 is proposed in a report on suggested performing arts facilities for the World's Fair in 1967-68.

The proposal for use of a remodeled auditorium is made in Economics Research Associates' study of "Facilities for the Performing Arts" at the Fair and includes suggestions for construction of two permanent facilities:

An amphitheater on the fairgrounds, seating about 8,000 and designed to accommodate both stage and water spectacles;

A playhouse to seat about 900.

The proposal also includes suggested use of the new Arena for some events.

* * * *

ESTIMATED cost of construction and remodeling of the facilities is put between $2,320,000 and $3,740,000 although the report notes that "in the absence of design data . . . it is impractical to attempt precise construction cost estimates."

The proposal for use of a remodeled Municipal Auditorium and the Arena, involves extension of the Fair site from Pier J to the shoreline area between Magnolia Avenue and the auditorium. This area will be connected with the Magnolia Avenue bridge which the Harbor Department will construct. Contracts for bridge plans and specifications have been let and the timetable calls for completion of the bridge between West Beach and Pier A by 1965.

Under this proposal, lease of the area for parking and use of existing buildings, Fair Corporation officials would build the proposed new permanent structures and pay for remodeling of the Auditorium.

The... Drivers... Were... Rushing...

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The poem below is published, not for its shock value, but as a public service in the hope that drivers who read it will think twice before mixing alcoholic spirits with the spirit of Christmas.)

By BOB DAVIS

'Twas the night before Christmas, and down on the freeway
The traffic was stirring, right into a melee;
Gas pedals were pushed almost down to the floor
And the drivers were rushing to get home before four.
At home their sweet children prepared for their beds
And visions of happy things danced in their heads;
Poor mama was fretting and watching the clock
Hoping daddy would get home to help fill each sock.
When all of a sudden, weaving over the road
One driver came rushing, blind drunk, we are told;
Across the divider he came like a bullet
His eyes were half shut, for him death in a minute.
Into the path of daddy's car he roared
Slumped over the wheel, the pedal still floored;
With a screaming of brakes, and the grinding of metal
The two cars collided and ripped like a petal.
Daddy lay dying alongside his car,
His ears heard the officer, wearing a star;
"Stick with it, fellow, help's on the way,
"A doctor is coming, and others will pray."
He felt himself lifted by two white attendants
Who left behind packages for his three dependents;
Then suddenly the scene turned rosy and clear
And daddy knew he had no more to fear.
As he turned to look at the people below
He saw mama and kiddies; the music played slow.
Peter and Mary both held mama tight
And she shed a tear, mama, sweet wife.
Except for a drunk who thought he could drive
They would have had Christmas with daddy alive.

39 Survive Brazilian Air Crash

BRASILIA, Brazil, Sunday (AP)—A Brazilian airliner with 40 persons reported aboard went down with its engines ablaze Saturday night near Brasilia International Airport only minutes before its scheduled landing at this inland capital.

Reports indicated the pilot was the only person killed, giving his life in guiding the plane to an emergency landing from which 35 passengers and four other crewmen escaped alive.

The accident came near the end of a two-hour flight originating in Rio de Janeiro.

Press reports said the pilot in his last contact with the Brasilia Airport Tower reported fire in the engine of the propeller-driven Convair airliner. The captain said he was trying to close off the gasoline tanks and would make a forced landing with the landing gear retracted.

A surviving passenger reported the plane ploughed into a field and skidded 300 yards. Both wings were snapped off.

Test Fails to Revive Skybolt

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Defense Department said Saturday that the last-minute successful test of the Skybolt missile will not alter President Kennedy's decision to jettison the controversial nuclear weapon.

The department also indicated no more Skybolt tests will be conducted.

Deputy Defense Secretary Roswell Gilpatric, acting in the absence of Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara, issued a statement several hours after a Skybolt had sped 900 miles to hit its target on the Cape Canaveral Atlantic range. It was the first successful test of the rocket.

L.A.C. Says:
92 Useful Years

Those of us who have had the privilege of knowing Bill Prisk for most of, or all, of his 42 years in Long Beach are fortunate. This writer is one of those so fortunate. For 14 of those years we were vigorous competitors. It was during those years of competition we came to truly appreciate the toughness of his character and his true dedication to the high principles for which he stood. We can recall the endless civic programs he supported with his newspaper—but much more important his own personal active participation.

We remember the time when his doctor warned him that he must give up some of his strenuous tension-producing activities. Mr. Prisk replied that he could do as much as anyone else and went on for the next 40 years to prove he was right. Even after his retirement from active newspaper work at the age of 82 his activities continued. Because of the great respect for him in the community he was called upon annually to head up some civic drive. He always accepted and added prestige to all the efforts that went into those programs.

In looking through our files we found some notes on a talk we gave at the Jewish Veteran "Man of the Year" award to Mr. Prisk in 1953. Because we feel our words spoken then are even more appropriate today we quote some of them as follows:

"When I was asked to speak at this presentation I was thrilled because no man is more deserving of the honor than is he. I never grow tired of seeing honors heaped upon him because he represents something that symbolizes Americanism at its best.

"He has for 60 years served the public in his capacity of newspaper publisher and good citizen. It has been 60 years of the most rapid growth of a state ever known in history—with tremendous changes in our economic and political philosophy. If we could take all our young people back through the experiences and years of Mr. Prisk's life, we would give them a better understanding of what democracy with freedom of enterprise and freedom of the individual means."

What we thought—and said—then 10 years ago is even more true today. The examples given by his dedicated life should be an inspiration to each of us. One example was shown us when we called on him last election day. For months he had been confined to his home. We were sure he had had an absentee ballot. But we found that he and his lovely wife, also 92 years old, had been about the first to go to the polling place to cast their ballot that morning. It was but one more indication of how he discharged his responsibility as a fine citizen.

We feel a great loss—but it would have been a tough life for Bill Prisk to have been confined to inactivity. Our great concern is for his companion and wife of 71 years. No man has ever given so much of himself and of his influence for good in the city of Long Beach. None so much deserved the title "Mr. Long Beach." What greater honor—or satisfaction—can come to a man than that he was so appreciated and honored while he was here to accept it. His was truly a useful 92 years.—L.A.C.

productions . . . The acoustical properties of the halls are not the best, and the facility is deficient in rehearsal area and dressing rooms . . . The stage is not provided with modern scenery-handling equipment . . ."

Economics Research Associates was retained by the Fair Corporation to provide techno-economic services for planning the Fair.

The report was prepared to determine existing facilities and what would be needed for the World's Fair.

"A REVIEW of existing and planned facilities in the Long Beach area," states the report, "indicates that only the Municipal Auditorium and Arena appear feasible for housing some of the Fair's performing arts productions."

The report states that attendance at pay and free performing arts attractions should be about 22 per cent of the total Fair attendance, which has been estimated as 6,666,000 the first season.

The ERA survey of local support for the Performing Arts noted that those activities are "well supported and attended in Long Beach. . . . The widespread community interest in music was demonstrated during the summer of 1962 when the season's first Starlight Serenade drew an estimated crowd of over 10,000 to Bixby Park. The unusual extent of Long Beach city appropriations for music is an additional evidence of interest and support.

"COMMUNITY support exists for three regularly performing dramatic groups. The oldest of these, the Long Beach Community Players, started in 1929 and have prospered to such a degree that they now own their own 200-seat theater. Another group, the Lakewood Players, have maintained regular, continuing performances in the Off-Broadway Theater for more than five years; and the Magnolia Theater, honored for its professional quality by the Ford Foundation, is entering its 10th year of continuing operation. These three dramatic groups are each privately operated as non-profit corporations and do not receive support from public funds."

Regionally, too, says the report "there can be little question of a massive support" for the performing arts.

THE REPORT notes that the facilities requirements vary greatly with the nature of the basic program planned for the performing arts at the Fair. The ERA proposals are based on the assumption that the Fair Corporation will present a "basic creative program, embellished by some big-name performers and top spectaculars."

Polaris Plan Hit by Soviet

MOSCOW (AP)—The Soviet government organ Izvestia Saturday called President Kennedy's offer of Polaris missiles to England and France a pretext for turning the North Atlantic Treaty Alliance into the fourth atomic power.

The newspaper also disputed the President's "pessimistic forecast" Monday of continued Soviet-American tensions despite understandings reached in the Cuban crisis.

* * * *

THE ARTICLE by Izvestia's diplomatic observer, Nikolai Polyanov, criticized the Polaris-missile agreement reached by Kennedy and British Prime Minister Macmillan in their Bahama meeting this week.

"It turns out that they want to drag atomic weapons into NATO in the form of Polaris rockets," he wrote. "Thus, the result is that Washington's words and deeds again are at variance."

Polyanov said that if the United States were to put an end to attempts to turn the North Atlantic alliance into an atomic force, "the political atmosphere in Europe would really improve."

Hhe said this would clear the way for settlement of the Berlin crisis and other issues. But news of the Polaris deal "forces one to be on guard," he added.

* * * *

POLYANOV also discussed President Kennedy's TV chat, in which he said Soviet-American understanding still is a long way off. He quoted the President as warning Americans they probably would not be able to lay down their cold-war burdens in this century and added that remarks about the necessity of maintaining American defenses against communism "smell of" the philosophy of the late Secretary of State John Foster Dulles.

Earlier, Tass said the Kennedy-Macmillan talks at Nassau resulted in a heavy blow to Britain's prestige.

L.B. Woman One of 34 Hurt in Bus

LOVELOCK, Nev. (AP) — A Greyhound bus rammed into a stalled car on foggy U. S. Highway 40 Saturday, rolled over and careened into a concrete wall. Thirty-four persons were taken to hospitals.

Among those injured was Alta Woodworth, 76, of 2223 Linden Ave., Long Beach. She was taken to Pershing Hospital in Lovelock.

Pershing County sheriff's officers said the accident occurred on a slick section of the highway about 14 miles east of here in early morning darkness.

Officers said the bus apparently struck the car, then overturned. It began a second roll, but hit a concrete abutment and settled back on its wheels in a divider strip.

* * * *

GREYHOUND officials in Salt Lake City, Utah, said the bus, en route from Salt Lake City to San Francisco, had picked up a group of persons from Idaho at Wells, Nev. They had reached Wells via a connecting line, the Twin Falls-Wells stage line.

Officers said the bus hit a car driven by Larry Stachler, 21, of Lindsay, Calif. His injuries were described as minor.

W. F. Prisk Rites to Be Wednesday

Hosking Prisk, were natives of England.

When he was 10 years old, he went to work as a newspaperboy for the Grass Valley Tidings. Soon afterward, while still attending school, he served as a printer's apprentice.

Subsequently, while working for the same newspaper, he became a reporter and performed general duties.

Prisk graduated from Grass Valley High School when he was 17 years old and, within about a year, became publisher of his first newspaper in partnership with Rufus Shoemaker, who had served as editor of the Tidings. Each partner invested $250 and Mr. Prisk had to borrow his share from a friend.

* * * *

THE NEW PAPER, the Evening Telegraph, made its first appearance in Grass Valley on Feb. 23, 1889. Mr. Prisk was typesetter, reporter and business manager.

After selling his interest in the paper about two years later, Mr. Prisk went to San Francisco and worked as a market reporter. He next acquired a half interest in the Fresno Review, subsequently disposing of his share and accepting notes in payment for the undercapitalized publication.

He was next employed as a reporter for the Sacramento Union and covered the State Assembly.

* * * *

ON JUNE 13, 1893, he became editor and publisher of the Grass Valley Union, after borrowing most of the money for the purchase. Two years earlier, he had wed Alice Othet, daughter of a pioneer Nevada County family.

Under Mr. Prisk's guidance, the publication became the first "country" newspaper in the state to receive Associated Press wire service. It gave the paper a great lead in competition with four other dailies.

In 1897, Mr. Prisk was elected to the State Senate and, at the age of 27, was the youngest member of the legislature. He declined to stand for re-election.

* * * *

IN 1906, feeling that the southern part of the state had a great future, Mr. Prisk and his younger brother, Charles, purchased the Pasadena Star. In 1916, it merged with the News to become the Star-News.

The Long Beach Press, a daily with fewer than 3,000 subscribers, was purchased by Mr. Prisk in December 1910. He and his wife moved to Long Beach to take up permanent residence here.

The late William H. Hosking, associated with Mr. Prisk in Grass Valley, joined the Long Beach enterprise and, in 1924, the Press merged with the Daily Telegram to become the Long Beach Press-Telegram.

MR. PRISK served as editor-publisher of The Press and The Press-Telegram for 42 years until the Ridder family purchased the newspaper in 1952, subsequently also acquiring the Pasadena newspaper.

At the time of the sale, The Press-Telegram's circulation had climbed to 100,000 from the 3,000 The Press had when Mr. Prisk acquired it.

Although he retired from the newspaper business, Mr. Prisk continued to be an active civic leader and headed several community drives. A Long Beach elementary school was named after him.

* * * *

ON MARCH 21, 1960, the State Legislature unanimously passed a resolution commending Mr. Prisk, "one of California's most distinguished and best-loved citizens."

In addition to citing his service in the newspaper field, the resolution noted his leadership in such community projects as the Boy Scouts, Red Cross and Community Chest.

Mr. Prisk was a member of Rotary Club, Native Sons of the Golden West, Elks Club, Masonic Blue Lodge, All Year Club of Southern California and the Newspaper Publishers Association.

uled prior to the Nassau agreement reached Friday by Kennedy and Prime Minister Macmillan to substitute Polaris missiles for the Skybolt as a British nuclear weapon.

Gilpatrick commented:

"This flight test was one of an extensive series planned for the research phase of the project. It is always expected that some tests of this sort should succeed and that others will fail. Many additional tests had been planned and would be required during the research phase to prove out and perfect this complex weapons system."

* * * *

ALTHOUGH Gilpatric did not explicitly declare that no more tests would be conducted, he significantly used the phrases, "had been planned" and "would be required" to indicate that future experiments were no longer contemplated.

"Program decisions cannot be based simply upon the success or failure of early tests," the defense official said.

He added: "doubts as to the prospects of the success of the Skybolt system in its entirety and its reliability when operational were among the factors responsible for the recommendation of the secretary of defense against further funding of the program. The results of today's tests have not caused any change in that program."

* * * *

GILPATRIC said that higher defense spending in the new budget to be sent Congress by Kennedy next month would more than compensate for cancellation of Skybolt.

Season's Fleeting

THIS STERN BANNER, flying over a struggling sea of humanity in London's famed Petticoat Lane, provides an almost surrealist commentary on the human condition. But the throng of Christmas shoppers, patronizing the pushcart merchants, were too busy worrying about the end of the line to be overly preoccupied with grim warnings of the coming end of their days.

Cuban Captives Expected Today

position from one man who was arrested after trying to throw a Cuba-bound medicine package into Port Everglades harbor.

At Port Everglades, north of Miami, the 460-ton freighter African Pilot sailed at 9:41 p.m. (EST), for Havana with $11 million in medicine and food as a first installment on $53 million in goods sorely needed in Cuba.

* * * *

AT HOMESTEAD Air Force Base, south of Miami, facilities were readied to examine, feed, clothe and process the men.

In Havana, the prisoners were reported "mad with joy" behind walls of prisons where Prime Minister Castro has kept them penned.

Members of the Prisoners' Families Committee in Havana said the captives were expected to be released Monday—Christmas Eve.

No moves toward celebration in advance were apparent among the captives' 20,000 relatives living in Miami's Cuban exile colony of more than 100,000. Negotiations stalled twice before.

"After all this," said one exile, "we cannot be sure of anything." Others were tensely hopeful that this time, their boys really would come home.

Dr. Jose Miro Cardoona, head of the Cuban revolutionary council who has a son among the captives, said in Miami "thank God for the miracle he has done."

Former Cuban Prime Minister Antonio de Varona, also father of a captive, said, "Now I'll be able to embrace my son, my brother and many friends."

* * * *

SOME DELAY in the Port Everglades departure of the SS African Pilot was attributed to unfamiliarity of the crew with the vessel. The crew was mustered hastily in Baltimore just before the African Pilot was sent to Florida, by the Committee of American Steamship Lines.

Castro, who signed the ransom agreement with Prisoners' Families Committee negotiator James B. Donovan, went to Jose Marti Airport outside Havana to see off three Cuban officials who flew to Miami to inspect the ransom goods.

Russ Tell of U.S. Flights

MOSCOW (UPI)—The Soviet Union accused the United States Saturday of sending "dozens" of nuclear-armed bombers on "continuous" flights toward the Soviet Union" during the Cuban crisis.

The accusation came in the government newspaper Izvestia from Sergei Vershinin, Soviet air force commander in chief.

"In the latest events around Cuba all the (U. S.) strategic means of air attack were put into readiness while dozens of U. S. planes with nuclear weapons on board made continuous flights towards the Soviet Union," he wrote.

* * * *

VERSHININ went on to say, "In a future war the decisive role will belong to rocket-nuclear weapons."

But all services will be necessarily involved in any successful war campaign, he said.

He also said the basis of the Soviet air strike force was the missile-carrying plane whose armaments could hit moving as well as static targets on land and sea.

He said Soviet aircraft and missiles will soon operate in the stratosphere, above the atmosphere where planes now fly.

3.5 MILLION SQUARE MILES COMBED

Navy Hunt for Red Subs Realistic Test; 6 Spotted

U. S. NAVAL BASE, Guantanamo Bay, Cuba (AP)—The Cuban crisis antisubmarine search by the U. S. Navy covered a 3.5-million-square-mile area and located about six Soviet submarines, Adm. George W. Anderson, Chief of Naval Operations, says.

Resulting directly from the biggest search since World War II and Korea were four deaths, occurring in two helicopter crashes from the antisubmarine carrier Essex. There were other casualties, however, not related to the antisubmarine warfare (ASW) operation, including the crash of an Air Force C135 transport plane at Guantanamo while bringing in supplies.

The Russian subs were observed visually and photographed when they surfaced to recharge batteries. Anderson said they were standard, diesel-powered submarines, not atomic-powered.

* * * *

THE NEAREST such observation was about 200 miles off Cuba, Anderson said in an interview. To a question, he said also he knew of no Russian submarine being found close to U. S. shores. The ASW operation extended from the U. S. coast eastward as far as the Azores and Canaries and southward off the northeastern coast of South America.

Anderson said the sightings came in a period of about three weeks midway of the Cuban crisis. He indicated that some of the vessels were sighted more than once, leading to earlier reports that substantially more than six had been discovered.

Anderson says "there is no doubt whatever that had there been hostile action we could have handled the situation without difficulty."

But the surface contacts between U. S. and Russian men-of-war brought only formal, indeed almost polite, interchange.

"When a submarine surfaced, we extended normal courtesy, asking him 'Are you in need of assistance?'" Anderson said.

The admiral added, with a grin, that the U. S. Navy appreciates the assistance the Russian submarines gave in providing realistic ASW training.

Ships and aircraft carried the newest equipment for submarine detection, location and classification. Even better equipment is on the way, Anderson commented that some sonar sets, still in the development stage, promise to have ten times the range of World War II sonar. Effective range for World War II sonar generally was about 2,000 yards.

* * * *

ANDERSON believes that as nuclear strategic power grows on each side, Russia at some future time might find reason to attempt her own naval blackade somewhere in the world, using submarines to enforce it. He doesn't attempt to predict exactly where, mentioning only as possibilities such regions as Indonesia, the Baltic area, the Egyptian area.

He took cognizance, in this connection, of Russian gifts of submarines to some Soviet-bloc and currently neutral countries. Anderson estimated that Egypt has about 10, Red China about 25 and that Indonesia has some. All are nonnuclear.

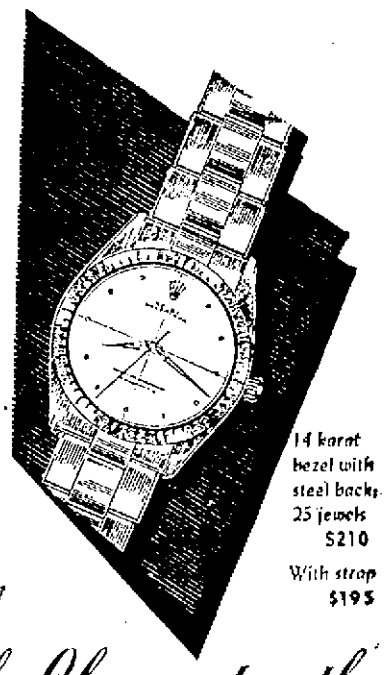

Russia, according to the authoritative publication, Jane's Fighting Ships, now has about 20 atomic-powered submarines. Of these about a dozen are believed to be operating with the fleet.

Of the Russian atomic-propulsion program, Anderson said:

"We believe they are considerably behind us and that they have had troubles."

WORLD NEWS BRIEFS

Jury Deadlocks in Hoffa Trial

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—The jury trying James R. Hoffa on conspiracy charges reported Saturday night—for the third time—it was deadlocked but agreed to return to deliberate the Teamster president's case today.

Foreman Walter Harper told Federal Judge William E. Miller when the jury came in after more than 14 hours of deliberation at 9:35 p.m. CST that the jurors felt they had done everything they could to reach agreement.

For the past nine weeks, the president of the nation's largest single union has been on trial, charged with violating the Taft-Hartley Act by taking money from a company while representing its employes. The government claims that a Michigan transport firm gave Hoffa concealed payoffs as insurance for labor peace.

Ex-Teacher Held in Abduction

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A whisky-drinking former school teacher, accused of abducting two teen-aged girls at gunpoint Friday night, was easily captured 10 hours later after he drove by the scene of the crime.

KAREN

KERRY

The girls, freed minutes earlier, were not injured but said they had been molested, police reported.

Officers identified the man as Gale Homer Anderson, 30, Salt Lake City, a former school teacher in Idaho and Utah. He lived only three blocks from the home of one of the girls.

The girls, both 13 years old, were Karen Ann Garner and Kerry Warner. They appeared upset and excited, but didn't display a great deal of distress following their ordeal.

Nike Zeus Hits ICBM Target

WASHINGTON (AP)—A Nike Zeus antimissile missile successfully intercepted the first ICBM target using decoys in a Pacific test Saturday, the Army announced.

A salvo of two Zeus missiles was fired against the target and its decoys, but one of the Zeus missiles developed trouble after launching and was destroyed, the announcement said.

The Army announcement did not say how many decoys were in the Atlas missile which was lofted from Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif. It was sent about 5,000 miles to the area of Kwajelein Island, where the Zeus weapons were launched. Nor did it say how far away or how high that target was when the intercept occurred.

Shipowners Reject Dockers' Plan

NEW YORK (AP)—Shipowners rejected Saturday night a new union proposal in a dispute that threatens to tie up Atlantic and Gulf Coast ports today. They called the union offer "injurious" and an "irresponsible insult to the industry."

Alexander P. Chopin, chairman of the New York Shipping Association, declared, "We are further on the road to a strike than ever before."

The International Longshoremen's Association is threatening to call its members off docks from Searsport, Maine, to Brownsville, Tex., unless agreement on a new contract is reached by 5 p.m. today.

U.S. Congo Mission Upsets Thant

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—Diplomatic sources said Saturday that U.N. Secretary-General U Thant was "quite upset and very unhappy" when he learned that the United States was sending a military mission to the Congo.

They said the United States informed Thant privately last Sunday, without advance consultation, that it would send the mission. The U.S. government disclosed the plan publicly two days later in the Bahamas, where President Kennedy and Prime Minister Macmillan were meeting.

Friendless Convict Gains Freedom

McALESTER, Okla. (AP)—Kansas City Fat, who never had a visitor and never got a letter in his 28 years in the Oklahoma State Penitentiary, was a free man Saturday.

FAT

As the 58-year-old Negro walked from the prison, he bore a broad grin and clutched 113 letters sent him by well-wishers since The Tulsa Tribune and the Associated Press carried his story Thursday.

Kansas City Fat—whose real name is George O. Jones—was serving a life term for a 1934 armed robbery that netted him only 15 cents.

"It's just not true," the man said unbelievingly as he waited for the guard to turn the key.

"When I told Kansas City Fat he was going to go free he just looked at me, then he sort of gulped, then he started holding back the tears," Warden Robert Raines said.

Blizzard Kills Mother, Two Children

HELENA, Mont. (AP) -The bodies of a woman and her two children were found in a snowbound car Saturday in the wake of Friday's arctic blizzard in Montana.

The bodies of Mrs. Mary Ann Coleman, about 30, her children Cal, 6, and Connie, 9, were found in their car about a mile from their farmhouse near the Canadian border town of Sunburst.

Iowa Family of 7 Dies in Sunken Car

CLARKS, Neb. (UPI)—The bodies of a Des Moines, Iowa, family of seven were found Saturday in a capsized car almost completely submerged in mud and water beside a sweeping highway curve three miles south of here.

The victims were Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Randall Dewey, Des Moines, and their five sons.

Polk County (Neb.) Atty. William Norton said the victims, besides Dewey, 28, and his wife, Patricia, 26, were their five sons: Randy, 9; Steven, 7; Richard, 5; Kevin, 4, and Dennis, 2.

* * * *

NORTON SAID the Dewey family was en route to visit a brother, Allen Dewey, at Broken Bow, Neb., for the holidays.

The family was swallowed up, soon after midnight by the thick mud and icy water of the Platte River, whose backwash at the accident scene leaves a wide, swampy area.

The car apparently went off the highway near the approach to a long two-lane bridge over the river and swamp. The highway swings south in a wide curve from a junction with U.S. 30 near the scene of the accident.

The car was removed from the icy water 11 to 12 hours after it plunged into the swamp, authorities said.

* * * *

GARAGEMAN Art Schlondorf, 37, Clarks, who pulled the car out of the swamp about noon Saturday, said all seven bodies were inside the vehicle. He said one window was rolled down about a third of the way on the right side, but no doors were open.

Schlondorf said the car was submerged as much in mud as water. While only four inches of the tires protruded above the water, he and a helper, Glenn Colby, were able to walk to the car in overshoes which were not quite knee high. The top of the car was imbedded in the soft mud.

A Reporter's Memories

A LIFETIME OF CHRISTMASES IS NOT ENOUGH

By GEORGE FLOWERS

In each lifetime there are many Christmases . . . the happy . . . the sad . . . the rich . . . the poor . . .

* * * *

ONE YEAR when the boy was young there were many candles on the tree.

Each twisted bit of wax teetered on a clamp pinned to a dying branch of a great fir tree in the living room. To light the candles, mother used a long taper, and the process took half an hour. Fragments of the cold Canadian breeze wormed through the great windows of the house on the hill.

The candle flames twinkled and danced in this wind.

Memories of a five-year-old's Christmas seem confined to recollections of cutting and pasting drafting paper into joined bracelets, until they became great strings to loop over the branches.

And of popcorn, sewn together into strings.

But mostly of creeping down the stairs after proper bedtime, to peer through the railings at the dancing, flickering lights of Christmas.

FOR THE Dutch, Christmas was always a time of warmth and family. When they colonized, they brought that spirit with them. But all of their jolly kinship had been driven from Hollandia, in far-off New Guinea, in 1944, by the hatred of man for himself.

The line of mess-kitted men wound slowly around a clapboard messhall. If this were, indeed, Christmas, there was no sign of it in the hot and humid air. Nor was there a sign of it upon the men, whose feet itched in the sweat, whose begrimed t-shirts were soiled forever in the indifference of their owners (and launderers.)

Like a slothful python uncoiling itself for an annual meal, the line finally disappeared into the hall, without smile or song.

It was a Christmas without home, without family. But most of all it was a Christmas without Christ.

* * * *

MINNEAPOLIS, in the late 1920s, was a city as forlorn in its joblessness as any other in the nation. The boy, now in the first part of his teens, had learned that a quarter for the gas meter could create a family crisis . . . that one did not look at bright red apples in a bin and ask for them.

One looked in silence, quickly, then looked away lest a parent detect longing . . . too often confused those days with avarice or greed.

One remembers kicking along a sidewalk, buttoned and galoshed against the wind and snow, and kicking into a dollar bill, pinned to the concrete by a thin layer of ice.

In the 1920s a dollar bill was much bigger than it is today, but this was the biggest one of all.

* * * *

ALONG the cold shoreline of eastern Wisconsin nestles the city of Two Rivers, and on its shoreline, here and there, rise fine homes with breathtaking command of an angry great lake in an angry season.

Men build houses with care there, no chinks to accept the cold. Great fireplaces whose very sight warms a home. Huge basements to accommodate great heating plants. Vast living rooms where a tree could be 12 feet tall, and was in 1932.

Rooms full of family and friends, arms about each other in the fine glow of a great and prosperous Christmas time. And now, long strings of electric lights to decorate the massive tree.

Outside, the storm-whipped waves pounded the beach. Huge icicles hung from the eaves. Green wreaths in great red bows for each door and each window. A telephone constantly jingling with messages from people who remembered.

AND A Christmas in St. Paul, where a family was struggling back to economic stability. A father struggling with a new occupation, a sister dropping from school to become a telephone operator and a son with two newspaper routes.

In the living room on Christmas morning, the greatest present of a lifetime . . . a bicycle!

* * * *

ONE REMEMBERS a Christmas season at the police station in Long Beach, and a reporter whiling away a dull night with small talk in the detective bureau. One remembers a detective entering and beckoning.

"I think you might be interested in this," he said, handing over a memorandum.

Charles Beatty, the best-known Santa Claus of Long Beach in a generation, was alone, broke and dying in a modest downtown hotel room. One remembers the story.

Most of all, though, one remembers the next morning, when hundreds of people crowded American Avenue to see the Santa Clause they had known as a child. Grown women were in tears. The children clutching them carried little gifts.

A whole city played Santa Claus to Charles Beatty. He was taken to a hospital, operated upon and given five more years of life.

Santa Claus could not die on Christmas Eve!

* * * *

cheslav M. Molotov, both foreign ministers under Stalin. Zorin is a specialist in European affairs, was ambassador to Czechoslovakia in 1945-48 and engineered the Communist coup there in February, 1948.

Zorin then spent seven years in the Soviet Foreign Office as a deputy foreign minister before going to West Germany as ambassador. In 1956 he resumed the status of deputy foreign minister.

In 1960 he became permanent Soviet representative on the U. N. Security Council. Occasionally he represented the Soviet Union at the U. N. Disarmament Commission.

A Chinese linguist, he was head of the Foreign Ministry Far Eastern department 1952-55. In 1955-56 he served as a deputy foreign minister and was head of the Academy of Sciences' Institute of Chinese Studies until his assignment to Japan in 1958.

Fedorenko was a member of the Soviet negotiating team during the first Soviet-Japanese negotiations in 1956 on fishing in Far Eastern waters. The same year, he attended talks on normalization of relations with Japan.

He also was involved in negotiations with the Chinese and Indian governments in 1957.

Fedorenko is the author of two books on Chinese literature.

'VEXATIOUS LITIGANT'

British Court Orders Man Stop Filing Foolish Suits

LONDON (UPI)—The high court has branded Michael R. MacCarthy, a deaf mute who lives in a Salvation Army hotel, a "vexatious litigant" and ordered him to stop filing foolish lawsuits.

The court ruled that in the future MacCarthy will have to get a judge's permission before he files suit against anyone.

In the past 2½ years, MacCarthy has filed lawsuits seeking more than $150 million in damages. He's never won a penny.

* * * *

MOST OF the suits involved MacCarthy's registration as a physically handicapped person. The sums he has sought included:

—About 11 million from the London County Council.

—More than $3 million from the Hampstead Council.

—$14 million from the National Assistance Board.

—More than $10 million from the British attorney general.

* * * *

WHEN MacCarthy heard that the government planned to stop his suits, he promptly sued the attorney general for another $126 million for infringing his rights.

Attached to this writ was a note, "Here is another. May the best horse win."

Soviet Satellite Possible Astronaut Trail-Blazer

MOSCOW (UPI)—The Soviet Union Saturday sent up the 12th scientific satellite in its "Cosmos" series, touching off speculation that another manned flight might follow in the near future.

Radio Moscow said Cosmos XII's equipment was functioning normally. The satellite is recording information in space and transmitting the data to earth.

Informed observers here said the new launching might herald an impeding new Soviet manned shot into space.

There was no Soviet comment available on the speculation.

THE WEEK IN REVIEW

After 2 Years, JFK Found the Presidency a Tough Job

By HARRY SHARPE
United Press International

President Kennedy last week gave the United States an uncommonly candid report on his first two years in office.

He frankly admitted at the outset of an unprecedented, nationwide radio and television interview that as an eager-beaver campaigner he had underestimated the problems and responsibilities of being President.

* * * *

THEN HE ticked off most of those problems, topped by the fateful struggle with communism and the frightening decisions which he alone, as President, has had to make.

He did not believe, for example, that his world-shaking solution of the Cuban crisis had opened the door to early accords with Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev. There was no doubt, he said, that Khrushchev got the full import of his message that the United States would fight even a nuclear war when its interests are jeopardized.

But while Khrushchev might now be more amenable on Berlin and other cold war issues, the President said, "Mr. Khrushchev does not wish us well, unfortunately. His goal of a communized world remains unchanged."

* * * *

IN ADDITION, Mr. Kennedy said, Red China, which has split ideologically with Russia, remains a major danger because it would impose communism through war, rather than on Khrushchev's peaceful coexistence terms.

The President warned that at all times the United States and the free world must remain acutely aware of the communist danger.

To that end, he and British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan met in Nassau, the Bahamas, for three days and hammered out a tough new nuclear deterrent policy which France, a budding nuclear power, was invited to join.

* * * *

IF FULFILLED, the policy could end the nightmare of too many atomic powers within the NATO defense alliance and also give Khrushchev more qualms about Allied retaliatory strength.

Under the agreement, the United States and Britain will assign nuclear bombers now and Polaris missile submarines later to a combined nuclear force within NATO. France could do likewise if President Charles De Gaulle abandoned his boycott of NATO which is based on his determination to have an independent nuclear defense.

The President and Prime Minister also discussed The Congo crisis in which rich Katanga province insists on remaining independent from the Central Congo government. The President sent a military mission to the turbulent area to support the United Nations' peace efforts and keep a sharp eye on Russian maneuvering.

* * * *

IN HIS radio-TV interview the President touched only briefly on domestic issues. He foresaw troubles with the new Congress, and particularly the conservative-dominated House Rules Committee, over New Frontier programs such as tax cuts and reforms, aid to education, spending, and medical care for the aged.

As to press attacks on his administration, he said it was not pleasant to read disagreeable things but that the newspapers were an invaluable arm of the presidency.

He said they gave him a way to check things going on, and finally, that there was a big advantage—not available in Russia—in having "the abrasive quality of the press applied to you daily."

* * * *

HE ADDED that "there isn't any doubt that we could not do the job at all in a free society without a very, very active press."

Late Friday, an agreement was reached to release from Cuban prisons the 1,113 men taken as prisoners in the abortive Bay of Pigs invasion of April 1961. The prisoners were expected to begin arriving in this country today. They will be freed in exchange for food and medical supplies as ransom to go to Cuban Premier Castro.

In other news a federal court jury in Washington, D.C., found the Communist Party of the United States guilty of a criminal charge of failing to register as an agent of the Soviet Union. A $120,000 fine was stayed pending an appeal. Party leaders will be tried soon on similar charges.

Jane's of London said the U. S., despite a late start in the space race, was overwhelming Russia in the number and variety of satellites being orbited for peaceful or military purposes.

The United States recognized Yemen's revolutionary government which last September ousted King Mohammed al-Badr a week after he succeeded his father on the throne.

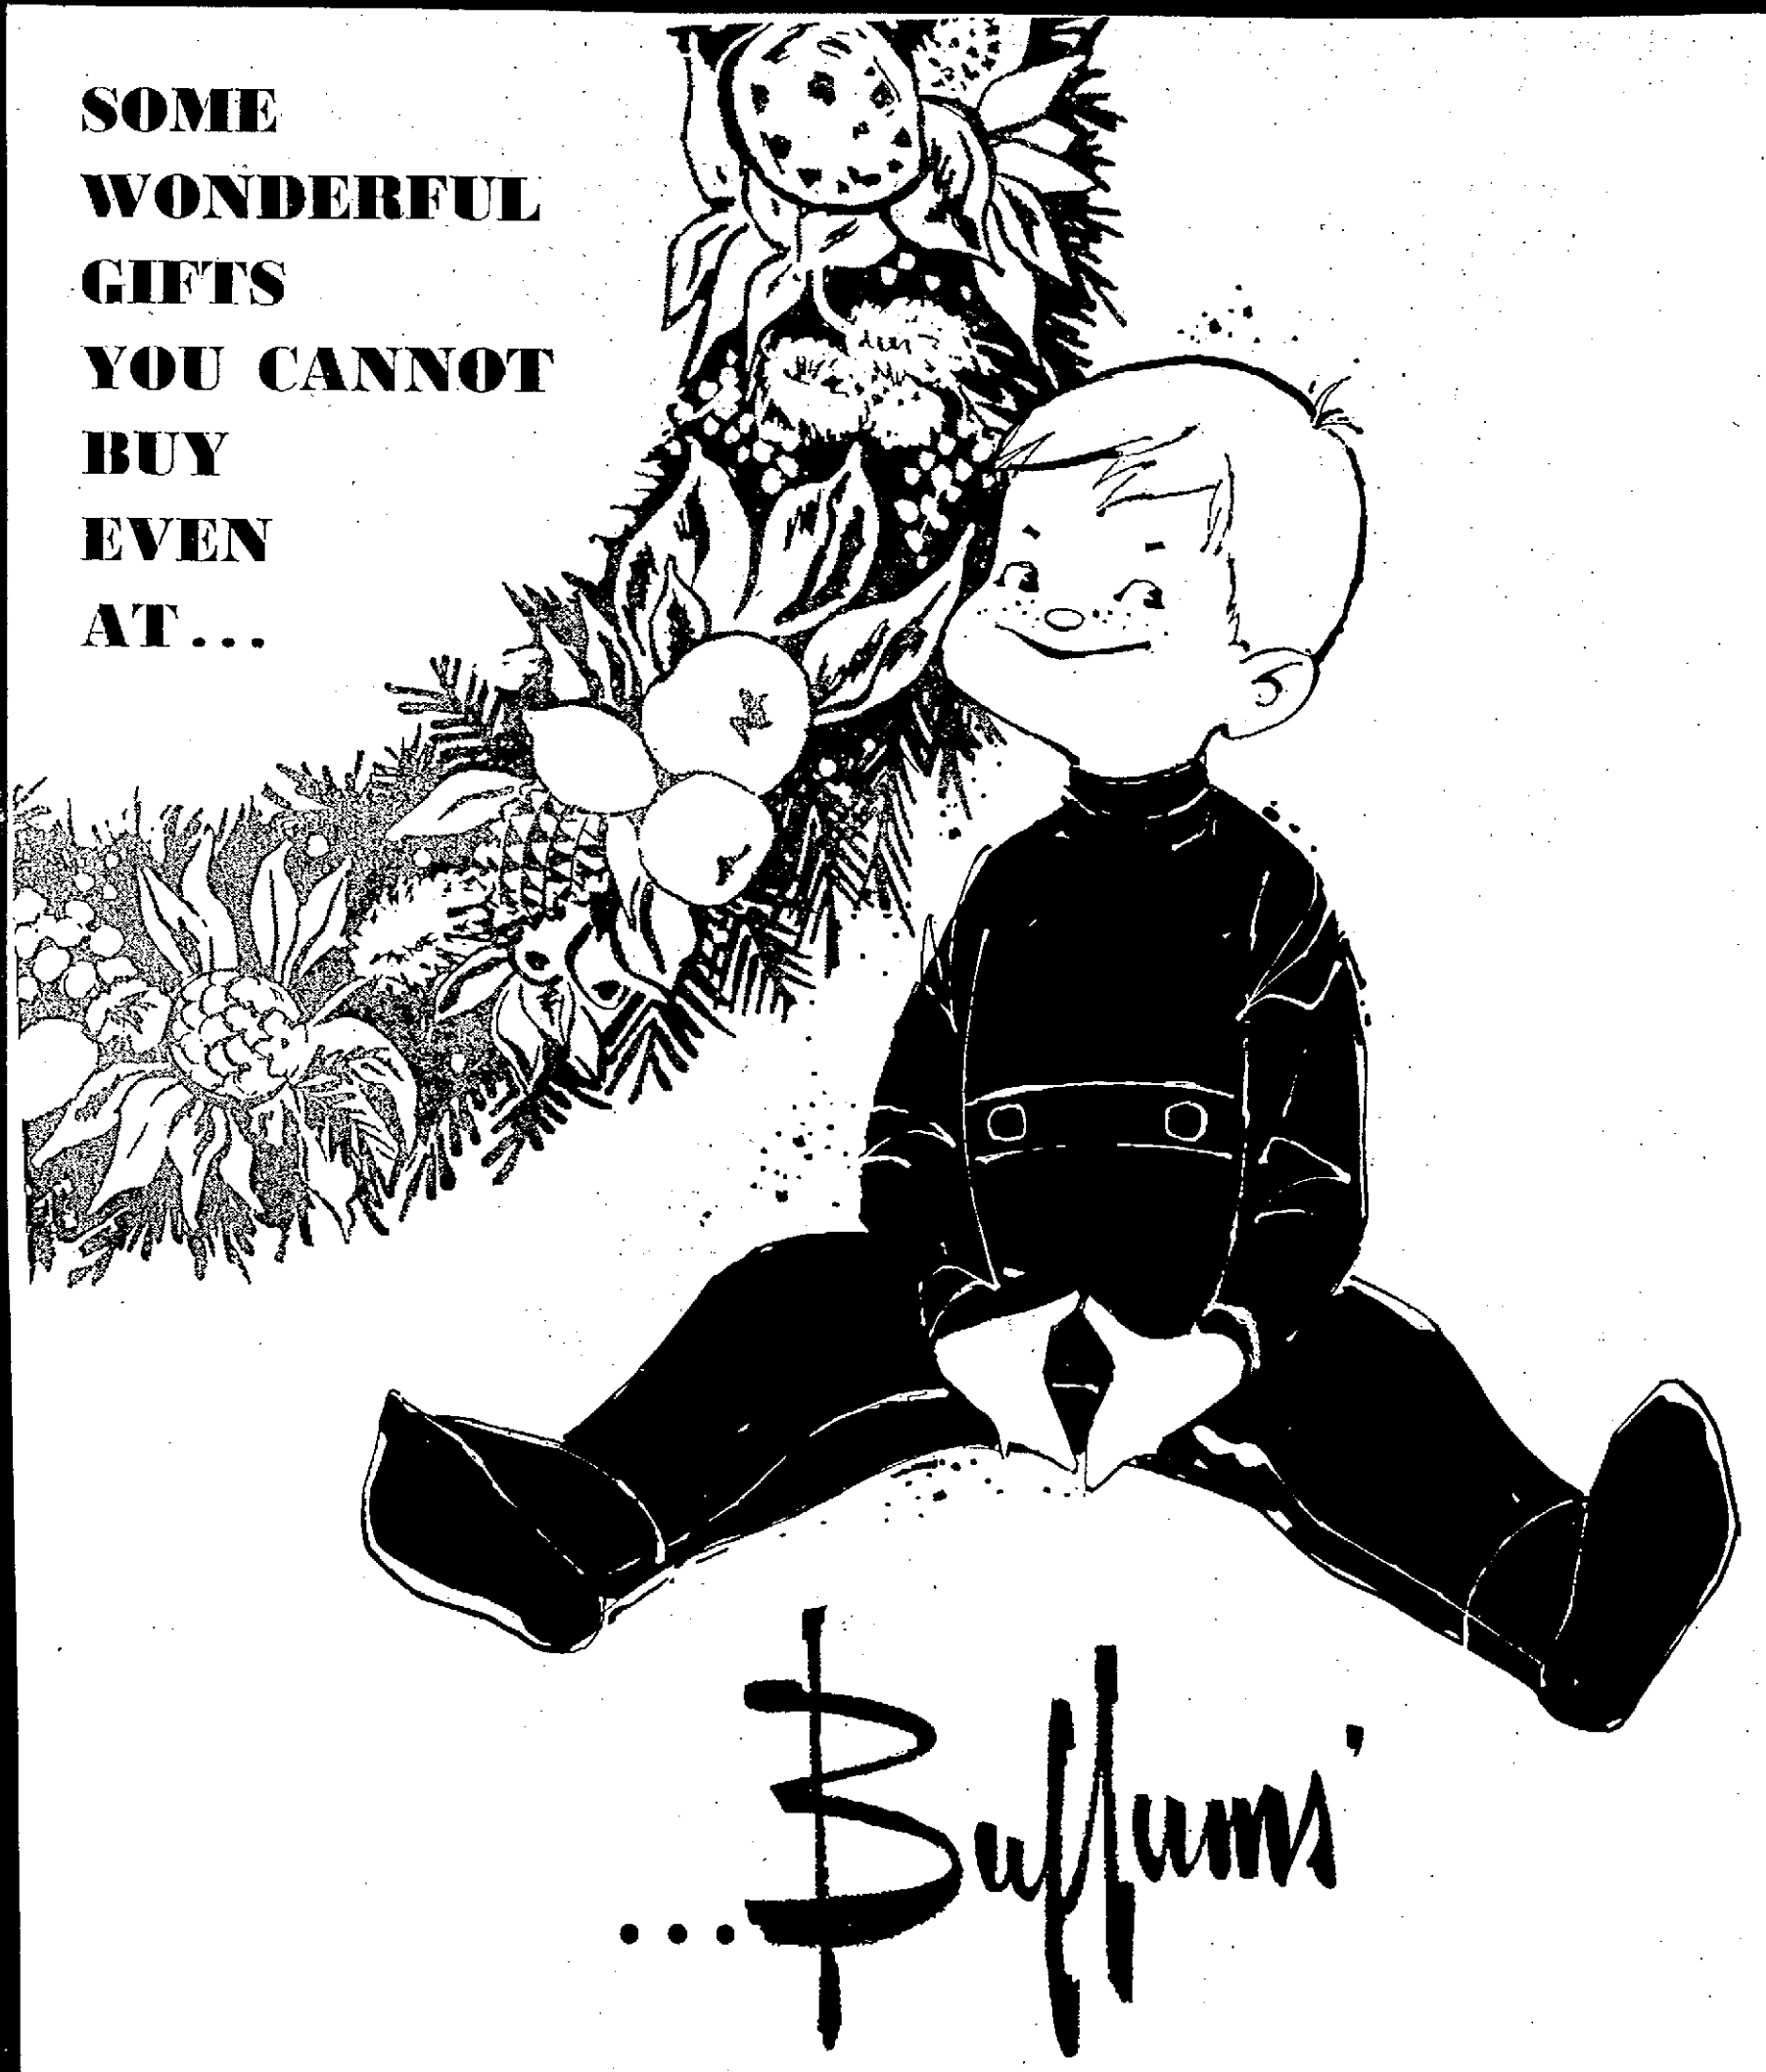

The Mona Lisa, one of the world's most famous paintings, arrived in Washington from France for public display starting Jan. 8. U. S. Secret Service agents were detailed to guard the priceless masterpiece around the clock.

LONG BEACH, PINE AT BROADWAY — SANTA ANA, MAIN AT TENTH — TOP OF THE MALL, POMONA — LONG BEACH, MARINA SPORTSWEAR

THE MOST unseasonable allergy imaginable is reluctantly owned by Kathy Hodgson, 10-year-old daughter of the Bryan Hodgsons.

Kathy is allergic to Christmas trees.

Her dad proudly brought home a nice one, quickly removed it to the back yard when the little gal began sneezing and weeping.

An aluminum tree now graces the Hodgson fireside and Kathy, happily, is not allergic to that.

THE PLAINTIVE cry of a little boy rings through this Christmas story, told to this dept. by a Long Beach teacher.

She asked the pupils in the third grade of a school in an area of modest homes to write their Christmas thoughts for themselves, their family and the world in general.

One little boy wrote:

For himself, enough to eat.

For his family, happiness.

On the larger issue: "The world is so big and God is so far away."

---

IF YOU feel you should do something else that is big and worthy for Christmas, how about giving some blood.

Because accidents, unfortunately, are commonplace in the holiday season, the drain on the Red Cross blood bank is unusually heavy.

The bank is short now, and special blood donation periods have been set up. One is for today, Sunday, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Others: Monday, Dec. 24, 1 to 5 p.m., and Dec. 31, 1 to 5 p.m.

The Red Cross is located at 319 W. Broadway, Long Beach.

SOME time ago I moaned in this pillar about a home problem—the invasion of my ivy patch by grass—vigorous, long-rooted, tall-stemmed, determined, stubborn grass.

I thought that the comment might provoke some suggestions and some people really tried, one way or another. A chemical expert came out at my invitation. I wasn't there and, he simply looked things over and left his card.

Meanwhile, the neighbors are getting more restless and my wife has been pointing out that holiday visitors might look aghast at the condition of our front yard.

A couple of neighbor boys came by and, on the offer of a little Christmas money, agreed to do some pulling just to make it look a little better.

From an open window, I heard them conversing. Said one:

"I've been pulling a lot of grass and weeds around this neighborhood. I think I'll retire at 15."

MISSING from the local scene this Christmas is a personality who came to represent the very spirit of Christmas to hundreds of people of the area.

Jimmie McGarrigle, the town's unofficial (or maybe I should say official) Santa Claus for a quarter of a century or so, is gone. Jim died between Christmases, and his chubby figure in a red suit, his rollicking Irish tenor, his rolling ho-ho-ho must be helping make it a jolly season Over There as he did for us here for so long a time.

Jimmie was not only a good Santa Claus at the Yuletide, but he acted in the true Christmas spirit throughout the year. His memory is an inspiration.

BODY TEMPERATURE OF 41 F. CALLED IDEAL

Hibernation for Space Crews Probed

By BEN ZINSER
Medical-Science Editor

After the moon, man plans to reach for the stars—and medical scientists already are planning how to cope with the hazards of outer space.

At North American Aviation's Torrance facility, Dr. Gerald S. Linder, consultant in life sciences and aerospace medicine, says researchers there are studying two major problems: radiation protection and fatigue.

Scientists already have determined that, in animals, lowering the body temperature and administering certain drugs give protection against radiation.

Researchers would like to find ways to "deep-freeze" space crews. Not only would this artificial hibernation protect against cosmic radiation but it also would "effect great economy," Dr. Linder points out.

Since "frozen sleep" reduces metabolism, space crews would require little food, water and oxygen. Waste-disposal problems would be reduced.

There also would be a psychological advantage. A state of suspended animation would eliminate anxiety and depression.

Another plus would be the body's ability to tolerate greater G (gravity) forces.

Scientists think 41 degrees F.—only nine degrees above freezing—would be an ideal temperature for artificial hibernation in space. This is much colder than the whole-body cooling temperatures used in present-day heart and brain surgery. Today's surgeons ordinarily use temperatures ranging from 86 to 82 degrees F.

Dr. Linder says a drawback to the deep-freeze technique is that blood tends to sludge when it is cooled. If sludging occurs, blood vessels can be plugged to deny oxygen to tissue. Oxygen-starved tissue dies.

Researchers are hoping that sludging can be prevented by administering certain chemicals.

Sludging studies now are in progress at North American Aviation. Surgical equipment is being used to perfuse cooled blood through rabbits.

The Southland researchers also are taking a new look at actual hibernation — that of animals such as hamsters and woodchucks.

These animals, Dr. Linder says, no longer hibernate when their "hibernation glands" are removed. The glands are technically known as brown fat bodies. Main area for these bodies is the limb pits.

Dr. Linder estimates that a crew for long-duration flights to planets will consist of six to 10 persons. Since it may not be possible for all to be in deep-freeze at the same time, there will be the problem of fatigue for those manning the spaceship.

Scientists are hoping that special drugs can prevent fatigue. Antifatigue drugs now are being tested.

Seal Beach Becomes Art Center

By KEN KNIGHT

SEAL BEACH—Once famed only for a poker palace that made headlines, this city is now rapidly becoming a mecca for artists.

Instead of trying to draw to a straight or a royal flush, members of the Artists' League of Seal Beach are busy producing art works that are drawing national attention to the community and the group.

First organized in 1957 with 15 members, the Artists' League now has a membership of more than 200 persons from as far north as Carpenteria and as far south as San Diego.

* * * *

INSTEAD OF MEETING in the Seal Beach Youth Center as it first did, the organization now has its own Art Center, at Ocean Avenue and Main Street, where the works of the members are displayed.

The group now sponsors 12 classes a week with instruction in many different art medias.

"Some of our classes have an enrollment of more than 30 persons and seem to be growing all the time," said Pat Jones, organizer of the group and now managing director of the Artists' League.

"You know a group like this doesn't just happen. You have to work, and that's what we've been doing.

* * * *

"WE HAVE NINE art shows a year displaying the works of our members. This (Mrs. Jones pointed to paintings on the walls) is our pre-Christmas show."

In addition the league annually produces the largest mosaic show held in the United States.

This year, the fourth annual mosaic show will be held for a month beginning Jan. 12.

* * * *

"WE SHOULD HAVE some truly outstanding exhibits since last year our members took the first three awards at the famous mosaic show at Wichita, Kan.," Mrs. Jones said.

The Artists' League also has been the subject of an article in the nationally circulated American Artists' magazine.

"Our members represent almost every occupation and some of them travel a long way to get the professional instruction that can be obtained here," Mrs. Jones continued.

"The members, who range in age from six to 92 years, realize one thing: art is a challenge and an exciting thing."

INSTRUCTOR Glenn Jones gives critique of work of Dawn McGill, 12102 Volunteer Ave., Norwalk, at Artist League session.

DIRECTOR Pat Jones has keen eye for art progress.

CD Gets Six Water Purifiers

By GEORGE WEEKS

Six portable water-distillation units for use in emergency have been added to Long Beach civil defense resources.

The Municipal Water Department received the self-powered distilling plants, formerly used by the Navy, through arrangements with federal, state and city CD officials.

Brennan S. Thomas, general manager of the department, said city personnel will be trained to operate the units shortly after the first of the year. The Board of Water Commissioners appropriated $3,000 to pay delivery costs.

* * * *

THE DISTILLERIES are designed to convert salt water or brackish water into water safe for drinking.

The six units have a total capacity of about 12,000 gallons daily. Although this is a trifle compared with normal water consumption, CD officials noted it is enough to sustain life for almost 50,000 persons under emergency rations of one quart a day.

In another move toward civilian preparedness, the City Civil Defense Department announced that 10 new classes in the medical self-help training program will be formed next month.

The 16-hour course is given in two-hour periods, one each week. Enrollees are trained to care for their own health needs in time of disaster when professional medical aid may not be available for periods ranging from hours to weeks. All lessons are illustrated with color film strips.

Since the program was initiated here more than 2,500 persons have enrolled, according to Evar Peterson, assistant city CD director.

* * * *

REGISTRATIONS for the new classes are being accepted at the civil defense office in the city hall and the training center at 5373 E. Second St. Each class is limited to 25 persons.

Starting dates, schedules and meeting places for the new classes are:

Jan. 7, 1:30 p.m. Mondays, CD Training Center on Second Street.

Jan. 9, 7:30 p.m., Wednesdays, Lindbergh School.

Jan. 14, 7:30 p.m. Mondays, Pan American Park Recreation Hall.

Jan. 16, 7:30 p.m. Wednesdays, CD Training Center.

Jan. 16, 7:30 p.m. Wednesdays, Wilson High School.

Jan. 21, 7:30 p.m. Mondays, Wilson High School.

Jan. 21, 1:30 p.m. Mondays, Alamitos Branch Library.

Jan. 22, 7:30 p.m. Tuesdays, Municipal Health Center.

Jan. 25, 1:30 p.m. Fridays, Pan American Park Recreation Hall.

Jan. 29, 7:30 p.m. Tuesdays, Marshall School.

2nd Well in Park UnderWay

It will be impossible to estimate the extent of oil production in Recreation Park until several more wells are drilled, City Manager John R. Mansell has told city councilmen.

Drilling of a second well is under way and is scheduled for completion within a month.

Meanwhile the first well has been curtailed to 200 barrels per day "until additional information can be obtained on the reservoir," Mansell reported.

The second well will be bottomed 1,400 feet southeast of the first, which was completed Dec. 11 at a depth of 8,300 feet almost directly under the 18-hole golf course clubhouse.

Oil technicians believe the newly tapped pool is separated from the Seal Beach field by a fault or some other pressure barrier. Production appears to be separated from both the Richfield well to the northwest and the Alamitos Heights area to the east.

High gravities reported from the first well are regarded as encouraging, while the high ratio of gas to oil, unusual in the area, is "somewhat disappointing," Mansell said.

Post Office to Give Full Service Monday

Windows of the Long Beach Post Office and its branches are closed today, but regular deliveries of mail will be made today and Monday, according to Postmaster David Selcer.

LBSC Will Offer Challenging Honors Program for 'Talented'

An honors program designed "to challenge the academically talented" will start next fall at Long Beach State College.

Limited to 5 per cent of the college's entering freshmen next September, the program will be extended to other classes as the first group advances.

Dean of the College Raymond E. Lindgren described the program as "a broad pattern of general education which stresses the relationship among the humanities, social sciences and natural sciences."

The courses will cut across departmental boundaries with the honor students doing more independent work than their classmates, Lindgren said.

The program was developed by a committee headed by Dr. Suzanne M. Wilson, associate professor of English.

Sixty students will be admitted in 1963. Qualified freshmen will be invited to enter but will not be required to do so.

The 1963 honors freshmen will enroll in a seminar called "The Changing Image of Western Man." Honors sophomores will take a similar course on Eastern culture.

By the junior year, the honors students will study such problems as motivation, conformity and automation. They also will be given research experience under close faculty supervision.

The honors seniors will complete a thesis based on original research and take comprehensive examinations.

Science courses will cover a broader range of subject matter than traditional courses.

Committee members say the honors program is expected to attract a greater number of top students to Long Beach State and to "stimulate intellectual life" at the campus.

His Home City Was a Career for William F. Prisk

WILLIAM FREDERICK PRISK was appropriately called "Mr. Long Beach," for in the career which ended with his death Friday at 92 he did more than any other one man to promote the welfare and development of this community.

He could as appropriately be called "Mr. Christmas" because Christmas, with all of its true meaning in terms of warmth and generosity and good will was the highlight of each year for him. And these things, indeed, were his own basic characteristics.

In the last days, as he clung to the frail thread of life, he determinedly carried out his personal and traditional Christmas program — scores of letters to friends and long-time associates, contributions to the needy, a wide distribution of gifts. To those who knew him, it is significant that this was his final labor, and that he completed it before the end came.

FROM HUMBLE beginnings in the Mother Lode town of Grass Valley — he was 10 when he began carrying a local paper, 19 when he became a full-fledged publisher there—Mr. Prisk went on to a career that made him one of California's outstanding citizens as a successful publisher and editor and community builder. His was an inspiring success story.

He came to Long Beach in 1910 upon acquiring the Long Beach Press and from that time on was recognized leader in the business, educational, cultural and religious life of this community. Many of the city's finest facilities, now benefitting tens of thousands who came here after his retirement in 1952 and knew him only as a name, are directly attributable to his foresight and leadership.

In the early years, for example, he became a vigorous champion of harbor development. The local port was then little more than a tide flat. He was one of two men sent to Washington about 1912 to enlist federal support. For nearly 40 years he used the columns of his newspaper to build support for the harbor and he lived to see the one-time tide flat transformed into one of the world's most active ports and a base for the United States Navy.

Public schools received the strong support of Mr. W. F. throughout his entire active life. As the seaside village of 1910 grew into a metropolitan city it became difficult to provide adequate facilities for growing needs of the schools. He fought for years for modern schools and sound educational programs and it was fitting that a school here was named in his honor while he still lived.

He was an ardent supporter of religious life here, regardless of creed. He recognized the need of spiritual life in this fast-growing community and used his newspaper to further it.

MR. W. F. was a man of rare vision. Carson Taylor, publisher of the Manila Times, has told how he and Mr. Prisk stood atop Signal Hill in 1920 and the Long Beach publisher, with a sweeping arm gesture in the general direction of Lakewood, remarked: "Some day you will see one million persons living within the range of our vision." Mr. Prisk lived to see this prophecy fulfilled.

Because he was so sure of this great growth, he fought hard for the things a great population would need. For instance, he was one of the strongest supporters of the Metropolitan Water District plan when it became an issue of heated controversy. It was largely because of his efforts that Long Beach was one of the original 13 cities in the great project which has provided the life blood for Southern California's fabulous development.

H. F. (HANK) Burmester, long associated with Mr. W. F. in the newspaper business and for many years his executive editor, has given us this vignette:

"Perhaps the outstanding characteristic of Mr. Prisk was his unswerving loyalty to his friends or to any cause he felt to be right. It mattered not to him if a good public servant had temporarily lost popularity. W. F. would back him more vigorously than ever, saying, 'He has been an honest, capable public servant and deserves our support.' W. F. didn't play for likely winners but always sought capable men for public office.

"His charities were many and his contributions were given without ostentation. Only W. F. knew the extent of the broad field of his help for the needy, the sick, the unfortunate and the long list of welfare organizations.

"To sum it up: He was a man of high intelligence, intense loyalty, and the courage to champion the right as he saw it. He had a tear of sympathy for the unfortunate and open purse for projects he deemed worth while. He was devoted to his family, loyal to his friends, and had an abiding faith and affection for his home city. He was molded in the Master's finest pattern. He was a real man."

Manipulation of TV Joins Weapons in JFK'S Arsenal

WASHINGTON — Republicans and Democrats have begun to quarrel over whether "equal time" should be granted for a rebuttal to President Kennedy's interview on radio and television last Monday night.

The Republican National Committee is planning to ask for similar privileges on the air, but hasn't quite made up its mind who the actors in the show would be. Rep. E. Celler of New York, Democrat, has urged the networks to refuse "categorically" any requests for "equal time," as he says it would "set a most dangerous precedent." Besides, he argues, Mr. Kennedy is not a political candidate.

LAWRENCE

Technically, of course, the 1964 political campaign has not started and there are no formal candidates, but actually the campaign is already under way.

President Kennedy really has begun to campaign actively for reelection. Almost every move he makes nowadays is based on its possible impact on the voters during the next 22 months. Every opportunity for publicity is sought. The latest example is the unprecedented interview on radio and television over all three major networks for a full hour last Monday night. The President could have given every bit of this information at a regular news conference, but it wouldn't have been dramatic enough nor subject to previous editing.

Mr. Kennedy evidently felt sure that the newspapers would use the interview rather fully, anyway, so it would also get wide publication in the press.

* * * *

THE BIGGEST advantage of all to Mr. Kennedy, however, is that he manages by this method to prevent any rebuttal on the same night that he gets full coverage of his views over the television networks. It it not like the "great debates" of the last presidential campaign, when the opposite candidate was at least given a chance to answer point by point.

All the provisions of federal law about "equal time" with reference to television and radio programs that concern speeches by major candidates in politics seem to have become meaningless under the new procedure. The President can always argue that his speeches are not political, though almost everything he said in the broadcast on Monday, for example, had to do with major political subjects which are current issues before the country.

The arrangements made by the three networks for the President's interview precluded any opposition speaker following closely on the President's remarks. It is said they did try to invite national personalities to talk but there was no way by which the latter would prepare themselves for rebuttal the same evening, though the President himself had 24 hours in which he could change the transcript in whatever way he pleased.

The manipulation of news now is an administration policy, and the manipulation of network facilities has become a valuable instrument in the "arsenal of weapons" on the political battlefront. Almost everyone who knows anything about politics is aware that what is said during a campaign is only half the battle, and that a substantial number of votes have already been won or lost by what is said or done prior to the actual beginning of a campaign.

* * * *

A ONE-SIDED presentation of what the government is doing appeals to some politicians as fair, but the people resent the obvious use of public office for political purposes. The newspapers have a circulation of nearly 60 million copies, and these reach an even larger number of individuals in the homes. The number of homes with television sets is around 47 million, but not everybody stays home for every program. Yet those who miss a President's utterances on the air can generally get a copy of a newspaper and read about them there.

So the President is certainly an astute press agent in his own behalf in giving the television network a special program which they can advertise in advance.

What's more important is whether this sort of thing can become a "brainwashing" operation through which the people are led to form impressions based on incomplete and inadequate presentation of controversial subjects. Opponents have virtually no chance to refute presidential statements.

* * * *

IN THE SOVIET Union such things are handled by forbidding all counter-comment or criticism of the top executive. If there is criticism at all, it's usually at a later date, long after the initial speech. Maybe that's going to be the net effect in America, where the networks are under direct government supervision and control. The broadcasters usually try to maintain independence, but many nevertheless find it desirable to play ball with the administration in power. That's why the newspapers become the last available source for the prompt and continuous presentation of both sides of controversial questions in a comprehensive manner in their news pages.

BOB HOUSER

Kern County's Quick Results Prove Value of Vote Device

PROBABLY ASSEMBLYMAN Bill Grant's last official chore as a Long Beach legislator was the chairing of a hearing by the Assembly Elections and Reapportionment Committee Friday in Los Angeles. Bill retires with the start of the new legislative session Jan. 7.

HOUSER

This duty involved a symbolic passing of the baton in one of California's critical marathon relays—voting procedure. For the first time in many years, there is a happy conjunction of both the means and the temper to get something done about our slow count elections. It is almost inconceivable that meaningful remedies will not be legislated in the new session.

Among the bright prospects in terms of speed is the Coleman electronic vote tally machine, an $800,000 smartie which wrought a California phenomenon last Nov. 6 in Kern County.

I called on Kern officials last week in Bakersfield to collect their appraisals and afterthoughts. Carlyle D. Millar, county executive officer, and Vera K. Gibson, county clerk, were enthusiastic and impressed by the machine's test. So were editors and reporters at the newspaper, the Bakersfield Californian.

KERN VOTERS had a dramatic comparison. Their June 5 primary vote, counted under traditional manual method, took 24 hours. The Coleman counter did the Nov. 6 job in less than nine hours.

Millar and Miss Gibson noted that arrangements for the test in Kern County were made on a last minute basis. For example, there was not time enough to consolidate the county's 619 precincts as would be done in regular use of the machine. They say that proper preparation could have lopped three more hours off the tally time.

Coleman provided the machine installation free for the test. Kern saved $20,000 in the one exercise. With precinct consolidation and other refinements, annual savings would approach $50,000. Kern, needing only one $800,000 system, could pay for it in 15 years out of savings. The county has an option, to April 15, to decide on purchase. Only deterrent is the question of a 12 to 13-cent increase in the tax levy which county supervisors must weigh.

LOS ANGELES COUNTY Registrar of Voters Benjamin S. Hite is also impressed with the tally device. In fact, this county pioneered and paid for first-phase development of the counter and has a prototype installed. But we would need 10 of the systems for the county's big vote.

How would communities such as Long Beach or its 32nd Congressional District and two Assembly districts, 39th and 44th, be able to get results for publication the morning after election day?

The Independent, Press-Telegram does its own count now using special crews and adding machines at the county building here before shipping the ballots to the registrar. Otherwise, news of local performance by our voters would have to wait a day or two for word.

HITE AND COLEMAN officials say the problem of providing newspapers with their area results is a fairly simple one. The big counting brain would merely be fed a programmed tape instructing it to spit out results for our 865 precincts. Officials calculate this procedure could do at least as well as our manual count which gives us perhaps a 30 per cent reading at the midnight or 1 a.m. deadline time. The machine reading would be much more accurate and the complete results would thereafter be only a matter of hours in coming instead of the days' wait we now suffer.

Man Should Be Free to Join or Not Join

Re: Bill Webster's letter: Bill, I worked for a non-union shop at one time. The company was wonderful to its workers because they wanted to be and not because they were forced to by some union. Then, like a bad dream, it happened. The unions forced themselves in shops all over the country. I joined the union because I had to in order to work and feed my family.

When I was first married I made eleven dollars a week and we lived good.

It reminds me of Hitler when he told his people to do something, or else. I say let those join the union who want to. But let the people that want to feel like free Americans work on any job they wish to without being forced to join a union.

Breakwater Freeway Proposed

EDITOR:

Since the California Highway Department and our City Commissioners are deadlocked with reference to the proposed freeway cutting up our fair city, I have the following suggestions to make to break this deadlock:

Extend the Long Beach Freeway to Pier J and then connect it with the mainland in the vicinity of Seal Beach by having the freeway follow the Long Beach breakwater.

This would give the cities to the south of us real rapid transit and it would also be an asset to the Long Beach Harbor as well as the coming World's Fair. If the Highway Department claims that it would cost too much, perhaps tideland oil would throw in a few bucks.

Answers Letter on Socialized Medicine

EDITOR:

Mr. H. Walters' defense of socialized medicine and plug for the variety forced on people in England and New Zealand is familiar propaganda spouted by Socialists all over the world. No doubt if Mr. Walter had visited Russia instead of England and New Zealand he would also have had nothing but the finest to say of their system of medicine.

If Mr. Walter truly believes socialized medicine to be better than the free market kind, then why doesn't he go into a voluntary system where only those that believe in this sort of thing are charged for it. In this way he and his political supporters can prove beyond all reasonable doubt their system is better than free market medicine and we would all be anxious to join him.

On the other hand if Mr. Walter wants socialized medicine and is unwilling to pay for the free market medicine, he may use the facilities provided by the counties in California. I realize most Socialists I have talked to concerning this matter always bring up the point that the county hospital is "charity" and they will not accept charity. Well, perhaps not just now, but I suspect what the Socialists really want is to force all of us to accept the same kind of charity they do piously abstain from using as long as its users are in a minority. However, I should like to point out that any socialized scheme of medicine will be financed from the same source of money the county hospital now derives its operating expenses.

How about it, America; do you wish to be forced into accepting a type of charity for your medical needs, similar to those provided by county hospitals now, or would you rather pay for the first rate, efficient medicine we are all capable of paying for, at least most of the time?

Lumber Bloc Seeks Bigger Forest Cuts

SEATTLE—As I traveled between Seattle and Portland the other day, I saw trucks laden with huge piles of evergreen carrying Christmas trees to the firesides of the nation. And alongside the highway I could see scars in the hillsides where the latest batch of trees had been cut from the forests.

PEARSON

This annual Christmas-tree harvest does not materially affect the forest reserves of the nation. It's a drop in the bucket compared with our annual timber cut. But in Chicago last summer there was held a secret meeting at which was launched a campaign to get a much heavier cut from the national forests for the private lumbermen.

The meeting, held at the Water Tower Inn, was attended by the representatives of the biggest lumber companies of the nation, ranging from B. L. Orell, vice president of the giant Weyerhauser firm in Washington State, to E. C. Rettig of Potlach Lumber in Idaho, and Walter W. Black of Austin Lumber in South Dakota. Even some of the southern lumbermen—J. F. Muller of Willis, Tex., Ralph S. Taggart of Mississippi, and Warren Biggs of the Alger Sullivan Company in Florida—were there.

At this meeting it was officially decided to put up $145,000 to start a publicity campaign to win a public demand that the 900 billion board feet now preserved by the Department of Agriculture be opened up to further exploitation.

Behind this is the fact that trees grow slowly, and, although the big timber barons have come around to careful reforestation methods, their own timber reserve is not what it used to be. So they have been trying to persuade Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman to further open up the national forests.

HE ALREADY PERMITS a certain amount of careful cutting by private companies. But when it comes to increasing this cut, he has told the Western Pine Association that his obligation is to see that the national forests are managed to "best meet the needs of all the American people."

Those needs require the protection of watersheds which supply water to approximately 2,000 communities, the preservation of grazing land, and the use of the national forests for recreational purposes.

The minutes of the Chicago meeting provide that an organization called "FACTS" shall be set up in county seats in timber areas "so as to identify with the public interest, win the support of elected county officials, as well as doctors, lawyers, teachers, and other professional people with the mill operators participating as interested local citizens with special knowledge of the problem."

The county seat was chosen for this campaign because 80 per cent of the present members of the U.S. Senate reside in county seats; and the drive is to influence Congress to force Secretary of Agriculture Freeman to relax national forest cutting restrictions.

ACCORDING TO THE STRATEGY issued after the Chicago meeting, FACTS will put across its propaganda in "patterned speeches" before "captive" luncheon and dinner audiences. These meetings are to be made to appear nonpartisan by inviting local Democratic and Republican leaders.

So goes the backstage drive to pressure Secretary of Agriculture Freeman into permitting a larger annual cut of the national forests.

Police Warning on 'Missionaries'

Long Beach police have warned citizens about renewed activity of collectors for so-called "missionary armies" and asked all residents to call the Police Department immediately about all such solicitations.

There have been reports of door-to-door collectors of the Western Missionary Army, Inc., in the northern part of the city during the pre-Christmas period.

The operations of this group were reported in a three-part expose by Independent reporter Vint Mader earlier this year.

Insp. C. O. Bennett, head of the police bunco detail, reminded prospective donors that at least 60 per cent of all the money goes directly into the pocket of the collector.

"This does not constitute a legitimate religious function," said Bennett.

The inspector said anyone who is solicited by this group should notify the bunco squad immediately.

The practice of paying collectors a 60-per-cent commission was reported in The Independent's series. It was also covered in testimony before a subsequent hearing by a state legislative committee.

Suicide Plunge

Mrs. Pernell Van Dercar, 58, a resident of the Cooper Arms, 455 E. Ocean Blvd., plunged to her death from her seventh-floor apartment about 7:30 Friday morning.

Sgt. W. T. Robertson said no note was found, but evidence pointed to suicide.

Mrs. Norma Rudolph, manager of a beauty salon operated by Mrs. Van Dercar, said the victim feared she had cancer.

Milton Basham, 66, of 59 Atlantic Ave., who was walking past the building, said he saw Mrs. Van Dercar on a window ledge and telephoned police, but moments later she fell.

Hail City Drivers

Eighty-six operators of Long Beach rubbish and garbage trucks were honored Saturday for driving the cumbersome vehicles the whole year without a traffic accident.

They received laminated cards and congratulations from the Long Beach Safety Council and City Manager John R. Mansell at a 5:30 a.m. breakfast in the sanitation division yard.

In addition, Mansell presented to the division a plaque awarded by the Greater Los Angeles Chapter of the Safety Council for winning first place in the annual regional contest for safe operation of rubbish fleets.

The Long Beach record was 1,245,000 miles driven with only 74 accidents including trivial fender scrapings.

Singled out for special mention were Gerald Melendy, Menecther Mitchell and Jack Roehrich, each of whom has driven rubbish trucks more than 15 years without an accident.

$8,778 in Grants

Seven charitable organizations in Long Beach are being awarded more than $8,778 in grants by the California Community Foundation, the foundation announced Saturday.

Recipients are Long Beach Area Boy Scouts Council, Exceptional Children's Foundation, Goodwill Industries, Long Beach Day Nursery, YMCA, YWCA, and Adelaide Christian Home for Children.

CCF, founded in 1915 and one of the first community foundations organized in the U. S., is distributing more than $4.5 million this year to California charitable institutions.

COSTUME, 'SLEIGH' LIKE FIREMAN'S

Santa Assured 62 Families

Santa Claus will wear a hard hat, a raincoat, and drive a red "sleigh" when he visits 62 Long Beach needy families on Monday.

And every Long Beach fireman and fire-department employe will be riding with him.

Santa's visit climaxes a year-long program sponsored by the Long Beach Firemen's Association to provide toys and food to needy families in this area.

The program, started 12 years ago, is the brainchild of Murray Cohn, the 1962 Long Beach Father of the Year.

Cohn, who is program chairman, said it was obvious that something should be done for the needy children and the suggestion was raised at a firemen's association meeting.

"The idea caught on," he said, "and the first year we raised enough money within the association to care for 23 families. Since then we have provided food and toys for an average of 65 families each year."

This year, to guarantee a certain amount of capital, the more than 400 firemen and civilian employes have donated 25 cents a month each to help pay the expense of buying food. Additional funds are received from the Firemen's Auxiliary and from proceeds of the department's annual July 4 circus and fireworks show.

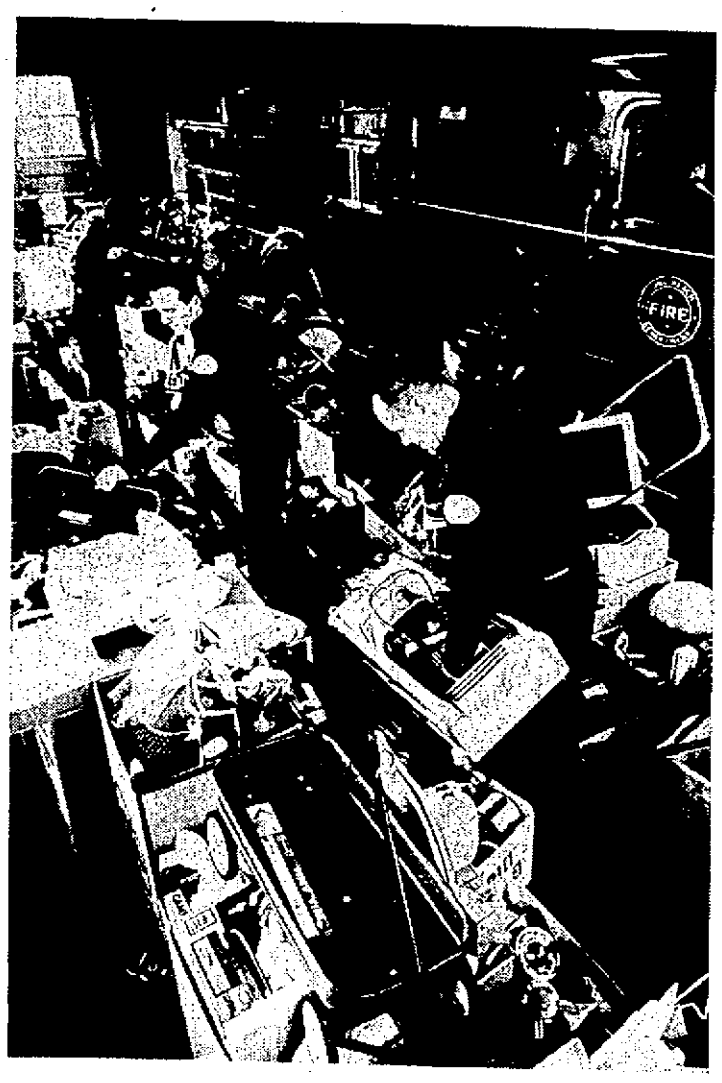

"During the year," Cohn says, "We receive donations of toys and some canned goods."

Many toys require repairs which are done by off-duty firemen. Cohn says that all items purchased, and donated, are kept at Station 22, 6340 Atherton St., where everything eventually is prepared for delivery.

"It's very heartwarming to see the fellows and the women of the auxiliary pitch in and help on this project," Cohn said. "I think they all have a personal satisfaction knowing they are helping someone less fortunate than themselves."

On Monday, more than 50 off-duty firemen will load the toys and baskets of groceries containing everything for a great Christmas dinner into cars and trucks for delivery.

"We don't expect thanks for our work," Cohn said. "We do it because we want to help where we can. We hope our efforts will give a few more people a very Merry Christmas."

BLUE-CLAD 'SANTAS'—From rear, Fireman Tom E. Stewart, Capt. Charles A. Jones, Jack C. Emery, prepare toys for Monday delivery to 62 needy Long Beach families. More than 400 firemen and departmental civilian employes pitched in with cash, time and effort to prepare toy and food baskets, to be delivered Monday by off-duty firemen.

Pre-Holiday Accidents in L.B. Average One Every 36 Minutes

By BILL HUNTER

As the weekend rolled toward Christmas, the preholiday traffic toll in Long Beach rolled upward to an average of one traffic accident every 36 minutes within the city limits.

An 8 p.m. tally turned up these figures:

A total of 14 people were injured in 10 accidents in Long Beach since midnight Friday, and another 36 accidents in the same period caused damage to vehicles, but no injuries. On Friday, there were 14 injury accidents hurting 23 persons.

* * * *

THE TOLL since 1 a.m. Friday: Seventy collisions, causing injuries to 37 persons.

But police pointed out Saturday night that there have been no fatal accidents in the city since the preholiday weekend began—none, in fact, since Dec. 16.

In a freakish accident on the Long Beach Freeway north of Willow Street Saturday afternoon, two women and a man were injured when a driverless car began circling in three northbound lanes—backwards.

* * * *

POLICE SAID Mrs. Patricia Frickey, 37, of 4809 E. Compton Blvd., Compton, pulled to the shoulder of the freeway with car trouble, got out and left the engine running. The auto "jumped" into reverse gear and began running in tight circles through all three lanes.

Mrs. Dora Chatterton, 43, of 4895 Oregon Ave., slowed her car to avoid the circling car, and was hit from behind by a car driven by Albert C. Hoy, 56, of 2792 Southern Ave., South Gate. His wife, Mary, 57, suffered face cuts when her head went through the windshield. Hoy suffered minor injuries.

Before other motorists could stop the still-circling car, it bumped Mrs. Frickey as she stood on the shoulder of the freeway, knocking her to the ground.

* * * *

IN CITIES in the surrounding area, law enforcement officials reported a notable lack of traffic accidents and drunk drivers. Even minor fender scrapes were scarce, they said.

This was in marked contrast to Friday night and early Saturday when four persons died in traffic in San Pedro, Torrance, Redondo Beach and La Habra.

Hahn Warns on Costs of Health Dept.

I. P-T Los Angeles Bureau

If the City of Los Angeles turns its health services over to the county Health Department, it should also turn over its $14-million health building, according to Supervisor Kenneth Hahn.

Otherwise, Hahn asserted, county taxpayers will be forced to build some $15 million worth of new facilities—which would mean a 15-cent increase in the tax rate.

Los Angeles councilmen are pondering transfer of the health functions to the county. Only four Los Angeles County cities — Los Angeles, Long Beach, Pasadena and Vernon—maintain their own health departments.

* * * *

UNDER STATE law, the county must provide health services to any city which asks for them.

Hahn said the proposed Los Angeles transfer will save the city $3.5 million, or 6.8 cents on its tax rate, but will boost the overall county rate by five cents.

Unless the city also turns over its health-department building, the merger will cost money, not save money, Hahn said.

If the "true desire" of the proposed merger is to save the taxpayers money, Hahn said, it can be done best through coöperative city and county efforts in making best use of city health buildings by the county Health Department.

BB Gunners Damage Autos

BB gunners took advantage of Saturday morning fog to make sneak attacks on automobiles parked in North Long Beach.

Virginia G. McCarthy of 300 E. Louise St., Walter Smith of 152 E. Louise St., Dortha S. Prior of 5543 Chestnut Ave. and Frances R. Lowe of 5495 Atlantic Ave. reported damages to police.

In each instance, police said, pellets were fired through car windows.

Prison Term for Violator of Probation

A young man on probation following an armed robbery conviction has been sent to state prison after being found guilty of cashing four bad checks.

Frank Andre Reed, 21, of 813 New York St., was convicted of the robbery charge last March 18 and began two years' probation June 22 after spending 60 days in the county jail.

Arrested Nov. 10 on the bed-check charge, Reed Friday was ruled to be in violation of his probation by Superior Court Judge Maurice C. Sparling and sentenced to state prison for a minimum of one year.

Citizens Protest Use of 'Plastic Pipe' for Gas

Ralph P. McKinley, 3324 Los Coyotes Diagonal, and his neighbors Saturday said they were getting up a petition to the city complaining about the "plastic pipes" used for gas lines in their residential area.

For almost three hours Saturday afternoon, the gas line leading to McKinley's house spewed gas into the neighborhood after a fence contractor struck the line with a shovel.

McKinley said it made a noise "like an old-fashioned steam locomotive" and forced his family out of the house. A fire truck and patrol car hurried to the scene, and a city gas crew repaired the line.

Grand Jury Advises Eased Abortion Law

By DON BRACKENBURY

I. P-T Los Angeles Bureau

More lenient state laws on abortions, prompt improvement of county juvenile facilities and a crackdown on chiselers in veterans' tax exemptions and medical care to the needy are recommended by the 1962 Los Angeles County Grand Jury.

Chairman Verne Orr submitted the jury's final report Friday to Superior Judge Evelle J. Younger.

Noting that California's abortion law has not been updated since 1850, the jury said "many responsible and sincere people" in recent years have reached the conclusion that the existing law is "obsolete, harsh and indifferent to the human sufferings and heartache that are commonly encountered in the great number of cases involving abortions."

* * * *

STATE LAW makes it a felony for a doctor to abort a pregnant woman unless the abortion is necessary to preserve her life.

Jurors pointed to problems arising when pregnancy results from incest or rape and where "sound medical judgment" indicates the child may be born with a serious congenital defect.

The report recommended that an interim joint committee study the need for possible revision. Such a committee has, in fact, just concluded hearings in San Diego.

* * * *

INADEQUATE juvenile facilities were described by the report as "one of the gravest problems facing Los Angeles County." Facilities for girls in the 18 to 21 age group are "woefully inadequate," the report said. Classrooms in the boys' area at Juvenile Hall were labeled "substandard."

Judy investigators checked claims for veterans' tax exemptions and found about 50 per cent were not entitled to exemption and said "in some cases the fraud was flagrant."

The jury recommended that all information relative to veterans' exemptions be included on one sheet and that all the data be filled in by the veteran himself, not the deputy assessor.

* * * *

ON ANOTHER fraud matter, the jury said "some doctors and dentists" have filed fraudulent claims under the medical care program. It asked the county counsel to file and prosecute claims for triple damages against any such violators.

Dangerous fire conditions still exist at Rancho Los Amigos Hospital, Downey, and Olive View Sanitarium and "should be dealt with promptly," the report said.

South Africa Terrorist Acts Charged

By HENRI JONKER

PAARL, South Africa (AP)—A terrorist organization dedicated to "killing the whites" has established itself in South Africa, according to testimony presented at an inquiry into recent race riots here.

The underground movement calls itself "Poqo" — which means "we stand alone." It operates in secret in the segregated African townships which lie outside South Africa's cities and towns. It is carrying on the work of the militant Pan-Africanst Congress, banned in 1960.

These details about Poqo were related to the Supreme Court justice conducting the inquiry into the violence of Nov. 22 when a band of between 100 and 200 Africans stormed into Paarl. The Africans hacked to death two young whites and attempted to storm the police station. Five Africans were killed by police fire and more than 300 arrested.

SOME OF the Africans who testified at the inquiry were brought into a cleared courtroom wearing masks to safeguard them from Poqo revenge. They said Poqo terrorists had killed several Africans in the Paarl location who wouldn't join them or do their bidding. Police said Poqo men who tried to storm the Paarl jail Nov. 22 wanted to liberate comrades arrested after "peaceable Africans" had informed on them.

Poqo's all-male membership has instructions to arm itself with home-made weapons, and their chief plan is to honor African nationalist pledge that South Africa shall be taken over by a Black Government in 1963, the inquiry was told.

A SECURITY Police officer testified that Poqo began to show its head in 1961.

Poqo meetings are held under cover of darkness, frequently in the bush, and women are not admitted.

Poqo reportedly resorted to assault and mured to intimidate Africans in the crowded townships to join or contribute funds to the movement.

A police sergeant described cases of Poqo intimidation. A White shopkeeper was murdered. Three mulatto women —obstructing Poqo activities by occupying African men with less serious matters— were dragged from the rooms of their African friends, and hacked to death. Another mulatto woman, the sergeant stated, was for the same reason dragged from a man's room, stabbed 17 times, drenched in kerosene and set alight. She survived but was crippled for life.

BALTHAZAR VORSTER, justice minister, declared "White inciters" with communist and liberal views are behind the African attackers.

President Charles R. Swart has called upon all White citizens to fight off enemies who "desire to drive the White man and his culture out of South Africa."

Welfare Board Sets Hearing on Discrimination

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The Social Welfare Board will meet in Fresno Jan. 25 to hear testimony on charges of discrimination in California's social welfare program.

Dr. Jacobus tenBrock, chairman, said the board is concerned minority groups are having trouble finding jobs and housing and placing children in foster homes.

The possibility of tightening regulation of nursing homes will also be considered.

Italy Bans Marriage as Firing Cause

ROME (AP) — The Italian Parliament has forbidden employers to fire workers because they marry. Many Italian firms have made it a practice to hire only single women. The new law, voids all labor contract clauses providing for marriage discharges.

Foreign Car Love Cools, but Continues

EDITOR'S NOTE—The shake-out period for imported cars, which followed the introduction of compact American makes, apparently is over. Sales will run around 350,000 cars this year with prospects good for 1963.

By BEN PHLEGAR

DETROIT (AP)—The American motorists' romance with foreign cars isn't as hot and heavy as it once was, but it is far from over.

Despite the vast array of domestic offerings on the market, enough buyers want something different that about one of every 20 cars sold in the United States this year was imported.

Admittedly, this is quite a comedown from the peak import year of 1959 when the ratio of foreign to domestic sales was better than 1 to 10. Total volume will run between 340,000 and 350,000 this year, against 614,131 then.

* * * *

BUT FOR THE imports which survived the shake-out, five per cent of an annual seven million car market looks sufficiently inviting and challenging to stay in the race.

Domestic manufacturers agree five per cent is worth fighting for. In the pre-compact days of the mid-1950s, the Americans kept saying they would seriously consider smaller cars only if the imports ever reached five per cent of the total sales.

It also is no secret that many of the Detroit executives who were saying this honestly doubted such a situation would occur. Smaller cars were offered by American Motors and Studebaker as a matter of economic necessity. But General Motors, Chrysler and to a much lesser extent Ford introduced compacts with considerable reluctance.

The foreigners had forced their hand and they didn't like it but the public did. Buyers welcomed the smaller cars with open pocketbooks and the rush was on.

* * * *

THE IMPORTERS who had failed to establish a firm base here were trampled in the compact stampede, then deserted. Their snob appeal vanished. Customers no longer were willing to put up with slow service and even slower replacement of parts.

The retrenchment period was painful to many. Cars rusted at the docks. Where possible, shipments were turned back intact. Dealers quit in droves and distribution staffs were in the constant turmoil of reorganization.

The worst apparently is over. Automotive news, a respected trade paper, surveyed importers early this month and found them solidly optimistic about the coming year —no great surge, but no more lost ground.

* * * *

THE MAKES which remain universally emphasize the need for high quality dealers providing decent service and readily available parts.

Most American companies concede the imports caught on in this country because they found a price area not covered by domestic makes—under $2,000. And it was into this economy range that the Big Three aimed their original small cars.

The domestic trend in the last year and a half, however, has been away from the drab utility models which commended the lowest prices into more luxury and bigger engines which bosted the stickers well above $2,000.

* * * *

AUTOMOTIVE News found 57 of the 206 imported models now on sale in this country are priced under $2,000 while only nine American models are that low—four Rambler Americans, two Valiants, and one each from Dodge Dart, Corvair and Falcon.

Specialized areas, such as sports cars, have proved profitable for importers, especially the British. Seventy-two of the imports now sold here are sports cars. Triumph, Austin-Healy and MG, all sports models, stand third, sixth and eighth in total import sales through the first 10 months.

Pope Optimistic for Peace, Unity

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope John called for prayer and dedication on behalf of peace and Christian unity in a Christmas message to the world Saturday night.

It was perhaps the most dramatic of the five Christmas messages he has now delivered as pontiff of the Roman Catholic Church. It was more than an appeal. Pope John said attainment of peace and Christian unity is a duty.

His other Christmas messages have emphasized world peace too. But this year's had a strong tone of optimism. He spoke of "happy developments . . . as the beginning of a new chapter in the history of the modern world."

* * * *

HE SAID there were clear signs of deep understanding in international affairs to show his Cuban crisis peace appeal of Oct. 25 was "not wasted on the air."

This Christmas, he added, is particularly joyous because of the new contacts between Catholics and non-Catholics as a result of the Vatican Ecumenical Council.

The 81-year-old pope read his 20-minute speech in a strong voice. His step was firm as he walked to his library desk. Both voice and manner showed his come-back from a stomach disorder and anemia that made him seriously ill 3½ weeks ago.

* * * *

HE LOOKED a bit thinner and there were shadows under his eyes. But he smiled as he adjusted his spectacles, then read his message in Italian.

The Vatican Radio and Italian television, which recorded the speech Friday, broadcast the message. Many national radio networks also carried the message. The Vatican Radio is broadcasting it around the world in many languages.

The Pope said it was his wish that this "be a Christmas of prayer and reflection" in the interest of Christian unity and "social and international relations."

"Of all the earth's treasures," he said, "the most precious and most noteworthy is that of peace." He added that peace is the most important of all blessings for individuals, families and nations.

"Let peace then be our objective at all times," the Pope said. "Let us aim at creating peace around us. . . . Let us shield it from all that could harm it."

Hollywood's Gifts Flown to Kentucky

HAZARD, Ky. (AP)—A U.S. Air Force plane Saturday brought in 8,500 pounds of toys, food and clothing — a gift from the citizens of Hollywood, Calif.—to help brighten the Christmas of needy families in eastern Kentucky.

Four National Guard trucks met the C119 Flying Boxcar at the London airport and hauled the gifts to Hazard, from where they will be distributed among seven counties affected by unemployment in the coal mines.

Meanwhile, money, food and clothing continued to pour in from other parts of the nation. A committee of Hazard citizens, which is receiving the contributions, announced that cash donations now approximated $14,000.

Another committee, composed of public officials, civic leaders and coal-mine pickets, is determining the neediest families and arranging for distribution of the gifts in the seven counties.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Cooperate in helping with decorations, other tasks around the house. Welcome visitors. Discuss plans for future. Be especially attentive to young persons. Avoid impatience. Answer questions.

CANCER (June 22 to July 21): Take time to contemplate spiritual aspects of thoughts, activities. Good Moon aspect; today enhances personal magnetism. Means you can win your way; charm members of opposite sex.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): In trying to accomplish everything at once, you could skip important details. Be usual, wonderful host. But remember your own needs, including proper rest, diet. By being happy, you make loved ones and guests happy, too.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Day of adventure! Features travel, change, visits, creative activity. Don't be in too much of a hurry. Take time to be safe. Be considerate. Give others benefit of doubt—especially on highway.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): What you treasure most is the happiness you anticipate giving friends, loved ones. Fine for being close to home, if possible. Permit natural Libra affection to come through. You thus gain spiritual strength.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Personal matters, including some "technical" points which lead to debates. All could benefit from today's Virgo interpretation.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Many emphasize that message of this season is not literally carried out. Day when persons tend to look within for answers. Cycle is up for Scorpio, Sagittarius, Capricorn.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): Lift thoughts to horizons preserved by great men of past. Re-examine your own principles, aspirations, ambitions. Also time to start anew, to be revitalized spiritually.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20): Best to be leader when it comes to common sense. Moderation should be key today and tonight. In dealing with children, be very diplomatic. Remember that tomorrow is another big day.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Much acclaim due. Possibly because of clever selection of gifts. Be gracious. Avoid scattering your forces. Be generous, expansive. But don't try to do everything.

CANCER (June 22 to July 21): Pacing is key. Hectic day and night in store. Finish one thing at a time. Take care in dealing with others. Attend to details. Otherwise, you could overlook close friend. Try to remember!

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): You may feel restless. This is because you want everything to be just right. Seeking perfection can disappoint. Exciting evening. Good for being attentive to special person.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Pleasure obtained by being with family members. If this is not possible, be with them in spirit. Your thoughts could set positive forces in motion. Remain on high level.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Contemplate many symbols, lessons evident today and tonight. Realize there is more to occasion than mere celebrating. Things you say today could lead to unexpected changes in future.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): A little extra caution could save emotional wear and tear. Teach children lessons of safety. Accept position of responsibility. Help explain facts to younger persons.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Spirit of giving prevails. Stress the unusual. Help others see funny side of situation. Finish all projects, if it is question of giving more or less—give more!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Excellent for expressing humor, independence, originality. You can be shining light at gathering of friends, loved ones. Help cheer one who feels "left out." Share joys.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Take care on highway. Exercise caution in what you say and write. True friends are on your side. But others may look for opportunity to be offended. It is blessed to give.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): Be patient. Many may appear to think ordinary duties, courtesies are "out for the day." By maintaining your own standards of dignity, kindness, you win your way. Help others.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY . . . you are interested in others, and this drive attracts you to fields of social service, teaching, medicine.

N.Y. Paper Strike Bargaining Recessed

NEW YORK (UPI)—Negotiations aimed at settling New York City's 15-day-old newspaper strike were adjourned Saturday until after Christmas—a move that will make this the longest such shutdown in the city's history.

Federal mediators, after meeting with representatives of the New York Publishers Association and the International Typographical Union, scheduled the next negotiating session for 2 p.m. Wednesday.

California Native, 101, Taken by Death

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Mrs Mamie Denton, a lifelong resident of California, died Saturday in a Sacramento rest home at the age of 101. She was born in Grass Valley in 1861.

Mrs. Denton was active for 50 years in the State Range and for 25 in the Women's Christian Temperance Union.

DAILY TRIPS

3 Harbor Cruisers Available

Three big cruise vessels are available daily and Sunday for tours of the harbors of Long Beach and Los Angeles, offering a from-the-water point of view of the biggest man-made port in the world.

The cruises, at 2 p.m. daily and at 11:30 a.m. and 2 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, originate at the Navy Landing at the foot of Magnolia Boulevard where Southland Harbor Cruises has its offices. Terminal points also are at Pierpont and Pacific Landings.

* * * *

BILL KNOTT, president and operations manager of the firm, says the cruises are especially interesting now because the work on Pier J, site of the World's Fair, is under way and this new land mass can be seen in the making.

The three vessels available for the cruises are the Shearwater which seats 145; the Star, 160 and the Princess, 228. The Princess is used primarily in connection with charter and convention group tours.

THE BUSINESS WEEK

Pre-Christmas Business Bolsters 1963 Outlook

By JACK LEFLER
AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Favorable business signs added glitter to the pre-Christmas week.

They weren't sparkling enough to indicate that 1962 is going to end on anything near a boom note but they did bolster feelings that moderate improvement will carry into 1963.

Statistics which showed a gain or a steady tone covered the gamut of retail sales, automobile sales, the gross national product, durable goods orders, housing starts and industrial production.

* * * *

AND IT was a week in which keen attention was focused on labor-management with newspaper strikes hanging on in New York City and Cleveland, a longshoremen's strike threatened on the East and Gulf Coasts, and Kaiser Steel Corp. and the Steelworkers Union signing a unique agreement intended to ease the impact of automation.

After a rather dreary start because of weather too warm and then weather too stormy, Christmas buying pepped up in the closing stretch. The National Retail Merchants Association reported that storekeepers were encouraged in their hopes that record 1961 volume would be exceeded by a narrow margin.

Automobile sales for the first 10 days of December hit a record for the period. Dealers delivered 171,500 domestic passenger cars against 148,600 a year earlier.

* * * *

SECRETARY OF Commerce Luther H. Hodges reported the gross national product — total of all goods and services—is expected to exceed in the current quarter an annual rate of $560 billion. This would bring the year's total to $554 billion, up seven per cent over 1961.

But he said the pace is not satisfactory and a tax reduction is needed for stimulation of business over the long range.

Manufacturers' new orders for durable goods inched up to a new record but failed to come anywhere near the good gain of three per cent registered in October.

* * * *

HOUSING STARTS in November remained about steady with the October rate. The Census Bureau said private starts for the year are expected to be near 1,425,000 units, a gain of nine per cent over last year.

Production of the country's factories, mines and utilities in November held at a record level for the fourth consecutive month.

A survey of 1,000 industrial buyers indicated expectations that business will be slightly better in 1963 than in 1962 but that the rate of growth will not match this year.

* * * *

THERE WERE no signs of progress toward settling the New York City newspaper strike, which began Dec. 8. With the city's nine major dailies closed, business was feeling the absence of advertising columns. Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz said the strike could last six or eight weeks or more.

Wirtz also stepped in to attempt to head off a strike of 60,000 longshoremen which could begin at midnight today. That is the expiration time of an 80-day cooling off period which held off a strike order earlier.

Keen interest of both management and labor was centered on the agreement between Kaiser Steel and the Steelworkers Union covering 7,000 workers at the company's Fontana, Calif., plant.

The agreement was intended to reward workers along with management for production success; guarantees employes against losing jobs to automation; eliminate the main cause of strikes.

Possibly it could become a pattern for negotiations on a broad scale of labor-management relationships.

* * * *

AUTOMOBILE production last week totaled an estimated 165,000 passenger cars, compared with 176,244 the previous week—highest since January 1960—and 149,285 a year ago. The cutback resulted mainly from a sharp reduction in Saturday overtime due to the approach of Christmas.

Output for this year was estimated by the Automobile Manufacturers Association at 8.9 million passenger cars and 1.2 million trucks and buses with a factory wholesale value of $15.3 billion. Last year the output was 5,522,019 cars and 1,130,919 trucks and buses.

* * * *

ANOTHER DECLINE in steel production was registered the week of Dec. 13 when output amounted to 1,832,000 tons, off 1.4 per cent from the previous week. Industry executives attributed the setback in part to heavy snows in the east and midwest and the approaching holidays.

For the first 50 weeks of this year, production totaled 94,555,000 tons, ahead of the comparable period of 1961 by 1.3 per cent.

Pan American World Airways and Trans World Airlines proposed to merge, creating the biggest domestic airline with 80,000 system miles.

* * * *

IN AN unexpected development, Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co., third largest U. S. producer of heavy electrical generating units, announced its withdrawal from the steam turbine generator business. It said prices broke in 1958 when foreign producers entered the U. S. market with lower prices.

* * * *

BRIEFLY around the business scene: Twelve New England utilities will build an $80 million atomic power plant at Haddam Neck, Conn. Dividends totaling $412 million were paid in November by corporations issuing public reports—up $11 million from a year earlier. . . . Santa Fe Railroad ordered 24 high-level chair cars at a cost of $8 million.

CHRISTMAS TREE LAND, U.S.A.

Bunyan Never Dreamed of This Kind of Logging Bonanza

By ELDON BARRETT

SHELTON, Wash. (UPI)—When Paul Bunyan hitched up Babe, his big blue ox, and scooped out Puget Sound to build the Olympic Mountains, he didn't leave much room for growing potatoes.

In fact, about the only money crop that flourishes on the Olympic Peninsula is trees. Of course that was all right with Big Paul because logging was his game. But the mythical lumberjack probably would dull the teeth of his misery whip and hang up his corks if he saw the size of the trees they're hauling out of this neck of the woods by the carload this season of the year.

Hardly a one is more than eight feet tall and those with the most branches are the most valuable. And by the 25th of December they will be wearing more gewgaws and trappings than a logger's queen in a skidroad honky-tonk.

* * * *

ALTHOUGH IT doesn't compare with the saw timber operations in the northwest, the Christmas tree business in the Shelton area is big business. By the time Santa Claus starts loading up his sleigh, nearly 2 million yule trees will have been shipped out Mason, Thurston and Kitsap Counties in the foothills of the southern Olympics. And for these trees, $10 million will have changed hands.

About 100,000 acres are under cultivation for yule tree growing in the tri-county area, which likes to call itself "Christmas Tree Land, U.S.A." Eight of the 15 major suppliers in western Washington operate in the three counties and numerous conventional farmers and "stump ranchers" pick up side money raising trees for these suppliers.

Outside of local retail markets, most of the trees shipped out of this area go to California, Arizona, Nevada and Hawaii.

* * * *

DOUGLAS FIR makes up the bulk of the seasonal cut, but some companies have introduced the more exotic Scotch Pine and Noble and White Fir which bring higher prices.

Like all good farmers, the tree grower constantly searches for new methods to better his crop. Fertilizer is the latest discovery. Until about three years ago, the best trees seemed to come from the poorest land because they grew more slowly there and the sets of branches, called "whorls," were most uniform and not scraggly. But someone tried fertilizing and now almost every grower is using it.

Some companies use helicopters to scatter seed and almost all have nurseries growing seedlings to supplement natural regeneration. It takes from six to 14 years to produce a Christmas tree, and the tree farmers can't take a chance on old Mother Nature.

* * * *

BEARS AND mountain beaver, which feed on the bark of young trees, are a hazard. The Mason County Sheriff's office has a Christmas tree posse patrolling tree farms to keep off the poachers at this time of year.

Most of the farms are situated on land where once stood giant saw trees—the kind Paul Bunyan used for toothpicks. It was through these stands that the timber barons sliced their monstrous swaths, leaving only stumps, snags and slash. Fire usually took over to complete the carnage.

But even deep wounds heal. And today, these once-scarred acres again are dotted forest green.

This year about 30 million trees will be trimmed in the United States alone. And that makes for good business.

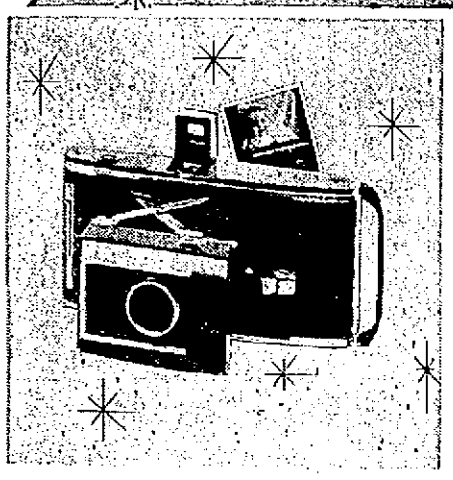

As one grower put it in explaining why he grows Christmas trees:

"I wanted to get into business and I figured as long as people produce children, we'd be able to produce Christmas trees."

8,486 SEE ROUT

Blades Rip Totems 6-1

By JEROME HALL

What started on a riotous note ended calmly, almost timidly for ice hockey, when the L.A. Blades blitzed the Seattle Totems 6-1 Saturday night.

A festive crowd of 8,486 in the L.A. Sports Arena watched the Blades make a skate-away of it with three goals in the final period.

It was the fifth consecutive defeat for the Totems, who came to town leading the WHL's Northern Division and left trailing Vancouver. The Blades are the No. 2 team in the Southern Division.

Saturday night's affair started as the previous contest in the series ended—ungentlemanly. There were two fist fights in the first period. The opening face-off squirted into the air, over the sideboards and struck Seattle coach Keith Allen. He wasn't injured.

But there was no unseemly conduct after the first intermission.

* * * *

THE NIGHT'S first fist fight broke out three minutes before the end of the first period when Blades' forward Ed Stankiewicz tangled with goalie Al Millar. They doffed their gloves to go at it barefisted, but the Totems' goalie wouldn't take off his wire mask so the officials stopped it. Both drew two-minute penalties.

Three minutes later Stankiewicz got into a rhubarb with Totems' wingman George Konik, who in the previous contest in this series cracked a Blades' player over the head. Konik had been in Saturday night's game only 30 seconds when he got into the brawl. Both combatants were docked five minutes in the penalty box.

Leo LaBine got the Blades' first goal 6:52 into the second period on an assist from Stan Maxwell and O'Ree.

* * * *

THE BLADES broke the game open midway through the second period with two goals in the space of 80 seconds. The first of the pair was registered on a power smash by Lloyd Haddon from 25 feet out.

The second was by Hoagy Carmichael at the 14:15 mark in the period and between the two scores the Blades gave the Totems' goalie a fearful going-over. The rush toward the Totems' goalie was climaxed by Carmichael when, on his scoring surge, he crashed into the iron net support and knocked it from its mooring.

Adolph Tambellini put Seattle on the scoreboard at 18:17 of the second period.

There were no penalties called in the second period.

Two goals by Marc Boileau and one by Ed Diachuk in the final period made it a rout. Boileau, coach Red Bownass and goalie Jack McCartan were named the game's stars.

First period—Scoring—None. Penalties—Arnell, Blades, 2 min. (holding) 12:36. Stankiewicz, Blades 2 min. (roughing) 17:27. Millar, Seattle, 2 min. (high-sticking) 17:27. Konik, Seattle, 5 min. (fighting) 20:00. Stankiewicz, Blades, 5 min. (fighting), 20:00.
Saves—McCarten 9, Millar 11.
Second period—1, Blades—LaBine (Maxwell, O'Ree), 6:52. 2, Blades—Haddon (Carmichael, Selinger), 12:55. 3, Blades—Carmichael (Haddon, Boileau), 14:15. 4, Seattle—Tambellini (Leonard, Chlupka), 18:17. Penalties—None.
Saves—McCarten 8, Millar 9.
Third period—5, Blades—Boileau (Carmichael, Selinger), 0:25. 6—Blades—Diachuk (Haworth, Bownass), 3:49. 7, Blades—Boileau (Selinger), 16:30. Penalties—Lyard, Seattle, 2 min. (hooking) 0:10. Burega, Blades, 2 min. (tripping) 18:20.

Long Beach State College's Dick Montgomery cuts between Loyola Lions' Detroit Flanagan (left) and Dick Schiendler en route to first half basket in battle for consolation title of Long Beach Invitational Saturday night.

State's Late Rally Stuns Lions, 68-61

By AL LARSON

Oklahoma State scored a stunning 61-59 victory over Drake University to win the first Long Beach Invitational basketball festival Saturday before 1,192 onlookers at the L.B. Arena.

Long Beach rallied the second half to tumble Loyola, 68-61, in the consolation finals.

Coach Hank Iba's lads from Stillwater, who had beaten Drake in 30 of 35 previous meetings over the years, displayed awesome outside shooting in the first half as they stormed to a 37-24 lead.

But the second half was a different story as the Cowboys grimly held on at the finish to thwart Drake's comeback.

The Cowboys sank 14 of 28 field shots and 9 of 12 foul attempts to gain their commanding halftime advantage.

* * * *

DRAKE, which blazed at a remarkable 68 percent Friday night in routing Loyola, 92-69, couldn't find the bucket the first 20 minutes and wound up sinking only 11 of 30 from the floor and 4 of 9 charity throws.

Oklahoma State shot from a 20-17 deficit into a resounding 35-20 advantage when it outscored Drake 18-0 during a wild six-minute spree late in the first half.

Drake finally cut into the Cowboys' lead midway in the final half behind the hot hands of guard Billy Hahn and forward McCoy McLemore.

The Bulldogs shifted from a man-to-man defense to a zone press the final 4½ minutes and this nearly turned the tide.

* * * *

OKLAHOMA still enjoyed an eight-point lead, 59-51, with 1:59 to go. The Cowboys' lead dwindled to six with one minute left.

McLemore converted two foul attempts and now it was only 61-57 for Oklahoma State. When Ray Quinn scored with seven seconds remaining it looked like the sophomore-studded Oklahoma club might blow its championship, but they managed to hang onto the ball the rest of the way.

Officials Mel Ross and Jim Tunney had their hands full as both coaches carried on a verbal barrage throughout the contest. Drake was socked with three technical fouls.

* * * *

THE INABILITY to hit at the foul line was the biggest thorn for coach Maurice Johns' club to absorb. Drake sank only 13 of 24 attempts for a cold 54 percent effort. The Cowboys cashed in 19 of 25.

Oklahoma's Larry Hawk was the game's leading point-maker with 18. Drake's top scorer was Hahn with 15.

Trailing by nine points at intermission, the 49ers erupted with a 43-point barrage to lock up their second victory in nine starts this season.

Stan Andersen poured in 22 points to spark the 49ers, who broke slowly, but who came to life the second half.

Al Windfeldt's short jumper with 7:08 left in the game put Long Beach ahead for good. The 49ers then outscored Loyola, 10-2, as they pulled ahead 52-44, and when the Lions lost rebounding star Detroit Flanagan, they were never a serious threat again.

* * * *

DICK Schiendler was Loyola's leading scorer for the second night with 14 points. Lyn Hodge also popped in 14 and did a good job on the boards for the winners before fouling out with 7:21 remaining. Four players were whistled out as a total of 46 fouls were detected.

Long Beach jumped off to a 2-0 lead when Andersen

AGGIE SOPH CAPTURES MVP AWARD

Oklahoma State's sophomore flash James King was selected as the most valuable player following his team's harrowing 61-59 win in the finals of the Long Beach Invitational basketball tourney Saturday night.

King, a 6-5½ forward who scored 13 points in the title game (12 in the first half) headed a six-man team which included teammates Gene Johnson and Larry Hawk.

Drake landed two players, center Ray Quinn and guard Billy Foster. Long Beach's Stan Andersen was the other choice.

N.H.L. HEADED WEST . . . TO L.B.?

By JEROME HALL

The National Hockey League—the major league—is headed West and Long Beach probably will become part of it.

That appears to be the final result of franchise manipulations that include, as the Independent, Press-Telegram disclosed in recent days, the switch of a Western Hockey League franchise to this city next year.

In five to seven years the National League will incorporate the WHL into its fold, making the WHL the western division of the major league and making the National Hockey League truly national for the first time.

George A. Leader, president of the Western League, which currently encompasses the L.A. Blades, San Francisco, Portland, Spokane, Seattle, Vancouver, Edmonton and Calgary, has been campaigning the NHL owners toward this goal and has made much progress.

But before the WHL can gain major league ranking, it must drop at least one and probably more light-drawing franchises. First to go will be Spokane, which will be transferred to Long Beach next season, it is believed.

L.A. Blades' general manager Jack Geyer told the I, P-T that the Blades "will not voice protest" to a team in Long Beach, which is within the territory control of owner Dan Reeves. The Blades blocked the entry of Long Beach several months ago. Other league owners want Long Beach in.

When the National League merges the Western League (and hockey men consider the right word to be "when," not if) it is problematical that both Los Angeles and Long Beach would hold franchises, though entirely possible.

At the time of the WHL inclusion into the major league, Long Beach will have had several years of successful operation in the WHL, according to current league opinion, so it is considered likely that Los Angeles and Long Beach would share one major league franchise. Home games would be divided between the L.A. Sports Arena and the Long Beach Arena.

Here are the three steps WHL president Leader believes will lead to nation-wide major league hockey:

1. End the draft, which siphons off top talent of the WHL. (the first step already has been accomplished. The draft ends next year.)

2. All WHL teams must operate extensive farm systems to develop major-caliber talent. (The Blades already operate an amateur league in Saskatoon, Canada, which has 2,200 young players. The California league, of which the Long Beach Gulls are members now, probably would provide farm teams in WHL expansion plans.)

3. Convince the National League that it would be to its advantage to become a truly national league. (This would be by dangling big-money television opportunities. But major league hockey has to spread out of its small confines to do this.)

The third point is the key. Television money is the wedge. Most NHL teams are playing to capacity or near-capacity audiences, so they see no reason to incur travel expense to the West Coast unless income is increased. Toronto and Montreal have not had an unsold seat in nearly 20 years. The Boston Bruins, a losing team, outdraw the basketball champion Boston Celtics.

When the L.A. Blades vetoed Long Beach, owner Reeves asked for time to assure financial stability of his franchise. That stability seems assured now. The Blades have doubled their average attendance over a similar period last season and consistently outdraw the NBA-leading L.A. Lakers.

"We think we've just scratched the surface," said Blades boss Geyer.

To say that ice hockey is the fastest-growing spectator sport in Southern California would be as accurate as saying it is the fastest-played sport.

Barron Hilton Signs Rufus Guthrie to Chargers Contract

RAMS LOSE NO. 1 CHOICE GUTHRIE TO SAN DIEGO PALS

By JERRY WYNN

Yes, Crazylegs, there is a Santa Claus.

His name is Barron Hilton and he owns the San Diego Chargers as a sideline to sharing the wealth of the world's foremost hotel chain.

As Charger chief (and Santa Claus) he had a hearty "ho, ho, ho" on the Rams Saturday.

For he gave a Christmas present to a young man by the name of Rufus Guthrie, Saturday that must have been one of the most generous ever bestowed on a graduating senior from college.

Guthrie, incidentally, is a football player and a good one. He is a 6-1, 231-pound guard and linebacker from Georgia Tech who was drafted by the Chargers as their No. 2 pick, and by the Rams, as their second No. 1 round choice.

But it was Hilton and the Chargers who plucked the plum away from the Rams and signed him to a San Diego contract after the Bluebonnet Bowl game between Missouri and Georgia Tech at Houston, Texas Saturday.

No terms were disclosed, but, according to a Ram official, Guthrie must have dollar signs in his eyes today.

"We offered him a contract as good as the one we gave Merlin Olsen last year," said the official. "They must have wanted

Jet Deck Sets Mark as Alamitos Closes

By ERNIE MASON

Already the richest 2-year-old in quarter horse history, J. B. Chambers' Jet Deck Saturday became the fastest at 400 yards when he won the $15,000 Kindergarten Stakes as Los Alamitos race course closed its season before 10,294 fans.

In the companion feature, Western Stables' Alamitos Bar won the $15,000 Autumn Championship when he first collared the flying mare No Butt and then beat back her closing drive in the 440-yard classic.

Jet Deck, who won the $207,750 Los Alamitos Futurity last week, zipped the 400 yards in 19.9 seconds to break the old world record for 2-year-olds of 20.1 set in September, 1961, by Pokey Bar.

* * * *

THE TIME also equalled the world record for horses of any age, set here in the 1961 spring meeting by Breeze Bar.

The $8,250 winner's share of the purse upped the earnings by the bay son of Moon Deck to $138,342. The stable earned $124,220 in this 30-day meeting — $116,115 of it by Jet Deck.

The victory was also his seventh straight, making him the winningest as well as the richest 2-year-old. It was also his fifth of the meeting, tieing another track record.

The 2-5 public choice paid $2.80, $2.60 and $2.20.

BELSBY and Schumacher's Top Moon was second, a length and a half in arrears, and returned $5.60 and $3.60. Western Stables' Tiny Charger was third for $3.40.

In the Autumn Championship, Alamitos Bar was the public choice and paid $4.20, $3.00 and $2.80. Mickle's Valley View Ranch's No Butt paid $9.40 and $7.60 and C. J. Burnum's Fly Straw returned $7.60.

Alamitos Bar, away from the track for a month, broke behind No Butt. The 7-year-old mare zipped to the front and held her lead for about 350 yards. Then Alamitos Bar overtook her and got a head in front.

No Butt rallied for another assault but Alamitos Bar kept his nose barely in front.

KTLA, channel 5, will carry the telecast beginning at 2:30.

Left wing Vern Wilderman ranks second in scoring with 12 points, followed by Joe Morneau and Rucks with 10 each.

Long Beach returns home Friday to meet Los Angeles again in an 8:15 game.

CHILLED BADGERS ARRIVE

Wisconsin's Rose Bowl football team outran a snowstorm and bucked 100-knot headwinds but arrived in Southern California Saturday night for its engagement New Year's Day with USC.

The Badgers landed at Lockheed Air Terminal in Burbank after a seven-hour flight from Madison, Wis., which almost never got started.

The takeoff was delayed nearly three hours and the arrival was three hours late with the chartered plane landing shortly before 6 p.m. in the dark.

But Pasadena's Tournament of Roses Association gave the Wisconsin team the traditional welcome for the Eastern representative in the Rose Bowl.

The Wisconsin team left Madison in 27-degree weather and just barely got into the air before a snowstorm engulfed the city. But coach Milt Bruhn said the trip was a smooth one despite the headwinds once they got under way.

L.A. Cage Classic Wide-Open

By JEROME HALL

Stanford is the team to beat in the L.A. Basketball Classic this week, but for the first time this can be considered a wide-open tournament.

There are no Ohio States or West Virginias in the field this year. There are no big-name teams at all, unless you hail from Missouri Valley territory and have followed St. Louis University.

This might be the chance for one of the two Southland universities—USC or UCLA.

And it might be the year for little Colorado State University, which is supposed to be a powerhouse. Then, too, there's the threat from the Washington Huskies, who have beaten Colorado State U. already this season.

The Big Ten will be represented by Northwestern. It's not without a chance. Neither is Utah State.

That's the full field for the four-day Classic which begins Wednesday at the L.A. Sports Arena.

Stanford, unbeaten after six games going into Saturday night's game with Texas, was the selection of 12 of 15 sports scribes to come out on top. UCLA was the solid second choice, receiving three first place votes and tabbed No. 2 on seven other ballots.

"The fact that six of the eight teams were mentioned by the experts polled indicates that this is the most evenly balanced and wide open Classic in its four-year history," Wilbur Johns, tournament chairman, said.

Only Washington and Northwestern didn't receive any pre-tourney backing but they can't be completely thrown out of contention.

Wednesday's opening pairings pit four of the favorites against each other in crucial contests. Colorado State-USC at 1:30 p.m. and Utah State-UCLA at 7 p.m. both rate as toss-up games. Rounding out the first round are St. Louis-Washington at 3:30 p.m. and Northwestern-Stanford at 9 p.m.

Sports Merry-Go-Round

By HANK HOLLINGWORTH
Executive Sports Editor

What Is Basketball's Future Here?

The disappointing crowds at the Long Beach Invitational Tournament and at Chiefs' games causes one to wonder about the future of upper echelon basketball in this city.

We've written often enough on the professional Chiefs' problems, but at the moment we're concerned about the high-class college tourney which concluded Saturday night. Unlike the Chiefs, the Long Beach Invitational had plenty of time for preparation.

HANK HOLLINGWORTH

Certainly no two people ever worked longer and harder on any one sports project in this area than Bob Pestolesi and Dick Perry of Long Beach State College. Their groundwork began a year ago and they spent thousands of hours' time in planning every detail.

Artistically, Pestolesi and Perry produced an overwhelming success. The financial aspect is another matter.

Christmas shopping, Yule parties and the fog scare were reasons advanced for the lack of attendance during the past two nights. Probably all are valid enough, yet would the crowds have been any larger if the tournament was held in October or February?

Two gentlemen who advised Long Beach officials not to be disappointed over any aspect of their first tournament were visiting coaches Hank Iba of Oklahoma State and Maurice John of Drake, two of the finest people in sports this writer has met.

The night before the tourney began, Iba declared:

"It takes three years to build a successful tournament. Nobody ever produces a successful tournament like this in one year's time. People have to be educated to such a thing, especially in an area like the West Coast where basketball is only now starting to enjoy the popularity of sports like football and baseball. Look ahead to three years of building . . . and don't worry about what happens now."

JOHN'S SENTIMENTS were the same. Maurice also bestowed bouquets to Long Beach State College and the Century Club for the manner in which the tourney was handled.

"Our treatment in Long Beach was exceptional," said John. "Everywhere we went, somebody was there to help us. It has been a pleasure for Drake University to play in Long Beach."

The visiting coaches expressed pleasure also at the Century Club idea of assigning one man to be responsible for the needs of each team while in Long Beach. The men who shared the headaches were Steve Kral (Drake), Wayne Bryson (Oklahoma State) and George Flowers (Loyola). Long Beach State had to go it alone!

TOURNAMENT WRAPUPS:

. . . A particular disappointment of the tourney was the response of Long Beach State College students themselves. A halfway decent reaction from the "Mausoleum" student body would have put over the tournament attendance-wise. Once again, the "Mausoleum" inhabitants lived up to their tag . . . and FAILED!

. . . The Cowboys' Iba, the world's No. 1 exponent of slowed-down basketball, was asked if he'd ever resort to the fast break even with a team averaging 6-10 and able to sprint the century in 10 flat. "Sir," replied Iba, "the fast break and high scores do not constitute the game of basketball for me. I take pride in teaching defense and play-making. THAT'S basketball!" (Take one look at Hank's record and you have no room for argument.)

. . . Both Iba and John disagreed upon their choice of the best basketball player in the nation today. If they had to select one man to form the nucleus of their clubs, Iba would grab the Celtics' Bill Russell and John the Royals' Oscar Robertson.

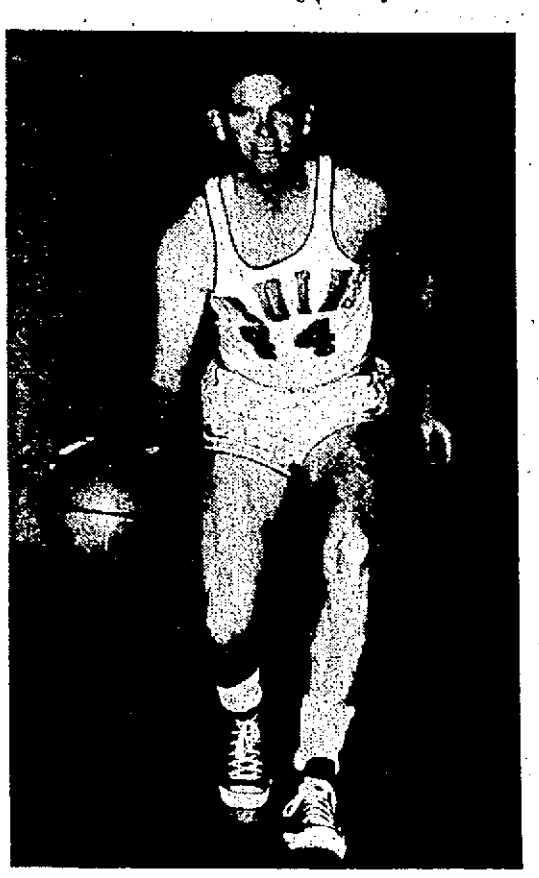

. . . What about my man, Elgin Baylor, I inquired? "Oh, he'd be on our first team," they both echoed in reply, but neither left any doubts that Russell and Robertson came first in their minds.

GRABBING THE BRASS RINGS:

. . . Making fools of the opposition in pro basketball apparently isn't the way to (1) either make friends or (2) win succeeding games. The Lakers learned this lesson Friday night when the irate Hawks snapped their winning streak after Hot Rod Hundley had acted like a Harlem Globetrotter against St. Louis one game earlier. The ABL's Rens also learned the same lesson this season when Pittsburgh's Connie Hawkins infuriated Long Beach's Bill Spivey in the same manner. When the Rens came to Long Beach, Hawkins was spilled so hard that he missed the next half-dozen Pittsburgh games . . . and the Rens haven't found the victory column yet.

. . . Thanks to the Carmelite Nuns on E. Ocean Blvd. for their kind Christmas note. The promised prayers, sorely needed, should put this column one-up on the ulcerated Bob Wells going into the new year!

JIM MILHORN . . . L.B.'s Gift to UCLA

Milhorn's Hustle Pays Dividends

After two seasons as a reserve, Long Beach's diminutive James Erlin Milhorn appears to be coming into his own as a regular starting guard for UCLA's basketball Bruins.

Milhorn scored a high of 12 points in the Bruins 77-63 win over Wisconsin Saturday and thereby earned a starting berth for UCLA's opening game of the L.A. Classic this week.

Little Jim, who stands 5-9 and weighs 155, earned the opening call several weeks ago and has since done a solid job in teaming with the Bruins' flashy Walt Hazzard in the opening minutes of play.

Milhorn, until Saturday, had been giving way to sophs Gail Goodrich and Fred Goss after that, but coach John Wooden indicated he'll keep Milhorn in as long as he continues to hit from the outside.

* * * *

WOODEN labeled the former Jordan and Long Beach City College star "an excellent outside shooter" who needs only more playing time to build up his confidence.

The veteran Bruin coach lauded Milhorn for making up with intelligence and hustle what he lacked from being so small.

Milhorn was only a last-quarter replacement the past two seasons.

He is a physical education major who plans a coaching career following graduation.

Wisconsin Drubbed by Bruins

MADISON, Wis. (Special)—UCLA received some hot outside shooting from guards Jim Milhorn and Gail Goodrich to hand Wisconsin one of its worst defeats of the year, 77-63, here Saturday.

It was the fifth win in a row for UCLA and boosted the Bruins' record to 7-2. Wisconsin's log is 4-3.

UCLA had five players hit in double figures, but it was Milhorn and Goodrich who prevented Wisconsin's zone defense from being effective by shooting over it with accuracy.

* * * *

MILHORN hit six field goals for 12 points and Goodrich also had six fielders plus a free throw for 13 points. Fred Slaughter and Keith Erickson also had 13 and Walt Hazzard 11.

UCLA, after trailing 6-0, built up a 34-26 lead at halftime and had only one anxious moment after that midway in the final half when the Badgers pulled to within five points.

The Bruins hit 41 percent of their shots to 40 for Wisconsin.

Loyola of Chicago Topples Seattle

CHICAGO (AP) — Fourth-ranked Loyola of Chicago failed to reach 100 points for the first time this season but had more than enough to topple Seattle from the ranks of the unbeaten 93-83 at the Chicago Stadium Saturday night.

Loyola, in winning its seventh consecutive game, swept into a commanding 66-44 lead early in the second half.

OCCUPATIONAL HAZARD

Wisconsin's Mike O'Melia appears to be punching UCLA's Walt Hazzard in the jaw, but he's merely making unsuccessful attempt to block jump shot. Bruins scored 77-63 victory.

Vikes Capture Consolation Title

MT. VIEW — Long Beach City College overcame an early deficit to defeat Santa Ana, 78-73, and capture the consolation title of the North-South Classic here Saturday night.

City College of San Francisco, defending state champion, captured the tournament by downing College of San Mateo 75-62.

The Vikings trailed by 14 points after 10 minutes, jumped into a 46-40 halftime advantage and maintained that margin throughout the second half. The victory avenged a 10-point defeat at the hands of Santa Ana earlier this season.

Football star Frank Roy scored 26 points to pace the Vikings' attack. John Rambo contributed 22 points.

In the battle for third place, Foothill whipped Bakersfield 59-40 and San Jose nipped Cerritos, 58-57, for seventh place.

Cincy Rolls Along, 72-46

CINCINNATI (UPI) — National champion Cincinnati put on one of its patented second-half drives to defeat Davidson University, the Cinderella team of the Southern Conference, 72-46 here Saturday night.

The Bearcats, bedeviled by the team that upset No. 2 ranked Duke last Tuesday, scored 16 points to Davidson's six in the opening seven minutes of the second half to pull away.

Buckeyes Romp to Sixth Victory

DETROIT (UPI) — Fourth-ranked and unbeaten Ohio State took to the road for the first time this season and overwhelmed the University of Detroit, 101-66, for its sixth straight and most lopsided basketball triumph.

Pacing the Buckeye attack were Dick Reasbeck and Gary Bradds with 28 and 19 points, respectively. Reasbeck got 19 of his points in the first half and was pulled with 12 minutes to go in the second half.

Tribe Rips Texas for 7th Win in Row

NAME McKAY YEAR'S BEST

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Washington Touchdown Club announced Sunday the selection of John McKay, pilot of Southern California's unbeaten Trojans, as its 1962 Coach of the Year.

McKay, who guided Southern Cal to a 10-0 record and Rose Bowl bid, will be presented the club's trophy at the annual awards dinner Jan. 12.

1 Second Left When Troy Wins

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI)—Southern Cal's unbeaten Trojans made it nine basketball wins in a row Saturday night, beating Nebraska with one second to go on a "run-up-and-in" shot by sophomore center Allen Young.

Nebraska, stung at becoming Trojan victim No. 8 Friday night, scrapped through the game and seemed set for a win in the late stages.

Bill Vincent hooked twice for baskets to make the score 53-51. Young, who paced Southern Cal with 15 points, scored on two free throws, setting up a Husker stall for the one basket.

* * * *

NEBRASKA'S leading team scorer, Darrell Petsch, missed a 10-foot jump shot. At 2:13 left, the Trojans played for their one good shot, called time with 21 seconds to play and the score still 53-51 and fed to Young for his heart-stopper just as the horn was ready to be sounded.

The Celtics hit only 17 of 46 shots from the floor and were unable to contain Richie Guerin, who scored 37 points.

WYNN SANTA

By JERRY WYNN

"He never could be considered as a subject for a shaving commercial and his stomach is a bit out of athletic proportions. But who cares!

Santa Claus today is the world's greatest sportsman. His escapades on Christmas Eve combine the lightning of Herb Elliott, the audacity of Maury Wills and the thrust of Jim Taylor. And his live audience is in the billions.

Obtaining an interview with Santa was almost as tough as speaking to Vince Lombardi. It seems the old fellow nearly exhausted himself this year trying to line up presents for the Kennedy family.

What is your favorite sport, Santa?

"I call it smiling . . . to visualize the smiles of the little boys and girls when they open their presents."

Who are your favorite athletes?

"The fathers who do-it-themselves trying to put the toys together; the mothers who have to clean up the debris."

Which is your favorite team?

"The teams of volunteers who contribute their time to worthy causes such as the one which manned the Christmas tree lot at Bellflower Blvd. near Atherton St. I hear they sold more than $13,000 worth of trees for the building fund of the Los Altos YMCA."

Do you have a secret for climbing through narrow chimneys?

"Does Ed Pauley tell Dan Reeves?"

What has been the greatest thrill of your career?

"It hasn't come yet. It will come when people learn to live in peace and the Christmas spirit of good fellowship extends throughout the year."

Now, Santa, here is a special list of persons deserving presents. They were courageous enough to talk "Man to Man" with me in 1962 and make the first year of this column a pleasurable experience.

P-T AWARD TO MASTERS CHAMPION

Clover 'Golfer of Year'

By JERRY WYNN

There's no looking over Dick Clover.

He is Long Beach "golfer of the year" for 1962.

A name that has appeared in headlines in a barrage of championship amateur events the past five years, Clover was named Saturday as recipient of the ninth annual Independent, Press-Telegram award for golfing achievement.

The 29-year-old Recreation Park standard-bearer compiled a magnificent record in 1962. It included victories in the Long Beach Masters Championship, the Santa Ana, Huntington Beach and San Clemente City championships, the El Rivino CC Invitational and a second-place finish in the classic Southern California Amateur Championship.

Ironically, it was a defeat for Clover rather than a victory which was one of the major golf stories of the year. For after becoming only the second player ever to win the Long Beach City Championship in consecutive years (1960-61), Dick was beaten in semi-finals this year by young Roger Cleveland.

The husky, blond advocate of Arnold Palmer's "attacking" philosophy also captured the Recreation Park Club Championship for a second successive year as well as retaining his Gilman Hot Springs club title.

The victory at Recreation Park qualifies Clover to defend his Long Beach Masters crown early next year. In the 1962 Masters, he showed the courage as well as the class of a champion by overcoming a near-disastrous third round blowup of 81 to capture the title by three strokes with a final round of 72.

If that 81 was a low point of the year, a brilliant seven-under par 64 at Willowick during the Santa Ana City Championship was a topper. His 54-hole total of 200 was a tournament record.

And if there was a single shot to be extracted from the host of 1962 gems, it would be the wedge that Clover holed out for an eagle-deuce on the 351-yard 17th at Virginia CC during the So-Cal Amateur Championship.

The former USC golf captain is married, resides in LaMirada and is employed by E. K. Williams and Co. as a minerals salesman. He will be honored at Long Beach Century Club Sports Night at the Lafayette Hotel, Jan. 24.

Houston 6½ Point Favorite Over Dallas for AFL Crown

HOUSTON (AP)—The well-balanced Dallas Texans challenge the pass-minded Houston Oilers in a Texas showdown Sunday for the American Football League championship.

Dallas will be trying to wrestle from the defending champions the title Houston has held since the AFL was organized in 1960.

The Oilers are favored by 6½ points in the Texas feud that will be televised nationally. An overflow crowd of 37,000 is expected at Jeppesen Public Schools Stadium.

Records leave little choice between the two teams. Both won division titles with 11-3 records. They rank one-two in the AFL in both total offense and total defense. Neither gained a wide statistical edge while splitting two regular season games.

Houston's attack, as in 1960 and 1961, centers on the explosive passes of George Blanda. The old pro of 13 years is backed by such top runners as Charlie Tolar and Billy Cannon, but about two out of every three yards the Oilers gained this season resulted from passes.

Dallas blends the brilliant passing of Len Dawson, the AFL's player of the year, with the power and speed of Curtis McClinton, the rookie of the year, and Abner Haynes, the league's leading ground gainer in 1960. The Texan formula has resulted in near-perfect balance in that Dallas gained 2,456 yards in 14 games on passes and 2,407 yards rushing.

Blanda set a league record this year by having 42 passes intercepted but he rallied the Oilers from behind six times and Houston moves into its third title game seeking an eighth straight victory. Blanda had only 22 interceptions last season, when he preceded Dawson as the league's player of the year.

Dawson threw three touchdown passes as the Texans ran over Houston, 31-3, in late November while intercepting six passes and recovering three fumbles. A week later Blanda bombed Dallas for a 14-6 victory as the Houston defense prevented the Texans from crossing the Oiler 34-yard line the first 55 minutes.

77-Yard Run, Pass Thefts Wreck Tech

HOUSTON (UPI)—Bill Tobin's 77-yard third-quarter touchdown run and two fourth-quarter interceptions by linebacker Andy Russell propelled Missouri to a 14-10 victory over Georgia Tech in the fourth annual Bluebonnet Bowl game Saturday.

Tobin, a 5-10 senior from Burlington Junction, Mo., broke through the left side of the heavier Georgia Tech line, twisted out for about 10 yards, then got a key block by Russell to spring him loose on his winning sortie.

The Tigers from the Big Eight had scored first on a 21-yard option sweep by quarterback Jim Johnson in the first quarter and were never headed.

Tech and its talented Billy Lothridge drove 61 yards for a second-period touchdown with Joe Auer circling right end for the final six yards and Lothridge tacked on a 26-yard field goal in the third period.

Auer, a junior halfback who seems to save his heroics for post-season games, almost pulled the game out for the Rambling Wrecks with a 35-yard run in the fading moments.

* * * *

BUT AFTER Auer had taken the ball to the Missouri 32, Russell came up with his second interception of the quarter on the goal line with 1:22 left to play and the game was over as far as Tech was concerned.

Russell also had stopped another Georgia Tech threat in the opening minutes of the final quarter when he hauled in a Lothridge pass on his own 11-yard line, after Tech had driven to the Missouri 25.

Russell's interceptions were among four that kept Lothridge's aerial threats minimized. Roger Phillips, a stocky guard, also intercepted a pass.

* * * *

LOTHRIDGE managed to complete only five of 15 passes for 68 yards and was under continual harrassment by a Missouri line headed by end Conrad Hitchler.

L.A. IN AWARDS SWEEP

Top Sporting News Accolade to Bailey

Los Angeles made a clean sweep of the baseball men of the year awards for the major leagues Saturday in the 27th annual selections by the Sporting News.

Besides granting its highest accolades to Fred Haney and Bill Rigney of the Angels and Maury Wills and Don Drysdale of the Dodgers, the national baseball weekly named ex-Wilson High star Bob Bailey as the minor league player of the year.

BAILEY

Bailey, the 19-year-old bonus baby who is expected to become the regular Pittsburgh third baseman this season, batted .299, drove in 108 runs and slugged 28 home runs for Columbus of the International League.

The Sporting News named Haney, general manager of the Angels, executive of the year and Rigney manager of the year. Wills was named player of the year and Drysdale pitcher of the year.

The Angels also won another honor when Jack Quinn, general manager of their class C farm club at San Jose, was named executive of the year for the lower minors. The Sporting News tabbed Ben Geraghty of Jacksonville as minor league manager of the year and George Sisler Jr. of Rochester executive of the year for the high minors.

CATCHES TD PASS IN LAST MINUTE

First Negro on South Team Hero in Dixie Victory, 15-14

MIAMI (UPI)—Randy Kerbow of Rice hurled an 80-yard touchdown pass to Jackson State's Willie Richardson — first Negro to play for the South in the North-South game—with 37 seconds left Saturday to lead the dandies from Dixie to a 15-14 upset victory.

Kentucky's Jerry Woolum then heaved a two-point conversion pass to his own teammate, Dave Gash, in the shadows of the poorly lighted Orange Bowl to defeat the eight-point favorites from north of the Mason and Dixon line.

It was a mish-mash, in a game which started in 80-degree heat and bright sunshine and ended in darkness—even for the official scorer. For Woolum was credited with the whole heroic bit and only later was it announced that Kerbow had hurled the desperation pass which paid off.

Richardson stood high among the South's heroes in this game put on by the Shrine for crippled children, gathering in two touchdown passes to win the South's most valuable player honors. And Bob Paremore of Florida A&M, who followed Richardson into the game in the last quarter to become the second Negro to compete for the Southerners, was voted the game's sportsmanship award.

Most valuable honors for the North went to Detroit's Jerry Gross, who passed to Lonny Sanders of Michigan State for the first touchdown and set up the second which Dave Francis of Ohio State banged over from the one.

Miami Outclassed by Houston, 49-21

ORLANDO, Fla (UPI)— Hard-driving sophomore Joe Lopasky exploded for four touchdowns to lead the University of Houston to a 49-21 shocker over Miami of Ohio here Saturday in the 17th annual Tangerine Bowl.

A crowd of 7,500 saw Lopasky, a stocky 190-pound speedster from Lehman, Pa., score on a 70-yard punt return, a 13-yard pass from quarterback Billy Roland, and runs of three and four yards.

Directed by sophomore passing star Ernie Kellermann, Miami jumped to a 7-0 lead after five minutes of play on Kellerman's nine-yard pass to Gerald Myers.

Alternating his ground attack with Lopasky and fullback Bobby Brezina, Roland brought the Cougars back with a 52-yard drive climaxed by Lopasky's three-yard plunge.

Roland hit 11 of 17 passes for 199 yards as he mixed up his running and passing attack for an explosive second-quarter scoring spurt of 28 points to put the game on ice for Houston.

ASTRONAUT? AILING BOY WANTS AFL STAR

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—An Alabama boy turned down a Texas Children's Hospital nurse when she told him she could arrange for an astronaut to visit him.

"I'd rather see Charlie Tolar," replied Gary Smith, 9, who is hospitalized with Hodgkins disease.

Tolar, fullback for the American Football League Houston Oilers, made Gary's wish come true Saturday.

Tolar visited the youngster and gave him two toys and a football autographed by the Oiler team that is to seek its third straight AFL championship Sunday in a game with the Dallas Texans.

Gary is a son of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Smith, Spring Hill, Ala.

"Gary's ambition is to be a quarterback," said Mrs. Smith.

CHAMP COACHES IN PRO BOWL

Vince Lombardi of the Green Bay Packers and Al Sherman of the New York Giants, pro football's winningest coaches, Saturday accepted positions as head coaches of the West and East respectively for the NFL's Pro Bowl game Jan. 13 in the Coliseum.

It'll be a rematch of their World championship meeting Dec. 30 at New York's Yankee Stadium, and for the title game loser, a chance for a measure of revenge.

This is the second time as head Pro Bowl coach for both Lombardi and Sherman.

The 49-year-old Packer coach directed the West to a 35-31 victory in 1961. Sherman coached the East last January and absorbed a 31-30 defeat.

The 39-year-old Sherman is bringing a Pro Bowl "Iron Man," Andy Robustelli, as one of his assistants. Sherman's other aide is Ken Kavanough, who directs end play and pass patterns.

Lombardi is bringing Bill Austin and Phil Bengston as his helpers.

Benefit for Wilson at Marine Stadium

By DAVE TAYLOR

Critically injured popular Southland speedboat driver Red Wilson will get a thundering vote of confidence from one of the fastest fields of powerboats ever assembled on the West Coast at Marine Stadium today. Action begins at 12:30 p.m.

"Red's Regatta", staged to provide financial assistance to the hospitalized Wilson and his family, will be packed with a full gamut of world record holders from Mickey Remund in the 48-inch hydro class to Berry McCown, holder of the world's quarter-mile drag record.

Included in the array of speedsters will be Jim Hurtubise, one of the brightest of Indianapolis stars and former Speedway rookie of the year who joined the benefit regatta competition Friday.

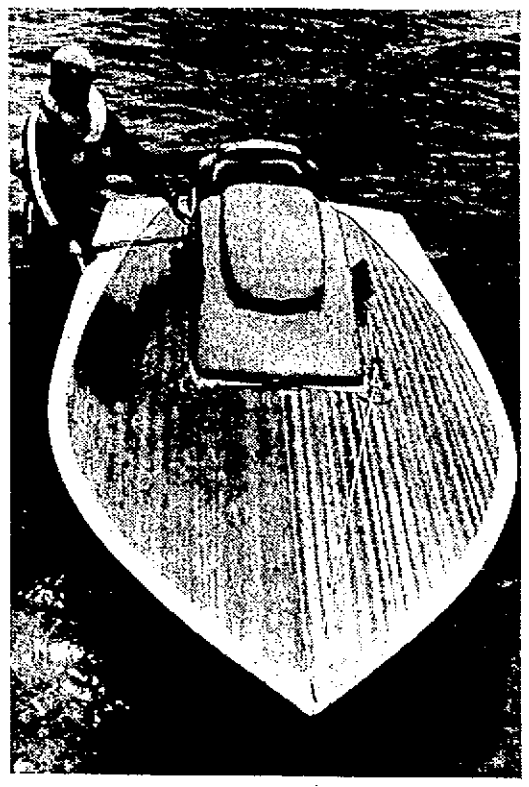

Hurtubise, far from a neophyte at motorboat racing, was second in the 1961 Salton Sea "500". He led the same race this year when his boat blew up under him and sank. He'll be running his speedy E-Runabout Daddy's Baby in Sunday's racing.

* * * *

FEATURED event in the nine class competition will be an attack on Berry McCown's 154 mph world drag mark. Running against McCown's Banazi will be 14 challengers headed by nationally rated champion Bob Ellis in Rudy Ramos' former world mark holder Golden Thing.

Others among the 80 contestants include Marion Beaver, Parker, Ariz., in his favorite 225 hydro Uncle Gummy, Leroy Penhall in Hot Cinders, Ed Olson with his Cream Puff VIII, Tony Maricich with Suddenly and SK champions Tun Towle and Carl Dethlefsen.

The regatta, sponsored by Southern California Speedboat Club and J. C. Agajanian, offers no trophies or prize money. Total proceeds will be donated to Wilson, seriously injured when his boat flipped at 92 mph in a recent Parker Dam, Ariz., race. Everyone involved in the race from drivers to gatemen are donating their services to the Wilson benefit.

35,000 WATCH ELORDE SCORE EASY VICTORY

MANILA (UPI) — World junior lightweight champion Gabriel (Flash) Elorde unleashed power-punching Saturday night to score a unanimous decision over veteran Solomon Boysaw of Cleveland in a 10-round non-title bout before a capacity crowd of 35,000.

The 27-year-old champion caught fire in the eighth round when he knocked Boysaw down for a two-count. Elorde then slammed a powerful right to Boysaw's head that sent the American reeling and a follow-up left hook brought Boysaw down near the ropes.

Referee Federico Reyes scored it 48-41, while judges Alfredo Quiazon and Jamie Valencio had it 48-43, respectively, all for Elorde.

AT RANCHO, JAN. 4-7

Palmer Joins LA Open Field

Arnold Palmer, winner of almost every major tournament in golf, will make his eighth attempt to capture the $55,000 Los Angeles Open, president Ed Davis of the sponsoring Los Angeles Junior Chamber of Commerce announced Saturday.

PGA tournament manager Jim Gaquin informed the sponsors Palmer will be on hand for the Los Angeles Open when play starts Jan. 4 over the Rancho course and that he hoped to be in front Jan. 7 at the conclusion of the final round.

Palmer in 1962 had one of the best years in golfing history. His official winnings came to an all-time high of $81,448, and that was despite not engaging in tournament play during the final five months.

* * * *

BY THE time Palmer turned his attention to other activities including a television series and touring with Gary Player, he had won eight tournaments. His major victories were in the Masters for the third time, the British Open and the Las Vegas tournament of Champions. And it took a playoff for Jack Nicklaus to beat him for the top money in the U.S. Open.

But the best Palmer has been able to do in the Los Angeles Open was a tie for 10th in 1959. In fact, two years ago he got his greatest attention when he shot a 12 on the par-5 ninth hole, hitting four balls out of bounds.

Season tickets for the tourney, priced at $7.50 for all days, and now available at all golf courses and ranges.

Nu-Pike Remains Unbeaten

Long Beach Nu-Pike, not given a ghost of a chance to represent the United States in water polo in the upcoming Pan-American Games, is within two victories of achieving the impossible.

The local poloists claimed two more wins Saturday in the Lynwood Natatorium and will try to eliminate once-beaten San Francisco in a match today at 11 a.m. .

Commerce, the other unbeaten club, will try to oust El Segundo in the other match at 10 o'clock. A Long Beach and Commerce victory would set up a title game at 3 o'clock.

* * * *

SATURDAY, Nu-Pike ousted New York AC from the competition with a 13-3 win, and followed that up by handing El Segundo its first loss, 6-4.

Murdock Fraser and Chuck Bittick continued to carry the offensive load, combining for 14 goals in the two games. In each game, Long Beach pulled away in the second half.

Goalie Bill Russell's play has been superb, but so has that of the entire team, which also includes Ken and Mike Smith, Dave Coon, Ken Hamdorf, Tom Hermstead, Paul Zack, Dave Ballard, Charles Mackh and Dick Johnson.

HURRICANE RUINS HOLLY

scored 10 seconds after the tip. But then the 49ers went 11 minutes before they bagged their second field goal as Loyola assumed a 16-8 lead.

During the first nine minutes of play, Loyola's defense limited the 49ers to only six shots from the field. Brian Quinn led the Lions' attack with three field goals and three free throws.

* * * *

LONG BEACH came to life as Andersen, Dick Montgomery and Hodge scored and with 8:30 left in the half, the 49ers closed the gap to 16-13. Loyola shot ahead by 10, 30-20, as Flanagan and reserve guard Wayne Boehle found the range.

The Lions maintained this advantage and led 34-25 at the mid-point.

Coach Dick Perry's club caught fire at the outset of the second half and with 9:53 left pulled to within one point, 41-40. Hodge put LBSC ahead, 42-41, 20 seconds later, but the Lions regained the lead on Mike Lawler's eight-foot jumper.

* * * *

LOYOLA then lost two of its regulars, Dick McCloskey and Flanagan, on personals.

Bobby Holland, Johnny Johnson and Andersen hit four successive baskets with five minutes left on the clock and Loyola, weakened on the boards by the loss of Flanagan, in particular, never was a threat again.

him very badly to top our offer."

Guthrie, in typical candor of today's football heroes, said he signed with the Chargers "because I like their coaching staff and the other men in the organization I met. I believe the American Football League has a great future, and my greatest opportunity is with San Diego."

Ram general manager Elroy (Crazylegs) Hirsch and scout Jim David had met with Guthrie this week, and David was in attendance at the Bluebonnet Bowl. Hirsch was at the Tangerine Bowl at Orlando, Fla., where tackle Tom Nomina of Miami of Ohio, the Rams No. 2 pick, was playing.

There was no word of Nomina signing, and thus far, the Rams have a perfect record. They have yet to sign a draftee while having lost their No. 1 (second), No. 3, No. 4, No. 6 and No. 16 choices.

Saturday, they were stung by a Yellow Jacket.

IT'S REAL RUGGED

That's Why Niven Like Actor's Life

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — People keep asking David Niven why he wants to be an actor. His answer:

"In my present movie, 'The Pink Panther,' in which I make love to Capucine and Claudia Cardinale, I work in a long masquerade party sequence in which I wear a gorilla suit.

"A typical day goes like this. I wake up in my sumptious hotel suite and ring for my breakfast in bed.

"The waiter says 'Good morning, Mr. Niven' and I have breakfast. The elevator boy smiles and greets me warmly as do the doorman, my chauffeur, the gatemen, my makeup man and the wardrobe man who puts me into my monkey suit.

"Everyone on the set dutifully greets me. I go before the cameras and utter my dialogue for day—the sound 'uggh.'

"Then I reverse the process and it's 'Good evening, Mr. Niven,' all the way back to the hotel where I have my dinner in bed, studying my 'uggh' for the next day's shooting.

"That's why I want to be an actor."

LINDA'S BOOK

It Tells 10 Pct of Loves

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — When an actress writes her autobiography does she reveal everything? Does she tell the whole truth?

Linda Christian hedged.

"I was as honest as I could be without being plagued by lawyers for the rest of my life," she said.

Formerly married to the late Tyrone Power and currently the wife of English actor Edmond Purdom, the sloe-eyed beauty candidly writes about several affairs in her book, "Linda."

Among them was a fling with the late Errol Flynn. Did Linda report on all her romances?

"Goodness no," she said, as if goodness had little to do with it. "I mentioned only about 10 per cent of my love affairs. People wouldn't believe me if I told the whole truth!"

* * * *

STILL beautiful and provocative, Linda is a lusty woman with a voluptuous figure and a sense of humor. Asked about the men in her life, she said:

"Errol was a romantic figure in my life. My love for him was hero worship when I was just a girl. Tyrone, however, was the genuine love of my life."

Where does that leave Mr. Purdom, who is working in England now?

"That leaves Edmond in the doghouse I guess," she said, adding, "I fall in love with actors because I'm a glutton for punishment. Actors love themselves so much all you can do is join in the adoration."

THE SAME GIRL, but on the right Eva Six, blonde Hungarian actress is wearing a wig for her American film debut, "Bikini" in which she plays a Filipino guerilla.

Eva Six--She Looks Like Monroe, Talks Like Gabor

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Eva Six is a shapely Hungarian actress who looks like Marilyn Monroe and talks like Zsa Zsa Gabor.

It follows naturally that in her American movie debut she dons a dark wig and plays a Filipino guerrilla. That's the way things are done in Hollywood.

Title of the movie is "Bikini." Miss Six could fill a Bikini admirably, but the movie is about the World War II atoll, not swimwear.

* * * *

IT WAS indirectly because of the late Miss Monroe that Eva got into American movies. She had acted in Hungary on screen and stage.

Then came the revolution. A Freedom Fighter, she escaped on a truck to Austria.

A family in San Diego sponsored her entry into this country.

"I was so happy to be free that I never even thought about acting again. I worked as a waitress, ran my own delicatessen, did all sorts of jobs and loved them all.

* * * *

"WHEN I first came here, people would stop me on the street and ask me for my autograph. I would ask them why. They would answer: 'Aren't you Marilyn Monroe?'

Soon after Marilyn's death, an agent persuaded her to take up acting again. She wanted to use her right name—Eva Kennedi.

But producer James Nicholson figured the Hungarian version of the first family's name would be too much. So he gave her the name Six and put her under contract.

SINATRA RATES HIS SON

'More Actor Than Singer'

By DORIS KLEIN

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—In a corner of the recording studio, a slim boy who bore a striking resemblance to the singer was staring into space, bobbing to the rhythm.

When Count Basie's band bounced the last beat, 18-year-old Frank Sinatra Jr. walked over to his dad.

"How did I do last . . ." the boy started to ask. His father interrupted, "Just a minute, son."

* * * *

AS YOUNG Frank walked away, a press agent told senior, "He's anxious to know what you thought of his performance last night."

"I know," said Frank, "but he can wait. He's a little young."

What Junior didn't know then was that his father had cut short his recording rehearsal the night before to watch young Frank perform on Jack Benny's television show.

* * * *

IT WAS THE first time father had seen son perform and the first time young Frank had appeared on a coast-to-coast hookup.

"Frank laughed and roared through the whole show," a crony who was there said afterward. "He kept saying, 'the kid is really good.'"

* * * *

WHAT DOES Frank think of his boy as a performer?

"He's more of an actor than a singer. His tonal quality's pretty good. But he needs more training. He's studying music and I want him to finish college."

No Licenses for Boaters

The Assembly Interim Committee on Public Utilities and Corporations has decided after lengthy hearings throughout the state not to recommend that California boaters be licensed. That apparently should end the controversy and all boaters should be happy.

However, in ruling against the licenses, the committee's chairman, John C. Williamson, D-Bakersfield, dropped a bombshell on practically all local law enforcement authorities for what he said was extreme laxity in enforcing boating laws. He also said that the committee was not unanimous in its opinion about licenses.

"The committee feels," he said, "that licensing of operators of recreational boats would be a futile gesture because of what the committee considers to be wholly inadequate enforcement of existing boating laws by local governments.

"There is no question but that a drastic improvement in enforcement of existing boating laws would result in a very real increase in water safety and this would seem to be the first order of business."

The committee did approve of a plan to license operators of passenger-for-hire vessels who are not already covered by federal licenses. It seems rather ridiculous to this columnist that the state should have overlooked such licenses for so many years.

THE COMMITTEE REPORTED that 43 of California's 58 counties are vitally concerned with waterways, but that only 12 of those 43 are making a reasonable effort to enforce existing boating laws. "Thirty-one counties," said the report, "are making a bare minimum effort."

The committee refused to specify the counties, but consultant Ray King, who drafted the report, said that each county should examine its own program and reach its own conclusions.

The committee also recommended that:

The state maintain a file of persons convicted of violating boating laws and supply the information to the courts.

Gasoline taxes paid by boaters be used for building small-craft harbor facilities and coastal harbors of refuge.

Profits, if any, from numbering boats be used for improvement of recreational boating throughout the state.

Construction of coastal harbors of refuge be undertaken as soon as possible.

The committee did not mention the recent report by the Division of Small Craft Harbor that teen-age operators appear to be involved in twice as many accidents as their seniors.

THAT REPORT SHOOK UP the California Boating Council, Inc., and Mrs. Jan Mower, of Rodeo, manager of the CBC, disagreed with methods used by the state agency in arriving at such figures.

The division said that 160 boating accidents occurred in the first half of 1962 and 53 persons were killed.

Mrs. Mower said that the way division grouped ages resulted in some newspapers pushing the panic button and falsely accusing teen-age boat operators.

"Even if the state's figures were right, percentage-wise," said Mrs. Mower, "only .194 percent of the teen-age group were involved in boating accidents, which is nothing to get excited about. We most certainly challenge the division's figures."

Lachlan Richards, chief of the SCH division, in defending the figures, said that he didn't want to become involved in any argument with the CBC or any other organization.

"We feel our figures are completely accurate," he said. "We said in the report that it was only a trend. We have no purpose to show that any age group causes more accidents than others. However, it is not fair to be blaming persons 40 years of age and older for a higher percentage of accidents than they actually experience. People can shoot holes in any statistics."

IF YOU HAVE BEEN thinking that the waterfowl season is bad, you just don't realize how right you were. Last weekend, 418 hunters on the entire Imperial Waterfowl Management Area killed 336 birds, not even one bird per man. Broken down, the figures showed 202 ducks, 130 geese and four coots.

Among the geese were 10 fully protected Ross's geese. Eight were killed Saturday and two Sunday.

The Department of Fish and Game cited all those who killed the protected species. Wardens pointed out that while Ross's geese resemble snow geese in plumage, they are smaller. In fact, a Ross's goose is not much larger than a mallard duck.

Memo to Mrs. Richard C. Goodrich, of 2922 Radnor Avenue, who wrote, and to other parents who telephoned about the Hunter Safety course for youngsters.

There will be a class starting Jan. 3 in Millikan High School. Pertinent details about that class and others to follow will be printed in this column at a later date.

Because of the fact that the Hunter Safety Program is operated on a volunteer basis, openings for pupils are limited in each class. There are just not enough instructors to take care of the demand.

Yuletide Features Caliente Program

The Yuletide Purse, a six furlong sprint for 3-year-olds and up, heads today's racing card at Caliente.

KELSO 5-1 FAVORITE AS BOOK OPENS

AGUA CALIENTE (AP)—Kelso, "horse of the year" for 1962, opened Saturday as the 5-1 favorite in the Caliente winter book for the $100,000-added Santa Anita Handicap Feb. 23.

Listed at 6-1 were Ridan and Olden Times. Kelso has been nominated by the Bohemia Stables but it is not definite yet whether he will compete at Santa Anita.

Fred W. Hooper's Crozier was booked at 10-1 and Four-and-Twenty from the Alberta Ranches was next at 12-1.

Longest shot on the board was Earl Scheib's Easy Prey, 1,000-1.

'Anita Again Lures Turf United Nations

By ERNIE MASON

Ever since Santa Anita amazed the racing world by posting a $100,000 purse for the first running of the Santa Anita Handicap in 1938 and the Irish-bred Azucar won it, foreign horses have been attracted to the track and its big race.

Azucar was the first of seven foreigners to win the classic 1¼-mile race that highlights the Santa Anita meeting.

The meeting which opens next Wednesday again has a representative band of foreign horses either on the grounds or headed here and 21 imported horses have been nominated for the Santa Anita Handicap which will be contested Feb. 23.

In addition to Azucar, Irish-bred winners emerged in two other renewals of the Santa Anita Handicap — Noor in 1950 and Poona II in 1955.

ARGENTINA sent three winners of the race to Santa Anita — Kayak II in 1939, Talon in 1948 and Miche in 1952 — while Olhaverry, the white horse from Chile, won in 1947.

The invitational Washington D.C., International Stakes helped provide some of the foreign horses which were nominated for this winter's running of the Santa Anita Handicap.

Four of the horses who participated in the International on the grass are pointing for the Santa Anita Handicap. They are Zaheg from Russia, Lebon M L from France, Pardao from Ireland and Porfido from Argentina.

DURING THE 25-year racing history of Santa Anita, 11 counties and five continents have sent thoroughbreds to Santa Anita where they scored stakes victories.

This year Santa Anita is offering eight stakes over the grass course, climaxing with the $100,000 San Juan Capistrano Handicap. These races range from 6½ furlongs to the full course distance of about 1¾ miles for the San Juan Capistrano.

The San Juan Capistrano, run on the main dirt track until 1954, also has had a goodly number of foreign winners including Miss Grillo, Noor, St. Vincent, Amerigo and Olden Times who was bred in England but foaled in California.

And just as the horses that have been a part of Santa Anita's history came from many lands, so have some of the top riders and trainers.

The most famous of the foreign-born riders is the all-time jockey champion, Johnny Longden, who was born in England, raised in Canada and won riding fame in the United States. In recent years, Latin-America has sent many of the top riders to the track like Manuel Ycaza and Braulio Baeza.

Of the foreign-born trainers perhaps the most notable is Horatio A. Luro who saddled Miss Grillo to win the San Juan Capistrano in 1949 and Talon to capture the Santa Anita Handicap in 1948.

The Wild Waves Say . . .

By Iola Masterson • I, P-T Women's Editor

TONIGHT THE woods around Park Estates will be filled with music—or a reasonable facsimile—tuneful enough to delight residents of the area.

"Warble like angels"

It's the night of the traditional caroling party which Joan and Don Stage have had for years. Cocktails and buffet at 6 p.m. will precede the strolling and caroling throughout the neighborhood of about 70 friends, including the children who join the adults at 8:30 for the singalong.

When they first started, the singers used to carry candles for the procession. Now they carry flashights. Too many ruined cashmeres and furs.

When they've all warbled the final "Noel" they are invited to stop by Susie and Norm Meager's for steaming cups of hot cocoa as a nightcap.

* * * *

NOBODY NEEDS to look in the yellow pages for playmates going at a party pace these days. Least of all not friends of Norma and George Trammell or of their sons' today.

This is the date of their annual cocktail and oyster party, a favorite with friends and friends' families through the years. An old fashioned oyster bar, loaded with crushed ice, bowls of sauce and enough oysters in the half shell to pave the floor of Alamitos Bay, is always the main attraction. When guests have had their fill of the seafood delicacy, there is yet another buffet to turn to for ham, cheese fondue, et al other good stuff like that there.

* * * *

NEVER LET IT be said that John Richards isn't a brave man, that Nada is not an understanding wife, or that friends who attend their open house on Christmas day won't have a good time.

It seems that John has knowledge of an ancient and venerable champagne punch. He has never before made it, however, until this year. And he has been making it for three months. That's how long it takes to concoct.

The ingredients? Wow! For any Milquetoast types among their friends there will be liquids of lesser atomic power to sip.

* * * *

WHAT THE weatherman doesn't provide in the way of warmth tonight, Wanda and Dr. John Sewak will for guests at their indoor-outdoor Christmas open house from 8 to 11 p.m.

The patio will be bright—and toasty—not only from the glow of lights, but from a roaring blaze in the fire pit, but from strategically placed charcoal braziers and electric heaters, to boot.

About 130 have been invited to warm themselves in another highly satisfactory way—with a good glass of holiday cheer around the wassail bowl!

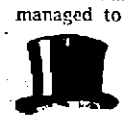

* * * *

COCKTAILS, a colorful boat ride, then dinner was order of the night when Dee and Don Horton "chauffered" Mayor Ed Wade, grand marshal of the Parade of Lights, wife, Mary Wade, and Diane Olson, "Miss Welcome," during the final night of the waterways spectacular.

Preceding the canals and bay trip, the Hortons entertained at cocktails in their home for their boating guests plus Margaret and Frank Mansuy, Aggie and Johnny Miller, Dottie and Bunnie O'Hare, Jean and Keith Brockett, Olga and Vic Le Blanc, Juanita and George Heinrich, Don's mother, Cecelia, and Dee's mother, Stella Czerniawski. Hmmm. Bet Dee was relieved when a nice guy with a plain name like Horton proposed. But I digress. After the parade they all re-met at the Long Beach Yacht Club for dinner.

* * * *

KNOW WHAT secret insurance man, Bill Wilson, managed to keep under his hat from most of his friends? The fact that he and Jacqueline Gaillard were going to be married and sail away on a honeymoon aboard the Monterey.

"Secret well kept"

The two said their vows in a quiet ceremony in California Heights Methodist Church last Sunday; sailed for Australia, Tahiti, New Zealand and Hawaii Monday. They'll be home Jan. 15.

* * * *

IT'LL BE mele Kalikimaka to a fare-thee-well at Florence and Ed Iliff's home Tuesday—not so much because of the happenings of the 25th, but because of their post Kilikimaka trip to Hawaii.

With friends from B'Hills they'll fly to Honolulu Thursday for a New Year's celebration and a lazy stay at a guest plantation on the Garden Island of Kaui. But there'll be crying in their pineapple juice Jan. 5, date for return from the short, shapely trip.

* * * *

SUPPING AND SIPPING at an elegant holiday party at Eleanore and Judge Charlie Smith's the other night was definitely the thing to do for Eleanore's Las Hermanas gang. So they did. Munching on the famous "Eleanore hors d'oeuvres" were special guests of the evening, Ola and Don Murphy, "Ag" and Mark Kuffel, Marion and Bob Ritner, Jerry and Copeland Green and Audrey and Bob Ritner.

* * * *

A "BEVERAGES and snacks" party was Margaret and John Davis' salute to the season for their friends on Saturday night—an annual, and very happy, custom.

* * * *

NO MUSS, no fuss at Thelma and Lee Denny's this long, lovely, yet traditionally hectic time. They're up at her sister and brother-in-law's, Esther and Ned Hathaway's, home in Los Angeles where they traditionally go for the holiday.

* * * *

AS CLOSE to the merriest spot in town as any one place COULD be, under the circumstances of Dec. 22, was Ann and Dr. Gordon Aiken's home when they hosted a houseful of old college friends from SC and Long Beach City College. A few of their ex-campus caper mates on hand Saturday were Janet and Bob Lichtenhan, Donna and Jack Ratkey (now of Phoenix—here especially for the party and to stay over for Christmas), Beverly and Norm Haney, Carol and Gil Tyner, Sharon and Dick Chard and Carolee and Stan Carroll.

Beautiful Tree, Family Project

LOOKING CLOSELY to see if those boys are paying attention, Janie Williamson, granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Paap, reads a Christmas story. She is seated in the Paaps' annual Christmas interior display at their home, 238 Roycroft Ave.

For many years Mr. and Mrs. John Paap, 238 Roycroft Ave., have had a family project of elaborate interior Christmas lighting and home decoration. In the past 10 years, they have won two sweepstakes, two first-place and one second-place awards in city-wide contests.

Although the prizes are fun, the rewarding pleasure is in the thousands of people each year who drive up, stop their cars, walk across the lawn and admire the display, according to Mr. Paap.

The Paaps have had a living room full of electric trains with a track around the Christmas tree, a scene featuring Santa Claus and a festive village. A prize-winner two years ago was built around a manger scene for which three wheelbarrow loads of dirt were hauled into the living room.

THIS YEAR an 86-pound green silver fir tree, 8½ feet tall and 8½ feet wide at the bottom, has been flocked white and each branch heavily wired to hold 1,560 rare ornaments.

A six-foot-tall mechanical Santa Claus with a flowing spun glass beard, white velvet pants and a gold lame coat stands at one end of the tree, greeting two little boys in red sleepers.

The ornaments on the tree make the walk across the lawn for a close look more than worth while. There are tiny candelabra, 14-inch giant globes, hand-painted faces on tinsel balls, pearl bicycles, angels, a manger scene in a glass ball and other fascinating baubles that have been in the family for almost half a century. Many are imported from Germany, Czechoslovakia and Denmark.

THE TREE is on a revolving base and plays Christmas carols as it revolves.

The exterior of the home has been decorated with strings of colored lights and a lighted star of Bethlehem on the chimney.

Mr. and Mrs. Paap are assisted in their decorating tradition by their sons, Jay and Ricky, and their daughter, Mrs. Albert Williamson and her children, Johnny, Jay, Jennifer and Janie.

Harry S. Arrasmiths Being Honored Today

Have Money in Bag, Santa; Local Femmes Want Everything From Horse Blankets to Cold Cash

By MARY ELLIS
I, P-T Fashion Editor

Dear Santa: You'd better have lots of green stuff in the bag this Christmas.

Because most every woman wants money, lots more money — but only, Santa, if you're a husband or close relative.

She also likes fine jewelry, elegant clothing, luxurious wool sweaters, good perfume, lingerie, books and magazines, gloves and candy.

The green stuff, she says, is good for taking advantage of after-Christmas sales, for paying off bills and for getting those things she wants that she didn't get for Christmas in the first place.

* * * *

THESE COLD CASH facts came to light in a national —also local—survey among wives, students and career girls on gifts they'd most like to find under the tree Christmas morning.

In the national survey, 36 per cent of the women questioned listed real fine jewelry and watches as their first choice. Books and sweaters ran a dead heat at 31 per cent.

Money and gift certificates were preferred by 28 per cent followed by clothing, furs, lingerie, handbags and good perfume, in that order.

* * * *

GOLF AND BOWLING enthusiast Mrs. Daniel W. Farnham is among the large group of local femmes who wants money (from the near-and-dear) in her Christmas nylon.

Other Santas please bring sports clothing for golfing or bowling, says she.

Housewife and clubwoman Mrs. Robert Barmeyer is dreaming of a pink Thunderbird—pink only, please. "But I don't think Santa will bring it in any color," moans she. "I put in the same order — unsuccessfully — last year."

Mrs. Willis S. Kerr wants a new house—and has it. The Kerrs will move into their just-finished, custom-built home in the La Mirina addition Christmas Eve or Christmas Day.

* * * *

MRS. BILL BOYD, wife of the local Chamber of Commerce public relations exec, has home; wants chairs. Two swivel type, please.

If they're too big for the chimney (or pocketbook), she'll settle for "some expensive perfume — because that's something I won't buy for myself."

Local model agency owner Elda Barry wants to be wrapped for Christmas in a full-length mink coat.

Newspaper gal Joyce Kent, who already has her two front teeth, wants an electric toothbrush . . . and to go with the resulting pearly gleam, a jeweled cashmere sweater.

Lu Duvall isn't laying down any laws for Christmas. She already has her present—she's just been admitted to the California Bar.

* * * *

IN A PHILOSOPHICAL mood, Rick Rackers chairman Mrs. C. Robert Langslet wants peace and goodwill, health and happiness for all.

"If we have all those," says she, "material things will take care of themselves."

Local realtor Gene Page, who's been head over heels in community projects the past several weeks (vice-president and membership drive chairman for the Naples Improvement Association, chairman of the Women's Chamber of Commerce float for the Naples Parade of Lights, also BPW, church work and you-name-it) asks the impossible—for her, anyway:

She wants peace and quiet!

Most unusual request of all comes from Mrs. Jack Haden, local clubwoman. She wants a horse blanket!

For her quarterhorse, Peteo, that is.

He's going to Bay Meadows next week for his first race," she explains. "And the last time he was up there for workouts, he caught cold."

* * * *

WHICH ALL goes to prove, fella Santas, you can't ever tell about a woman. She may want anything from horse blankets to cold cash.

Besides that, she's been known to look a gift horse in the mouth.

So if you want to keep smiling, better study your gal before buying her Christmas present—but don't ask her, she hates that. Ask a friend or drop a delicate hint.

Otherwise you'll find her returning such things as clothing (wrong size), lingerie and pajamas (wrong size or color), cheap perfume or jewelry (she hates those the most).

Besides, she'll need some extra cash after Christmas to buy what she wants.

Gift Wrap, Please!

Even the Pros Get Tied in Knots

By MARY NETH

If wrapping up Christmas has you in a tangle, pity the girl in the department store.

It's a safe bet that if she's behind the gift wrap counter, she's knee-deep in tissue paper and up-to-her-ears in rush orders.

Take, for example, the girls at The Broadway. Their job of turning out some 300 gift packages a day is a scramble with problems knottier than just tying on bows.

But, holiday onslaught or not, they stand firmly behind their motto "if you can buy it, we can wrap it."

Sometimes it's no small job.

Ever gift wrap a living room chair, or an ironing board, or, for that matter, a tether ball pole or a rocking horse?.

They have and they've learned not to wilt (noticeably, at least) when a shopper-on-the-run deposits one and gasps out wrap it up fancy, I'll be back in five minutes."

BUT, THE BIGGEST HEADACHE is boxes. "We have every size of cardboard container imaginable, but sometimes the shape of a fashionable new handbag just can't be imagined," says Mrs. Kenneth Beaman, head of the department.

What then? "The girls make a corrugated one—quick," she says. "When it comes to sizing-up, they need a sort of second sight—there is no time for trial and error."

Also needed: an artistic flair, a streak of Scotch thrift and, of course, nimble fingers.

"One of those many-armed Hindu goddesses would be a surefire success around here," says Mrs. Beaman. "We need all the hands we can lay our hands on."

THE STORE, which doubles its staff for the stepped-up Santa season, hasn't as yet drawn any multi-armed applicants. But, it does have a top crew of extras (housewives and college girls) who return year after year.

"They're accustomed to working in an atmosphere that would make a riviter wilt. And, they all have real talent when it comes to prettying up a package."

And who asks for the fanciest wraps?

"The men," she says. "Women are more conservative, they usually take the free courtesy pack."

But, don't let this fool you. All that glitters is not necessarily gold, for according to Mrs. Beaman, it's the least expensive gift that often comes in the most elaborate package.

She sees it as a trend. "The idea is to make a $5 present look like a $10 one," she says.

Another trend—the rage for one-for-all gifts. "It's the painless way to shop. You pick out 100 coat hangers or 80 desk calendars and have them wrapped individually."

TO THE GIRLS in the service department, who'd cheerfully wrap an elephant (if you could buy one in the store), such big orders are all in a day's work

South Bids Five Hearts

When you make up problems in play you can't always create good bidding at the same time. Says Eddie Kantar, "If you don't like South's bidding, it's my fault. I had to figure some way of getting South to five hearts. Four hearts is too easy."

If South were in six hearts he would win the opening lead; play one trump, cash two high clubs, and try to ruff a club in dummy in order to discard losers on the ace and king of diamonds. Playing at five, South has a far better, but very complicated, play. He starts by letting West hold that first spade trick. Remember South is trying for five hearts—not six.

* * * *

SOUTH wins the second spade, cashes one trump as he would have done at six and goes after the clubs. West ruffs the third club and South throws the last spade from dummy. West has to lead a spade or a diamond. In either instance South wins in dummy and gets rid of his last losing club.

We also see why South ducked that first spade. Had he not done so West could put East in with a spade. East would lead the queen of trumps and dummy would be dead.

He's Impressed--Why Shouldn't She Be?

Dear Molly Mayfield

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

This is my first year at this college and I have pledged a fraternity. It's just great, but it's giving me an inferiority complex.

In one class, a classy girl has really taken my fancy. She didn't notice me though, until the night our fraternity had a function with the sorority she belongs to. Now she is friendly and acts like she's asking for a date.

I want to date her, but I wonder if she only likes me because of my fraternity. Are all girls this shallow and rate boys by what they belong to instead of what they are?—SOMEBODY

DEAR SOMEBODY:

Be a little more elastic, frat friend. The girl may be more impressed with your connections than with the real you—but, so what? If you really like her, second impressions can fix all that.

But why, thinking college man, come to the conclusion all girls may be this shallow? That's surely not thinking in depth. And I bet you'll stick with your shallow thinking no matter what I say.—M.M.

* * * *

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

I'm 29 and have never been kissed. I know I'm ugly and I have the personality of a mud fence. Besides which I'm uneducated. But I'm in love.

I fell for my attractive lady doctor and she is about ready to marry another doctor. I keep faking illness to get to see her and I'm running out of money to pay her. Isn't there something a woman of your experience could say to soothe me?—MR. Z.

DEAR MR. Z.:

You're not faking. You are sick. Sick to think I'd believe a word beyond your disclosure that you're almost 30 and still unkissed. My right eye!—M.M.

* * * *

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

How, oh tell me, how do I curb my husband's "giant" thinking? He insists on accompanying me to market. Once there he heads, like a magnet to filings, to the giant economy-size.

We do not need 100 pounds of flour, 100 pounds of sugar, 100 pounds of potatoes or even a 10-year supply of powdered milk. If markets sold food in box-car containers, he'd be first at the tracks. He doesn't want, you see, to "run out."

It does no good to reason with the man. It does no good to explain he will run out—of space. And though he's an outstanding mate in every other respect and I adore him, we are running out of space.

Please come to my rescue for I have become a

—SUPERMARKET OF MY OWN

DEAR SUPERMARKET OF MY OWN:

My gosh, I'd get a turnstile—and a checkstand to check the man. Then I'd interest the neighbors at least in the produce at hand.

But you may not have my checker inclinations. In which sad case, I guess, professional head shrinking is next. I don't like the term used, usually, but it does seem to fit your giant thinker, hmm?—M.M.

Top Bridge Teams Vie for Trophies Friday

It will be the battle of the century, say bridge fans—with all proceeds going to charity.

The two top teams from the 32 knockout units who participated in last summer's bridge tournament, will meet in a two-session, winners-take-all, including the Bixby trophy, Friday in the Lafayette Hotel Grand Ballroom. Sessions will begin at 2 and 8 p.m.

Featured will be Capt. Erick Paulsen's team—Alex Tschekaloff, Ralph Kempner, Harold Simon and Mike Shuman—and Capt. Richard Walsh's team—Helen Portugal, Morris Portugal, Duke Dartell and Art Baron.

The "battle of the century" will be followed by the Holiday Championships, the Long Beach fifth annual sectional tournament, Dec. 29-Jan. 1 in the Lafayette. The championships will be climaxed by a New Year's party, beginning at 11 p.m. Dec. 31 with dancing, champagne, fun and favors. Robert Sterett is chairman of the Long Beach sectional committee with Jim Chambers tournament director and Marshall Ketchum tournament manager.

* * * *

THE TENDER love story of a shy, young girl and a sullen, embittered puppeteer, "Carnival" co-stars Elaine Malbin of the San Francisco and NBC Opera companies, and David Daniels, recipient a few years ago of the Donalson and Theater World Awards for his performance on Broadway in "Plain and Fancy."

Currently on a 100-city tour of the country, "Carnival" carries with it a company of 50, including its own orchestra and stage technicians.

Two Operas to Debut on West Coast

During the coming season, the Conservatory of the California Institute of the Arts, formerly the Los Angeles Conservatory of Music, plans to present several works which never have been performed on the West Coast. Under the direction of conductor Isaac Van Grove, the works to be presented as a double bill in March are "Robin and Marion," a dramatic pastorale by the 13th century trouvere Adam de la Hale.

The first comic opera, said to be the oldest preserved French play with music on a secular theme, has been arranged for modern performance by Van Grove.

* * * *

THE SECOND work is a revival of "The Beautiful Galatea" by Franz von Suppe. "Galatea" was composed over 100 years ago and contains delightful and scintillating tunes. Both operas will be given in English. Costumes and settings will be created by the fashion and design departments of the Chouinard Art Institute.

Isaac Van Grove is remembered for his conducting at the Chicago Grand and Civic Opera Companies, and as accompanist and coach for Mary Garden, Grace Moore, Edward Johnson, Enrico Caruso, and many others.

Casting for both operas is now in process. For further information, phone or write Dean's office at the Conservatory, 607 S. Parkview St., Los Angeles.

IN SHAKESPEAREAN ROLES

Maurice Evans and Helen Hayes will appear in Southern California for the first time in many years when they bring "Program for Two Players" to Los Angeles Philharmonic Auditorium Jan. 18 and 19. The program is made up of adaptations from 17 of Shakespeare's comedies and tragedies.

Art From Thailand Is Intriguing, Tantalizing

By VIRGINIA LADDEY

More than 50 paintings from Thailand are at Long Beach Museum of Art, 2300 East Ocean Blvd. until Jan. 13. Unfortunately, they are not accompanied by text to explain the provocative, tantalizing goings-on in each scene. Viewing them is rather like seeing a drive-in movie from afar without the benefit of sound.

A general statement hung with the show, circulated by the Smithsonian Institution, states that it is difficult to see these as the Thai, with their background of Buddhism, do. Each painting depicts an episode in the life of Buddha during his incarnation on this earth. The purpose of these is "to instruct, guide, and inspire the devout by holding before their eyes scenes of moral value and religious history."

* * * *

THIS INTENT is similar to that of the painstaking illuminations and altar pieces of Early Christian and medieval days. Similarly, the diety is highlighted in gold leaf, size and position relationships are not rational but accord with hieratic degree, color and pose are not naturalistic but are symbolic and conventional.

Evidence indicates a long tradition in Thai painting, but the damp climate combined with perishable materials (cloth and handmade papers) have left us only those from the 18th century onwards.

Despite conventional form, non-Western perspective, and inaccessible story-line, these works are most enjoyable. A little imagination will infuse the original splendor into the colors. The elaborate dress of the main actors, the arabesque forms, the ornamental patternings bring close the view of life of a far country in a far time.

BUDDHA WAS BORN, miraculously, as Siddhartha, to a queen in 563 (?) B.C., and at an early age began showing evidence of miraculous gifts. He was married to a princess at the age of 16, and was made king. However, upon the birth of his son 13 years later, he realized worldly ties were tightening and left home to find Enlightenment (Nirbanna or Nirvana) as a mendicant ascetic monk.

This way did not prove fruitful and gradually, he understood that a path midway between earthly indulgence and self-mortification was the one of wisdom. He began preaching and sharing the Enlightenment which incurred the wrath of the ascetic monks. These tempted him in many interesting ways and attacked him and his followers.

IN HIS 80TH decade, Buddha knowingly ate spoiled food and passed on to the next life amid many miraculous manifestations.

Buddhist dogma has evidently catalogued the activities of each day in this sacred life, touched on lightly in the above explanation, and the present exhibit illustrates many of these episodes.

Van Gogh Museum Will Be Monument to a Mad Genius

AMSTERDAM, The Netherlands (UPI)—Seventy-two years ago, briefly before his death, Dutch artist Vincent Van Gogh wrote to his brother Theo, "You have certain canvases which even in the midst of ruin retain their serenity."

The ruin Van Gogh referred to was his own turbulent, tormented life. The canvases were his work, his genius.

Van Gogh, known in his time as "the crazy redhead of Arles," knew no peace or stability. But, by act of the Dutch Parliament nearly three quarters of a century later, his paintings will find a setting of serenity and permanence to give mute witness to his talent.

In about five years, the "Van Gogh State Museum" will open its doors in this cultural and business center of The Netherlands.

It will house 150 paintings and 400 drawings by Van Gogh and more than 150 works of such other famous artists as Corot, Daumier, Manet, Onticelli, Pissarro and Toulouse-Lautrec.

The Dutch Government bought the lot not long ago from 72-year-old Vincent William Van Gogh, the Dutch painter's only nephew, at the bargain price of $5,123,565. Nephew William could have got more, perhaps three times as much, by selling them abroad. But he wanted the paintings to stay in the country where his uncle was born and grew up.

* * * *

THE ART TREASURES will be property by the Van Gogh Foundation but will be under the control of the Dutch Government which paid for them.

The only condition to the sale was the museum itself. It was specified that the structure be a state museum named after the painter.

It will stand as a living memorial to the red-haired, freckled youth who grew up to become the eccentric but great painter all the world remembers today.

He was a clergyman's son who flopped as a lay preacher.

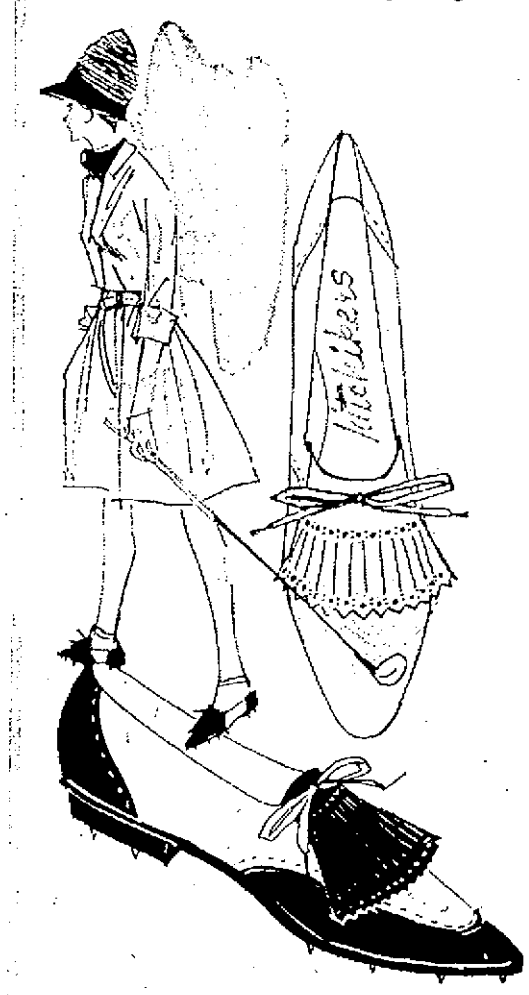

He failed as a lover and worked like a mad man, at one time spending a year in a mental hospital after despair and unhappiness closed in.

Yet the man who once, in a rage, cut off one of his own ears, painted supremely.

ON THE WALLS of the Van Gogh State museum will hang much of the proof. "Pear Tree," "Cornfield," "The Bridge" and "Boats on the Beach," to name just a few.

One Sunday morning, in July, 1890, Van Gogh took a walk in Auvers, where he painted some of his most beautiful landscapes. He shot himself with a pistol and died two days later.

MAJOR & MINOR NOTES

William Primrose Is Superb Violinist

By RACHEL MORTON
I. PP-T Music Critic

Remembering the superb concerts I heard at the Pilgrimage Play Theater when William Primrose, violist, cellist, and Jascha Heifetz, violinist, in string ensemble playing that was the ultimate in perfection, I could not believe it possible when Primrose said to me:

"How was I to earn a living when there were no solo engagements?"

William Primrose, the world's greatest viola player, was telling me about the difficult years during World War II.

"But then came the break of my life," he related. "I happened by chance to run into my good friend, Richard Crooks, the tenor, and he casually asked how I would like to go on tour with him and share the program."

* * * *

NEEDLESS TO SAY, he grasped out eagerly for the opportunity and for the next four years they concertized together all over the United States and Canada.

"Richard Crooks is a great guy," Primrose informed me. "He insisted that my name should be of equal size as his own in the program and in the lights over the theater. And he had it put in the contract."

I asked him how he happened to meet Jascha Heifetz.

"I'm not one to write fan mail," he said, "but after hearing one of Heifetz's records I wrote him a glowing letter. He sent for me, suggesting I might like to play string quartet music with Piatigorsky, Israel Baker and himself. We have been meeting in one another's homes, playing the music we love, for many years."

* * * *

THIS MARVELOUS ensemble was heard recently in three sold-out concerts in the San Francisco Opera House. The recordings of the Pilgrimage Play Theater concerts are just now available with Leonard Pennario, playing the piano part in the Cesar Franck Quintet.

The legend of Heifetz's aloofness was proven true when Primrose told me that he had known Heifetz and played in ensembles with him for ten years before he called him by his first name!

A little incident was amusing as Primrose told it.

* * * *

"ONE NIGHT I stayed up all night drinking beer and watching the Dempsey-Tunney fight. The next night I did not play so well at a concert. To my amazement the first person back stage to congratulate me was Gene Tunney himself. I apologized for my bad playing and told him why it was bad.

"Don't apologize to me!" Tunney exclaimed. "You are a champion and I am an EX-CHAMPION."

William Primrose has been twice married. His first wife was an English woman who studied with the famous lieder singer, Elena Gerhardt. His present, charming wife is a young American whose happiness comes in carefully watching over their three young children. They make their home in Brentwood. Primrose teaches viola at USC and privileged are the pupils who now study with the world's greatest viola player.

Gunter is a sportsman, too—an interest he is instilling in his four children, Robert Jr., 12, David, 8; Karen, 5 and Dawn, 3. The star pitcher on the hospital's soft ball team, he also serves as official chaplain for the City College football squad.

A great camper, Gunter, is described as somewhat of a "desert rat." In fact, it's debatable whether the objects he gathers are just plain rocks or precious relics of Indian pottery.

* * * *

Chaplain Robert F. Gunter

BORN IN Whites Chapel, Ala., the family moved to Pell City, Ala., when he was a 9-year-old. His first interest in sports evidenced itself at the Tennessee Military Institute, Sweetwater, Tenn., where he played football, basketball and went in for track.

Came World War II, and his scene of operation changed. He toured the European theatre for three years as a member of General Patton's Third Army.

Returning to the States in 1947, he entered Howard College, Benningham, Ala., from which he received his Bachelor of Arts degree. Continuing on to the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Tenn., he received his Bachelor of Divinity, and subsequently his Masters in Theology.

* * * *

WITH HIS degrees accounted for he proposed to THE southern girl from Talladega, Ala., whom he had met at Howard College and was accepted. Mrs. Gunter is now a registered nurse and in-service instructor at Memorial Hospital.

* * * *

AFTER A year's residency at the North Carolina Baptist Hospital, Winston-Salem, N. C., he became a member of the permanent teaching staff in charge of marriage counseling.

In April, 1960, he accepted his present postion in Long Beach. His work here is non denominational and includes hospital visitation and counseling of patients. Extremely popular and well attended is his 20-week training course for young ministers, as is the class he conducts for seminary students during the summer. The students are given credits at accredited schools.

A Rotarian, Gunter serves on the board of directors of the Red Cross, the TB Association and the Long Beach Council of Alcoholism. He is past president of the Long Beach Ministerial Union.

With little time for hobbies, he concentrates on photography, both stills and movies. It's obvious he enjoys cooking. Otherwise he'd have chosen a real simple recipe, or, at least, given authorship of it to his wife. It's for pizza.

GUNTER'S PIZZA

- 2½ lbs. prepared pizza dough
- 2 lbs. Italian sausage (hot, medium or mixed)
- 2 small cans tomato paste
- ¼ tsp basil
- Oregano
- ¼ tsp. soda
- 2 tsp. salt
- ½ cup diced onion
- ¾ cup diced green pepper
- 1 lb. Mozzarella Cheese
- 1 cup mushrooms, sliced

Let dough rise 1 to 1½ hours. Grease two-15" pizza pans lightly with olive oil.

Cook together: tomato paste, (add 2½ cans of water for each can of paste), soda, salt and 1 teaspoon oregano. Stir and let simmer.

Break up sausage in small pieces and brown lightly, with onion, in small amount of oil. Add to tomato mixture and simmer 1 to 1½ hours. When done, drain excess fat with gravy baster.

Preheat oven 375-400°.

Roll dough very thin. If lightly floured it rolls more easily. Press dough into greased pan and pour sauce, dividing equally. Sprinkle with diced pepper and mushrooms. Slice Mozzarella cheese over top and sprinkle generously with oregano.

Bake 20 minutes, or until crust curls away from edges. Excellent served with olives and cubes of Provolone cheese.

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

A Promise Is a Promise

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am so mad right now I am seeing red! I want to find out if my daughter did the right thing. She is 17 and her name is Annette. Three weeks ago Annette's best girl friend asked if she could borrow her floor length formal for the prom. Annette had just broken up with her steady and had no hopes of going to the prom herself, so she said yes. The night before the prom one of the nicest boys at school called and asked Annette to the prom. She said NO because she had promised her dress to her friend. I say she was a fool. She should have said YES and asked for her dress back. What do you say?—ANNETTE'S MOTHER

ABBY

DEAR MOTHER: I say you should be proud of a daughter who puts her promise to a friend above a date to the prom. Too bad Annette didn't think of "borrowing" a dress from another Cinderella who wasn't going to the ball.

* * * *

DEAR ABBY: Do you have any suggestions on how to handle a 16-year-old son who threatens to beat you to death with his fists? I am 52 and can no longer handle him. I have had to back down from several challenges lately and it is undermining my position of authority. He reads your column. In fact, I think it's the only part of the paper he reads.—DAD

DEAR DAD: Apparently when you were bigger and stronger than your son, you controlled him by the threat of your physical strength. You taught him well that might made right. Now he is reacting to your own harsh form of discipline. Or he might be emotionally disturbed. Consult a doctor on how to re-establish normal relations with him.

DEAR ABBY: There is a boy at school who asks the girls if he can kiss them to see how their lipstick tastes. He says he can tell if their lipstick is expensive or cheap. What do you think of such a boy? He is in the 9th grade—NINTH-GRADE GIRL

DEAR NINTH: When a boy wants a kiss, one excuse is as good as another. But if a girl lets an acknowledged "lipstick taster" get that close, the GIRL is cheap.

* * * *

DEAR ABBY: Please help me. I know what you will think of me when you read the unforgivable thing that I have done. I am married to a wonderful man. I have three beautiful children. They all favor their father. I have reason to believe I am expecting another man's child and I am sick with shame. So many innocent ones will be hurt by it all. Should I tell my husband the baby isn't his? He would surely know it because he and this man are as different as night and day. I have thought of leaving him and the children, but I have no place to go. I have also thought of taking my life and the little life to come, but I can't bear the thought of leaving my children motherless. Please tell me what to do. I am—SUICIDE BENT.

DEAR SUICIDE BENT: Don't tell your husband (or anyone else). The baby could be your husband's. Stay home and resolve to be a good mother to ALL your children, and a good wife to your husband. Pray for forgiveness. (The Lord is merciful.) And ignore all alternatives except remaining where you are and doing your job.

DC-8 Orders at $70 Millions in 2-Week Period

By VERN ANTHONY
Southland Progress Editor

Plans are under way at Douglas Aircraft Division in Long Beach for production of the largest diversified series of orders for the DC-8 jetliner since the first flood of block orders when the program started in 1957.

Six airlines have ordered 10 of the giant swept-wing transports in the past two weeks for a total announced value of nearly $70 million, with necessary spare parts.

Latest in the purchase announcements which came almost daily during the phenomenal fortnight was the order by Delta Airlines last Wednesday for two Series 50 fanjet models to bring their fleet of DC-8s up to an even dozen.

* * * *

OTHER CONTRACTS announced by airlines and Douglas include two Series 50 DC-8s for Air Afrique, one Series 50 for Iberia Air Lines of Spain, two Series 40 DC-8s for Alitalia, one DC-8F for Capitol Airways and two DC-8F Jet Traders for the Flying Tiger Line.

Air Afrique, Capitol and the Flying Tigers had not previously operated Douglas jets and their orders raises the number of DC-8 purchases to 25.

Operated by a consortium of 11 African republics, Air Afrique is the national airline of Cameroon, Central Africa Republic, Congo Ivory Coast, Dahomey, Gabon, Upper Volta, Mauritania, Niger, Senegal and Chad.

THE CONTRACT was signed at ceremonies attended by Cheik Fal, president of the airline; A. V. Leslie, vice president-finance, and M. E. Oliveau, Douglas European vice president.

The contract calls for delivery of Series 50, turbofan-powered Jetliners in October, 1963, and January, 1964. The DC-8s will be operated over routes linking principal cities of the 11 countries with France.

Purchase of a DC-8 by Iberia Air Line of Spain will be that company's sixth Douglas jet transport. The Series 50 intercontinental fan jet will be delivered in September, 1963.

LT. GEN. JULIAN Rubio, president of Iberia, accepted delivery of the airline's fourth DC-8 last October at the Aircraft Division. The fifth Jetliner will be presented to Iberia in May, 1963.

Iberia's association with the company dates back to the 1930's and the DC-1, first of the famous commercial transports.

'CASTLE IN SPAIN' AT ORANGE

Dreams Come True for Area Restaurateur

By KEN KNIGHT

ORANGE — Elegant, sumptuous, luxurious, unique and different — all of these could be used to describe the Villa Fontana, Orange County's newest and most "posh" restaurant.

Situated in the swank 33-acre Town and Country Shopping Center on Flower Street just adjacent to the Santa Ana Freeway, the Villa Fontana is the realization of a dream for Cary Sinclair.

SINCLAIR

The 33-year-old restaurateur, born in Buena Park and reared in Long Beach, has incorporated all his ideas of what a fine restaurant should be into the "villa" — and it shows it.

* * * *

STRETCHED ACROSS one wall is a facing of 400-year-old hand carved Cordovan leathers and opposite it is an intricately formed gate of iron lacing made 200 years ago to serve as the entrance to a castle in Spain.

Then, if this isn't enough, the walls of the two-part dining section are handsomely covered with a wallpaper pattern — one that was painted on by hand.

Gazing down on the diners are statuary collected by Sinclair during his world travels. And diners are served at their tables as they sit in shell-shaped chairs upholstered in antique gold leather.

* * * *

THE HALF-MILLION DOLLAR dining "spa" is based upon the experience gathered by Sinclair during his extensive restaurant experience.

After leaving Long Beach and graduating from City College, Sinclair attended Cornell University and while there became an executive of the nationally known firm of "Restaurant Associates."

While with the firm, he operated some of the organization's largest restaurants.

Returning to Orange County he planned and developed Villa Fontana imitating and incorporating ideas from restaurants he has seen and operated.

* * * *

THE CUISINE is continental and is prepared under the supervision of Rene Schmitt, a graduate of the L'Ecole Hoteliere of France, the top culinary school in Europe.

But despite all the ornaments, decorations and motif, Sinclair bases his success on three precepts:

'Hire the best people," "buy the best food," and "give the best service."

DINING OUTSIDE when weather permits, patrons are warmed by radiant heating and entertained by strolling musicians.

ANTIQUE GOLD LEATHER chairs and antique chandelier are features in Villa's grand salon. Hand-carved rosewood screen serves as room divider.

U.S. Plywood Names New L.B. Manager

William H. Petersen has been named Long Beach manager for United States Plywood Corporation.

Petersen comes to the position from the company's Los Angeles branch where he was an outside salesman. He joined U.S. Plywood in Chicago in 1952, moving to Culver City in 1958 and to Los Angeles in 1961.

Petersen replaces Ray Kelley, who was named assistant director of the company's West Coast Purchasing office in Eugene, Ore.

Economists Stress Tax Cut Factor

Leading economists in the nation expect 1963 will be only moderately good, unless there is a tax cut in the first quarter, according to the 16th annual economists' opinion poll conducted by F. W. Dodge Corp., New York City.

The 209 economists surveyed, representing business, government and universities, do not expect a recession next year, nor do they predict any real buoyancy in the economy.

The first half of 1963 is forecast as a period of no change and the second half as a period of moderate recovery.

THE ECONOMISTS polled in the Dodge survey favor such terms as "stall," "mark time," "dead center" and "sideways" to describe the opening months of 1963. They feel the upward movement in the second half will not be vigorous.

The majority of the economists replying to the survey indicated that their forecasts would be significantly raised if income taxes are reduced early in 1963.

The comment of one of the economists generally reflects the view of the 209 economists participating in Dodge's 16th annual survey:

"The possible reduction of federal taxes will play an important role in the 1963 economic picture. . . . A negative decision from Washington on lower taxes will have a depressing effect on the economy while a contrary decision will accelerate the key economic indicators to new highs."

* * * *

HIGHLIGHTS of the economists' replies follow:

GROSS NATIONAL PRODUCT . . . is predicted to rise to $572 billion in the fourth quarter of 1963. It will total $565 billion for the full year, up 2 per cent from 1962.

CONSUMER SPENDING . . . up 2.5 per cent for the year to $365 billion.

GOVERNMENT SPENDING . . . the fastest rising category of spending; $124 billion in 1963, up 5.5 per cent.

TOTAL CONSTRUCTION . . . another record year, with public projects up sharply offsetting weakness in residential building.

INDUSTRIAL PRODUCTION . . . no change in the yearly average, but a drop in the first six months followed by strong recovery.

HOUSING STARTS . . . down 4 per cent in 1963; private, non-farm starts totaling 1,325,000.

INVESTMENT . . . off 3 per cent at $74.3 billion.

UNEMPLOYMENT . . . per cent unemployed to average 5.9 in 1963.

PRICES . . . wholesale prices steady at 101; consumer prices edging up one per cent to 106.5.

INTEREST RATES . . . about the same or slightly lower.

$17 Million Project Slated by Del Webb at San Diego

One of the largest commercial projects in San Diego history will boost that city's economy beginning next July when the Del E. Webb Corporation launches a $17 million downtown hotel-garage office building complex.

To be known as First National Center, it will bring several innovations in hotel and office building construction and operation.

One skyscraper will house a 700-car garage, a 300-room TowneHouse hotel, and a restaurant, convention hall and cocktail lounge in 24 levels.

Opposite the garage and hotel will be a 20-story office building with First National Bank as prime tenant.

* * * *

CONNECTING the two buildings across "B" Street will be 25-foot-wide pedestrian crosswalks at fifth and eleventh floor levels. Access will be provided from the project to both Marston's department store and the San Diego Athletic Club.

"The eleventh level, where a glass-enclosed concourse will connect plazas around both buildings, and where a restaurant, ballroom and cocktail lounge will be located, will become 'the place to visit,' predicts Webb vice president Richard M. Wartes.

Wartes, as manager of the firm's commercial division, made the announcement in San Diego with representatives of First National Bank and Broadway-Hale department stores, and Ewart Goodwin, leasing agent and president of Percy Goodwin Co.

SQUARE FOOTAGE of both buildings is 750,000. Highest point of the complex will be 279 feet above street level. The ballroom will seat 800, the dining room 250, and the cocktail lounge 165.

Before going to his hotel room on one of the top 11 floors, a guest will be able to register from his car at street level, where a coffee shop is also located.

Architect for First National Center is Flatow, Moore, Bryan and Fairburn of Phoenix and Albuquerque.

PLANNED BY DEL WEBB CORP.
Innovations in office buildings and hotel construction and operation will be incorporated into the First National Center complex to be built and operated by the Del E. Webb Corp. in downtown San Diego. Razing is expected to begin in July, with completion of the 24-story hotel and garage, and 20-story office building in mid-1965. # Garden Park Estates to Close Sales Offices for Christmas

MASTER BEDROOM OF HOME

Garden Park Estates offers a wide variety of home stylings, including an extra-large home which has a fireplace in the second-floor master bedroom.

"Hearty Season's Greetings and A Merry Christmas to All" is extended by officials of Garden Park Estates, who explained that this home community at Knott Ave. and Garden Grove Freeway, will be closed Tuesday, Dec. 25, so that all of the staff may celebrate Christmas Day with their families.

A new unit of quality-built and luxuriously appointed one and two-story residences has just opened at Garden Park Estates, once again affording one of the most comprehensive selection of diverse architect-designed residences available. And, the spokesman said, this is not just a diverse selection of exterior elevations, it is also an exceptionally wide selection of floor plans.

* * * *

BECAUSE OF THIS, home shoppers have come from all over Southern California, it was explained. There are two-bath plans with two bedrooms and a convertible den, expressly created for those who want a spacious home but fewer rooms, and plans with three and four bedrooms plus dining and family rooms in the one-story designs.

For the really large family, there is Garden Park Estates handsome, Award-winning two-story series. These are very spacious homes encompassing two full stories, and designed with five bedrooms, three bedrooms on the second floor, and two on the first. These homes are further distinguished by two beautiful fireplaces: one in the living room and the other in the second floor master bedroom.

* * * *

BUT GARDEN Park Estates popularity as a residential community does not rest on variety alone. Among the top reasons for the peak sales, is quality construction. Garden Park Estates' homes are constructed with genuine lath and plaster walls and ceilings that are fire-resistant and "soundproof," rockwood insulated ceilings for comfort control, sliding glass doors with aluminum frames and sliding aluminum windows, custom selected lighting fixtures, roofs of red cedar or crushed rock and clean, durable concrete driveways.

"Easy to own" financing terms are another important sales incentive. Garden Park Estates homes, despite their luxurious appointments, are fully priced from $18,250 to $25,600. Veterans have terms of nothing down except impounds and closing costs on VA loans with monthly payments from $101.00 including principal and interest, or Cal-Vet. There are also good conventional loans, and there is choice of 30 or 35-year FHA loans.

With exception of Christmas Day, Garden Park Estates model home display is open seven days a week. From Long Beach, drive east on Seventh St. which becomes Garden Grove Freeway (Garden Grove Blvd.) past Long Beach State College, straight to Knott Ave.

Home Sale Boosted by Christmas Offer

According to Stan Rossi, executive sales manager for S. V. Hunsaker & Son builders and developers, 17 homes were sold last week at Huntington Beach Sunshine Homes. He attributes this favorable buyer acceptance to the fact that home buyers wanted to take advantage of the free gift of a completely fenced rear yard and front yard landscaped as Christmas present.

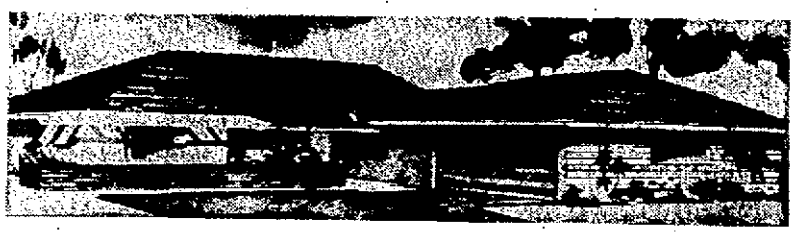

Huntington Beach Sunshine homes have been planned to meet every family need, stated Rossi, and offer the home buyer a choice of three or four bedrooms, family room, two full baths, and two-car garage. Unit 2 homes may be purchased with no down payment and unit 3 homes with $95 down plus nominal impounds. Immediate occupancy is available.

Tustin Bond Issue Sold to BofA Group

TUSTIN—A Bank of America N. T. & S. A. underwriting syndicate has purchased the $984,000 bond offering of Tustin Union High School District.

The bank group paid a premium of $199 for a combination of 3½% and 3¼% bonds. Net interest cost to the district was 3.34%. The bonds were reoffered to investors to yield from 2% to a dollar price of par on the 3½% bonds, according to maturity Jan. 1, 1964-88.

Proceeds of the issue will be used for various school purposes.

Tidewater Pakistan Drilling Is Failure

LOS ANGELES—Tidewater Oil Co. has abandoned its Kech Band No. 1 wildcat well in Baluchistan, West Pakistan, at a total depth of 10,987 feet, Thomas G. Kelliher, general manager of Tidewater's International Exploration and Production Division, announced Saturday.

Kelliher said the test had failed to find any indications of commercial oil or gas production.

With the abandonment of the well, Tidewater will phase out its exploration program in West Pakistan, Kelliher reported.

Tidewater is revamping its foreign exploration policy and intends to confine future efforts to areas which have proven to be productive of oil and gas, principally in North Africa, Kelliher said. He stated that the company will be interested in participating either in established production ventures, or in exploration concessions in areas of Algeria and Libya that have proven commercially productive.

Employment Agencies Unit Stages Yule Party for Boys

Sixty boys at the Las Padrones Juvenile Hall Facility in Downey were entertained by the South Coast Chapter of the California Employment Agencies Association Thursday night.

Sally Haines, chapter president, lauded the committee chairmen, Dick Jones, Joe Filing and Claire Carmody, and other members of the Long Beach area group for helping with the party.

They were assisted in their efforts to play Santa Claus by generous donations from Mattel Toys, Inc., Revell Toys, Inc., McCoy's Markets, Helms Bakeries, Seven-Up Bottling Co., Frito-Lay, Inc., Ruchti Bros. Meat Co. and the All American Nut Co.

Entertainment was provided by Keith Houdyshell, public relations representative of the Bank of Belmont Shore, and the appearance of Ed Roebuck of the Los Angeles Dodgers, who autographed baseballs for the boys.

Marineland's PR Man Leaves

Marineland of the Pacific announced that its public relations director, Clyde Tussey, will resign to join a new public relations and advertising company in Santa Ana.

He will leave the oceanarium at the end of the year to join Joseph P. Valen, Orange County advertising man, in forming the new firm of Valen & Tussey, Inc.

Offices will be at 1823 East 17th St., Santa Ana, where Valen has operated the past year.

Tussey leaves Marineland after five and one-half years at the oceanarium. He originally came to Marineland as an account representative from McFadden & Eddy Associates, which has been Marineland's public relations agency since 1956 and continues in the same capacity. Tussey lives at 732 Calle de Arboles, Redondo Beach.

Hyatt Chalet Opens Motel in Las Vegas

A deluxe 60 unit motel has been opened on the "Strip" in Las Vegas by Hyatt Chalet Motels, Inc., of Sepulveda. The half-million dollar installation is part of the same chain as the Hyatt Chalet Motel at 1121 Pacific Coast Highway in Long Beach.

The three story Las Vegas structure has a guest elevator.

Like the Hyatt Chalet in Long Beach, the new motel features an Alpine Swiss motif, with a bold red A-line roof dominating the exterior of the building. The motel is the ninth of over more than 200 planned by the parent company, a co-owner operated chain.

Pantry Markets Building in Los Coyotes Shopping Center

Pantry Markets will begin major expansion into the Long Beach and Orange County area, with construction of a store in the Los Coyotes Shopping Center in north Long Beach.

Ted. R. Wood, Pantry president and general manager, said the firm's 11th store would be its third outside of the Pasadena area and its first in the southern section of Los Angeles County.

The 18,600 square feet market will be built by Ernest W. Hahn, Inc. Design of the pre-cast concrete structure was by Quesada and Brown, A.I.A.

PANTRY'S Long Beach store will be located at the intersection of the Los Coyotes Diagonal and Palo Verde Avenue, and is part of a shopping center being developed by E. W. Mullins. Easily accessible parking will be provided for 135 cars.

The building will be of contemporary design with color highlights given by a glass mosaic under the front show windows and the light canopy structure.

Inside the structure will be six high-speed checkout stands, a 100-foot-long delicatessen section, a completely open meat market, an extra large frozen food section and an air curtain dairy box.

* * * *

HEATING for the market will radiate from the floor—a new Pantry feature. The store will also be completely air-conditioned.

Other features include terrazzo floors, pastel colored walls, three-dimentional counter markets and a 90 foot long and six foot high mirror to augment store guides.

Completion date of the structure is set for mid-April. Other locations for Pantry Markets in the Long Beach-Orange County area will be announced later.

"I build all kinds, but I live in a Medallion Home"

"I've been building homes for over 11 years for people who want to 'get away from it all.' Today, nearly every one wants a Medallion Home even as a vacation retreat," says Mr. Beck. "With the solid trend to electric living, people want all the modern electric conveniences they enjoy in their city homes.

"My own family is convinced anything less than a Medallion Home today would seem old-fashioned."

Experienced builders like Mr. Beck recognize the Medallion Home Award as a cornerstone for modern living—a solid basis for a home's lasting value today, and in the future.

Before you buy, compare the detailed electrical construction requirements for the Medallion Home Award with those of any other type of new home symbol. You'll discover that this is one award that requires a new home to conform to specific and rigid standards that mean important values for the buyer. Look for the Medallion Home Award. Here are just some of its qualifications:

1. A flameless electric kitchen equipped with major appliances, including range and oven.

2. Full "Housepower" wiring—provides capacity for at least twenty circuits, considered a minimum for modern living; large enough wires; 240-volt service for the electrical capacity every home needs.

3. Abundant lighting—planned for comfort, convenience and beauty.

A total-electric Gold Medallion Home gives you all these benefits plus:

4. Flameless electric heating for clean, steady, even heat in every room.

5. Flameless electric water heating—there's no cleaner, quieter, quicker way to heat water.

WHAT YOUR NAME MEANS

Send your name to LaReina Rule in care of Southland Magazine, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach 12, Calif., for origin, meaning and brief genealogy, for reply only in this column.

DEAR MISS RULE: What is the source of TROWBRIDGE?—Mrs. J. T., Anaheim.

J. T.: TROWBRIDGE originated in the English county of Wiltshire, from a town by that name. "Treow-brycg," the Saxon source phrase, meant "treebridge or wooden bridge." The Trowbridge lineage includes Richard Trowbridgge, as well as William and John Trowbrugge, Somerset land owners in 1272. The family shield from Devonshire has a 3-arched bridge supporting a castle tower flying a pennant, on a gold background. Massachusetts records of 1718 list the wedding of Caleb Trowbridge and Hannah Walter.

DEAR MISS RULE: Please give the source of WRIGHT. —B. M., Los Angeles; Mrs. O. W., Garden Grove.

B. M., O. W.: WRIGHT was the medieval English designation for a specialized master-carpenter. This name was usually shortened from "wheel-wright," (wheel maker) or "cart-wright" (cart maker). The Wright shield granted in 1509 is blue, emblazoned with three gold leopard heads. Deacon Samuel Wright was among the honored 17th century founding settlers of Massachusetts.

DEAR MISS RULE: Please inform us on FARRELL and FERRELL. — H. H., Long Beach; Mrs. R. S., Lakewood.

H. H., R. S.: FARRELL and FERRELL began as the Irish clan O'Fearghail, meaning "sons of the most valorous one." This lineage originated in County Longford, where they ruled as barons for centuries. Family branches lived in Donegal, Tyrone and Wicklow. The clan shield is green, emblazoned with a gold rampant lion in the center. Nineteenth century records show four Ferrell families in Floyd County, Ind.

DEAR MISS RULE: Please give genealogy on MOONEY. —D. M., Lakewood; C. M., Long Beach.

D. M., C. M.: MOONEY is the modern spelling of the Gaelic Irish clan name O'Maonaigh. This family descended from Collade-chrioch, an ancient Irish ruler. Three branches of Mooney forebears are recorded in Erin, one from the shores of Sligo Bay, another from Roscommon and the third from southeast Galway. O'Maonaigh ancestors were prosperous, for their name translates as "sons of the wealthy one." An alternate meaning was "sons of the one without speech." The Mooney shield has a golden lizard placed across the center of a green holly tree as emblems on a shield tinted silver with a checkered pattern of green and silver bars around the edges.

DEAR MISS RULE: What is the history on OSBORNE— J. M., Garden Grove; M. O., Harbor City.

J. M., M. O.: OSBORNE is an English respelling of an ancient Norwegian-Viking baptismal name, "As-Beorn," meaning "divine warrior." Far back in British history Osbern, son of the Earl Siward, was killed in battle in A.D. 1054. He was part of the English army that fought Macbeth, the Scotch king famed from Shakespeare's play. The Osbornes were important south English land owners in Kent from 1460 into the 1800s. Their shield is covered with blue and ermine fur tails, emblazoned with a golden cross in the center. The Osborne motto "Pax in bello" deciphers as "Peace from war."

DEAR MISS RULE: Kindly analyze ROMERO. — C. H., Long Beach.

C. H.: ROMERO, a Spanish name, was handed down by a participant in the 12th century religious Crusades to Palestine. The family ancestor, followed his return to Spain from the Holy Land, was called a "romero" or "pilgrim." High ranking Romero descendants is Castile were granted a coat-of-arms, two standing wolves placed one above the other on a red shield. During the late Middle Ages some Romeros migrated from Spain to Italy where they also achieved prominence.

DEAR MISS RULE: Please give data on HEDTKE.—H. H. Long Beach.

H. H.: HEDTKE, traced to its 13th century German root word, is based on the archaic warrior name Hadu, simply meaning "warrior." Hadu was transformed to Hedt and later augmented with the nickname suffix "-ke" meaning "little," in this family's north German home district.

DEAR MISS RULE: Please give data on LeROY.—S. M., Long Beach.

S. M.: LeROY, an ancient French name, means "king," and was adopted by a villager who played the part of a "king" in an annual, popular religious pageant. Yearly usage of the term for an ancestor over a decade resulted in his being nicknamed "Le Roy." Eventually this phrase became his family name. The LeRoy shield is silver, emblazoned with a red chevron placed below three black heraldic birds and above a black lion.

OUR COVER

For the past several years, Southland has been privileged to reproduce the appealing Christmas cover illustrations that helped make Norman Rockwell famous as America's most vivid portrayer of Santa Claus. But the tall, slender artist asserts that he is no Christmas buff. He likes Christmas but has never dared play Santa Claus, doesn't help with the family Christmas shopping, has never sung carols under others' windows, likes to be indoors when it's snowing and dodges carving the holiday turkey as too great a challenge. He portrayed Christmas for the first time in his career as illustrator 36 years ago. Since that time his magazine covers have won fame around the world and his Christmas cards for Hallmark have ranked among the best sellers, even becoming collectors' items.

NEXT WEEK

In the explosion that is Southern California's development in recent years, homes that served the pioneers well are disappearing as progress commandeers new sites for expansion. So it is with Long Beach. Many of the homes of a bygone era, pretentious and otherwise, have already gone; more are going. One of these dwelling places that has played a major role in Long Beach is the central theme of Maymie R. Krythe in "Oldest Long Beach Homes, Going, Going . . ." in next week's Southland.

YEAR'S END ROUNDUP OF

Mirthful Moments in Sports

By Jerome Hall

IT'S TIME for those "Most dramatic moments of the year" stories. It's time to recap the 12 months and retell some of the incidents that are worth retelling.

But in the important recounting, there must be room for a collection of vignettes from the world of sports—just small slices of everyday life among the national heroes, and maybe even a peek at the goats.

Take, as a starter, the case of the anonymous gentleman who returned a wheelchair to Dodger Stadium when he read that the cripple he stole it from was penniless. He left a note pinned to the chair that said "I feel terrible. I thought it was Walter O'Malley's property."

A thief thought a wheelchair at Dodger Stadium belonged to Walter O'Malley, stole it.

BASEBALL came in for a long length of laughter. When Houston manager Harry Craft was asked before the past season where he expected his team to finish, he told the interviewer: "In San Francisco on September 30th." The interviewer protested. "No, I mean how high?" Craft was equal to it. "About 19,000 feet in a DC6," he said, and that ended the interview.

Cassius Clay has last word in verbal duel with Sonny Liston over who's best fighter.

The 1962 World Series produced a wealth of mirthful conversation because of the long delay in completing the seven games. There was, for instance, the announcement over the loudspeaker by baseball commissioner Ford Frick during a rainstorm that was drenching Yankee Stadium: "It's clearing up in New Jersey."

When the rains came to San Francisco, delaying the Giants-Yankees inter-league playoff, Frick went to the ballpark one morning, surveyed the water-soaked diamond and said: "If it would stop raining and we'd get a real good wind, it would help." Before noon a gale hit San Francisco. It ripped roofs off some Northern California residences.

Basketball wasn't immune to mirth. When a San Jose State player was declared ineligible, causing the school to forfeit nearly all its games because he had played two years at USC which he neglected to admit on his entrance papers, the San Jose athletic director said:

"We still think he is a fine boy. We just wish he had a better memory."

FOOTBALL? Lots of laughs.

Minnesota Coach Murray Warmath, who coached in the past Rose Bowl, said this season, "It seems there's a strong tendency to want everyone on the campus to be a student."

And then there's the case of the football coach at Kansas State. He was hanged in effigy in front of the campus library and commented: "I'm glad it happened there. I've always stressed scholarship."

The quarterback at the University of Pittsburgh recently commented to reporters: "We've got the worst coaching staff in the country. I've made two big mistakes in my life. One was coming to school here. The other was staying."

Then there was the high school correspondent who rushed to the newspaper office after the big game and wrote how his team "ran up a 35-point lead at halftime and coasted to an impressive 40-36 triumph."

IT WAS NEVER recorded exactly what George Lee, veteran professional basketball player, said after an accident while posing for photographers on opening day of training. The picture-taker said jump higher. He did, and broke his toe.

Norm Van Brocklin, now coach of the Minnesota pro football team, was conducting a post-game interview with reporters after the Green Bay Packers had run up 48 points on his boys. Suddenly Van Brocklin stopped answering questions and bolted toward the door, cracking "Let's get out of here before the Packers score again."

Cassius Clay, the heavyweight boxer, is fast becoming the clown prince of sport. When champion Sonny Liston commented recently that Clay can't punch hard enough to break an egg, Cassius retorted: "Why don't he get in front of me and pretend he's an egg?"

If the wind would just blow to dry out the field . . ." said Ford Frick. And then . . . !!!

Deck the Hall With Boughs of Holly

Deck the hall with boughs of holly,
Fa la la la la, la la la la.
'Tis the season to be jolly,
Fa la la la la, la la la la.
Don we now our gay apparel,
Fa la la la, la la la.
Troll the ancient Yuletide carol,
Fa la la la la, la la la la.

Joy to the World

Joy to the World, the Lord is come.
Let earth receive her King.
Let ev'ry heart prepare Him room,
And Heav'n and Nature sing,
And Heav'n and Nature sing,
And Heav'n, and Heav'n and Nature sing.

O Little Town of Bethlehem

O little town of Bethlehem,
How still we see thee lie,
Above thy deep and dreamless sleep
The silent stars go by.
Yet in thy dark streets shineth
The everlasting light.
The hopes and fears of all the years
Are met in thee tonight.

Away in a Manger

Away in a manger,
No crib for His bed,
The little Lord Jesus
Lay down His sweet head.
The stars in the sky,
Looking down where He lay,
The little Lord Jesus
Asleep in the hay.

Hark! The Herald Angels Sing

Hark! the herald angels sing,
"Glory to the new-born King,
Peace on earth and mercy mild,

Joyful, all ye nations rise,
Join the triumph of the skies.
With th' angelic host proclaim,
Christ is born in Bethlehem!
Hark! the herald angels sing,
"Glory to the new-born King!"

Dashing through the snow
In a one horse open sleigh,
O'er the fields we go
Laughing all the way.
Bells on bobtail ring,
Making spirits bright,
What fun it is to ride and sing
A sleighing song tonight!
Jingle bells, jingle bells,
Jingle all the way.
Oh, what fun it is to ride
In a one horse open sleigh!

O Come All Ye Faithful

O come all ye faithful,
Joyful and triumphant,
O come ye, O come ye to Bethlehem,
Come and behold Him,
Born the King of Angels.
O come let us adore Him,
O come let us adore Him,
O come let us adore Him,
Christ the Lord.

O Holy Night

O holy night; the stars are brightly shining,
It is the night of the dear Saviour's birth.
Long lay the world in sin and error pining
Till He appeared and the soul felt its worth,
The thrill of hope the weary world rejoices,
And yonder breaks a new and glorious morn.
Fall on your knees,
O hear the angel voices,
O night divine,
O night when Christ was born,
O night, O holy night, O night divine.

God Rest You Merry, Gentlemen

God rest you merry, gentlemen,
Let nothing you dismay,
Remember Christ our Saviour
Was born on Christmas Day;
To save us all from Satan's pow'r
When we were gone astray
O tidings of comfort and joy, comfort and joy;
O tidings of comfort and joy.

It Came Upon the Midnight Clear

It came upon the midnight clear,
That glorious song of old,
From angels bending near the earth
To touch their harps of gold,
"Peace on the earth, good will to men
From heav'n's all gracious King."
The world in solemn stillness lay
To hear the angels sing.

We Three Kings of Orient Are

We three kings of Orient are,
Bearing gifts, we traverse afar

Following yonder star.

Star with royal beauty bright,

Guide us to the perfect light.

He Acted With the Real Greats of Silent Films

(Editor's note: Jasper Likes, author of this article, was in motion pictures from 1915 until 1921. Then he served 31 years as a Superior Court clerk, the last 25 years in Long Beach. He retired May 1, 1952. Jasper does not mention it in this article, but he wrote several successful songs, including "Carmelita" and "Wake Up, Henry." The Long Beach Municipal Band arranged "Carmelita" and plays it every once in a while.)

By Jasper Likes

IT WAS 1918 and I was working at the Lasky Studio in a night scene in a munitions factory. I wore overalls, a flannel shirt, a laborer's cap.

From the distance came the tinkle of a piano. In a secluded corner a young man, dressed the same as I, was playing a Chopin Nocturne on an old grand piano. Then he sang a couple of songs in Spanish. One was "Cielito Lindo."

He introduced himself as Ramon Samaniego. I remembered his name because it rhymed with San Diego. He said he was 17 and had come from Durango, Mexico, six months earlier. He was picking up a little money teaching music and hoped to get a start in pictures. He was a handsome boy with nice manners and I thought his chances were good.

He talked about Mexico that day. He was homesick and said the orange blossoms were sweeter in Durango than anywhere else.

Later I met him on the street in Los Angeles and he said with a wan smile he had a job in Cohn's grocery at Third and Broadway.

Shortly afterwards he got his first big break in the part of Rupert of Hentzau in "The Prisoner of Zenda."

Rex Ingram, director, changed his name to Ramon Navarro.

Later, when I saw him on the screen as a star in the silent version of "Ben Hur" and many other pictures, it was hard to realize he was the same wistful, timorous boy I had known so long ago.

YES, I REMEMBER Navarro. My memory often takes me back to the heyday of silent films—I played in many of them—and great stars like Bill (Hopalong) Cassidy, Wally Reid, Mabel Normand, Madame Nazimova, Louise Fazenda, and, among others, Monte Blue. . . .

I once found a piano on a deserted set and played a few pieces on it. I looked up and saw the grinning face of Monte Blue above me. He reported his discovery to a director and thereafter I was the piano player in many western dance hall and saloon scenes, including "The Good Bad Man" with Douglas Fairbanks and "Burning Daylight," Jack London's great story of the north.

"Too Much Mustard," "Missouri Waltz" and "Maple Leaf Rag" were popular; and "The Moonlight Sonata" got its share of attention, too.

Monte and I were neighbors and used to wait for the street car together at Santa Monica Boulevard and Vine Street. He was under contract and I was still free-lancing. Usually he boarded the car first and paid the fare for both of us. Once I slipped in ahead of him and paid both fares. He made the conductor give the money back to me. That's the kind of guy he was.

I HAD A 6 a. m. call at the Lasky Studio. The studio entrance was locked. It was midwinter, dark and cold.

Another young fellow arrived. He was decked out in riding breeches and boots. I detected a bit of Oklahoma in his speech. He kicked the door repeatedly and merrily until the watchman let us in.

His dressing room was two doors from mine. His name was Bill Boyd. We were going on location to Santa Barbara. Bill and I piled into the same car. Good reason—it was the best one and two pretty girls already were seated in it.

On the way back, the moon came out and it was a lovely, cool California night. We were hungry and Bill suggested we catch up with the prop truck which was loaded with food. We had a grand time driving along the sea in the moonlight, eating sandwiches and drinking milk out of a bottle. I wonder if Bill remembers that.

He was 26, but his hair already was graying. His success in "The Volga Boatman" and many other pictures, his decline and then his phenomenal comeback as Hopalong Cassidy still were far in the future.

I WORKED more with Wallace Reid than any other star. He was a genial fellow with an unpredictable sense of humor. In "The Love Burglar" I played a waiter in a Barbary Coast saloon. Wally was supposed to order beer and in the run-throughs he did.

But when it came to the take, I asked, "What'll yo have?" Wally answered, "Bring me a couple of lady fingers."

I kept a straight face and brought him beer and the scene was saved. Somewhere I still have a photograph of that scene.

WITH MY MAKE-UP on, I strolled around the lot one morning to see what was doing on the other sets. A lady and gentleman sat in front of a clump of bullrushes on the bank of an artificial pond. They smiled pleasantly and invited me to join them.

The little lady—they both were rather small — produced a jar of stick candy and explained that it was her favorite candy. We chomped stick candy together and chatted.

The next day I repeated the performance and had another delightful visit with my friends. I seldom have met a more charming couple.

On the way back I stopped at the wardrobe master's window and asked who the nice people were.

"Mr. and Mrs. Harry Houdini," he said.

WHEN THE casting director at the Goldwyn Studio wanted me to play an elevator boy in a comedy scene with Mabel Normand, my enthusiasm wasn't kindled. I was fond of Mabel and liked to work with her and her director, Victor Schertzinger, but I always had felt that in comedy I was about as funny as an epidemic. The comedy was "Upstairs."

Geraldine Farrar, the Metropolitan Opera star; her husband, Lou Tellegen, star and director; Lawson Butt, English actor, came to watch, as guests. I was nervous in the rehearsals, and Miss Farrar nodded encouragement to me.

Then came the take. I still felt that Chaplin's laurels were safe. I expressed regret to Schertzinger that I hadn't done better.

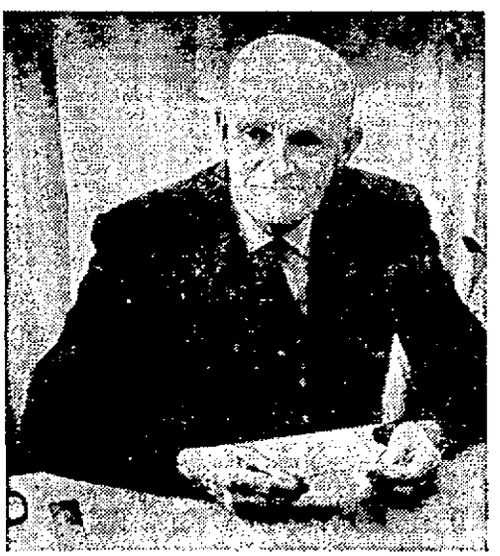

He looked surprised and said, "Why that was fine, son. I'm satisfied."

When I saw it on the screen of a downtown

Stage Coach West

As the West developed, many forms of transportation and communication played major roles. Above, the artist Vischer portrays four of these systems: Pony Express, stagecoach, covered wagon, and new telegraph of 1860s.

By Hortense Hoffman

FAMOUS Concord coaches, brought by Clipper ships around Cape Horn, were reported June 24, 1850, on the streets of San Francisco. First governor of California, Peter H. Burnett, left for San Jose on one of Crandall's stages.

"On this occasion he drove and I occupied the top front seat beside him. The distance was some 50 miles, most of the route being over smooth, dry, hard prairie; and there was some of the most rapid driving that I ever witnessed. People flocked to the road and without slackening our speed, we took off our hats, waved them around, and shouted at the top of our voices, "California is admitted to the Union! Steamer news!"

The Concord was a coach built, from 1813, by the Abbott-Downing Co. in Concord, N. H. This historic factory covered four acres of ground, shipped to Mexico, South America, and even South Africa and Australia.

THE PRINCIPAL feature of its construction was that the body rested upon thorough braces, two stout leather straps attached to C-shaped braces fastened firmly to the front and rear axles, allowing the egg-like body to rock back and forth. There were usually upholstered seats for nine passengers inside and room for a dozen passengers on top of the coach. At the front and rear were boots, leather-covered triangular racks for mail, express and baggage. Directly under the driver's box was a chest for gold dust, bullion and anything of great value.

These coaches weighed about 2,500 pounds and sold in California for $1,200 to $1,500. Each wheel spoke hand-hewn from ash, body paneling of well-seasoned oak, iron from Norway, and 40 years of experience, attained excellent workmanship. On roads of unbelievable roughness, driven at breakneck speed, 10, 12, even 15 miles per hour, they needed little or no repairs.

Over heavy grades on mountains, and worse, a mud-wagon was used. Also slung on thorough braces instead of main springs, this was built lower to the ground to reduce danger of overturning, and seated about a dozen passengers in the wagon, with or without a top awning.

THE STAGES were drawn by four to six horses or mules, controlled individually. The "expert driver," or "whip," was an heroic character of the Old West, the idol of the stableboys, a wizard holding ribbons, he careened down mountains, safely traveled unlit trails through the night, or stormy weather, foiled hostile Indians, outwitted hold-ups, and held profane but pronounced opinions on every problem of state, religion and life. The teams had been driven in by emigrants or agents, from Ohio, Kentucky and Virginia, and were valued at $2,000 to $4,000 apiece.

Mark Twain has left an entertaining description of his journey in "Roughing It" v.1 (Harper c1871). He left the states from St. Joseph, Mo., had to discard all but 25 pounds of baggage, and pay $150 to reach Carson City, Nev. His brother and he took blankets, canteens for water, five pounds of smoking tobacco and pipes, and a little shot-bag of silver coin to pay for uncatable breakfasts and dinners at stations.

"Our coach was a great swinging and swaying stage—an imposing cradle on wheels. . . . By the side of the driver sat the conductor, the legitimate captain of the craft, for it was his business to take care of the mails, baggage, express matter and passengers."

DURING the night a thorough-brace broke because of the overloading with three days mail. After it was mended about half of the mail was repacked and the seats turned down so the three passengers had a bed on mailbags, and the thorough-braces were protected. The mail that was abandoned beside the road would have to wait until someone came from the next station. They changed to a mud-wagon and were afraid of being shipwrecked in the desert because of quicksands. When the mud-wagon broke down, they went on a buffalo hunt.

They saw the Pony Express rider carrying letters, from St. Joseph to Sacramento (1,900 miles, in eight days).

"In a second or two the speck against the sky became a horse and rider, rising and falling, rising and falling—sweeping toward us, nearer and nearer—a whoop and a hurrah from our upper deck, wave of the rider's hand, and man and horse burst past our excited faces, winging away like belated fragments of a storm."

"He rode 50 miles without stopping, by daylight, moonlight, or blackness, on a splendid horse, born for a racer. As he came crashing up to the station, two men were holding a fresh, impatient steed, the transfer of rider and mailbag being made in the twinkling of an eye."

THE STAGECOACH could travel from 100 to 125 miles a day and the Pony Express about 250. There were 40 riders going east and 40 going west, using 400 horses every day in the year. The stage changed horses or mules 10 or 12 times in every 24 hours, requiring but four minutes for the hitch.

The stage had made 798 miles in eight days and three hours when they passed a Mormon emigrant train of 33 wagons, dozens of coarsely clad, sad men, women and children, who were walking as they had for eight weeks, over the same road the stage had been driven.

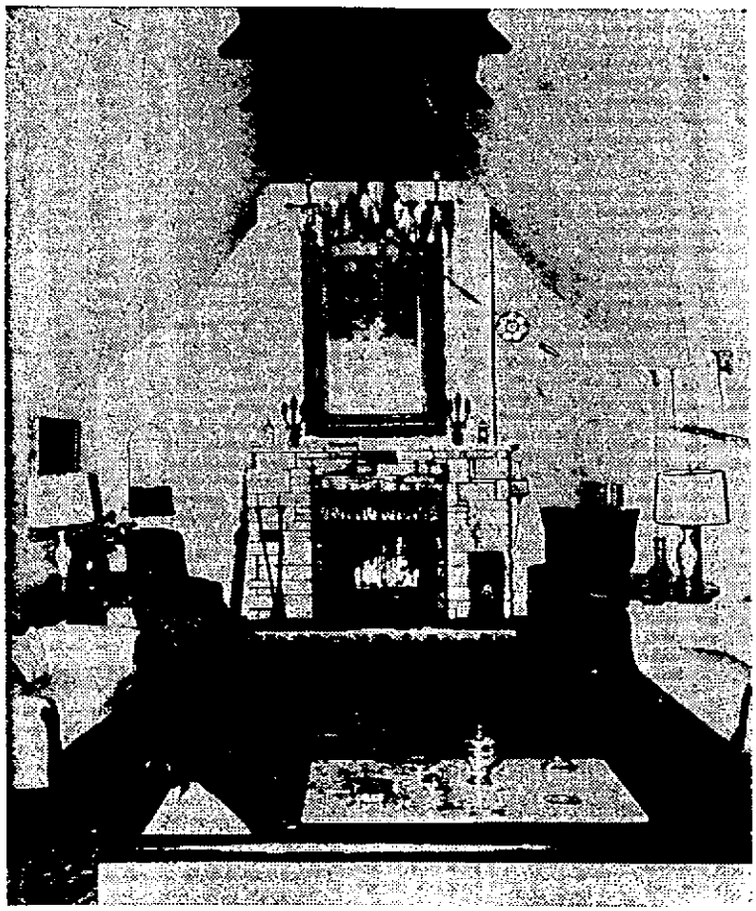

At one stop, they had time to bathe in a creek, and at another, their only memorable meal, a breakfast of hot biscuits, fresh antelope steak and coffee. On the 16th day, they met some Goshoot Indians; small, lean, scrawny, wretched creatures, bearing dirt accumulated on their miserable persons in months, years, even generations.

On the 18th day, 156 miles from their destination, they encountered the eastern-bound telegraph constructors, and sent a message to the governor of Nevada. Forty miles of sinking desert sand, and then, on the 20th day, in clouds of alkali dust, they arrived at the tiny wooden capital of the Nevada Territory, disembarked, and the stage drove on.

Only a century later, 501 traffic deaths, during a weekend and a holiday, gave proof that the wheels of progress turn swiftly.

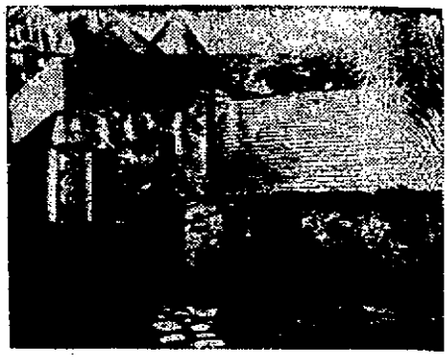

In the settlement of the West, the stagecoach played a sturdy and prominent role, and left a romantic heritage that still stirs modern imaginations in pounding, dramatic performances as movies relive frontier.

This Man's Home Is a Castle

Exterior view of the C. C. Winslow home.

By Stella George

WITH THE AIR of a small castle and with the decor of French Normandy, the C. C. Winslow home at 5668 Naples Canal is intriguing without and surprising within. There's no match for its many unique qualities in Naples or, for that matter, anywhere in Long Beach.

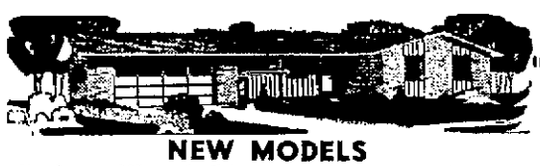

An initial entry hall in this home leads to a second entry hall straight ahead, the stairway to the right, and this, in turn, has a small area at the rear of the first landing. In reality, the landing area is a tiny sitting room where one person may sit to read or relax.

Unusual details in the home, for example, the windows alone are objects of art. Leaded diamonds include small pieces of colored glass here and there among the panes.

AN OPEN-WORK door of carved wood leads from the inner entry to the dining room at the left. An iron grill door leads from the hall to the living room at the right. Here, the slanted ceiling of the room is 16 feet high in the center which is beamed. The room is furnished in authentic antiques and carpeted with a Persian rug. A handsome and majestic fireplace dominates the far end of the room, with a large painting placed above its mantel.

Besides the butler's pantry and kitchen, there is a den downstairs.

THE MASTER BEDROOM upstairs is spacious, with twin four-poster beds taking up only a little room. Brocade is framed and used to cover the walls, each

Christmas Tree Decorations A Menace to Carpets

If you're planning big Christmas tree decorations involving the use of paint, paint sprays or soaping down the limbs for the holidays, look out for what can happen to your precious rugs and carpets. A few spilled drops left unremedied can lead to carpet disaster.

If paint is involved, the National Institute of Rug Cleaning recommends you take immediate action before the paint has a chance to set up and become hard. The materials you should use can usually be found in the home.

In the case of a latex, water resistant varnish, or oil stain accident on a rug, the removal procedure is to first remove the excess with a spoon and absorb with clean white tissues. Then, work a small amount of neutral detergent (one teaspoon of neutral non-alkaline detergent to one-half pint of water) into a small area and absorb into tissues. It is best to wear rubber gloves and use fingers to work solution in. Using the fingers lessens the mechanical agitation. Continue procedure until stain has been removed. Place one-half inch of clean tissues on area and weight down for four to six hours.

For accidents involving lacquer, wood varnish, wood enamel, metal enamel or alkyd resin—a lacquer thinner, brush cleaner, or turpentine will usually do the job.

Again—remove excess with a spoon and blot with clean white tissues. And, as before, continue applying small amount to area and blot. If turpentine is used, a dry solvent (dry cleaning fluid) will probably have to be used to remove the turpentine.

The following precautions should be observed;

Always test solution on inconspicuous area of rug to test for effect on fiber and dyes.

Work from the outside towards the middle of the spot.

Keep mechanical agitation to a minimum.

Blot. Don't rub.

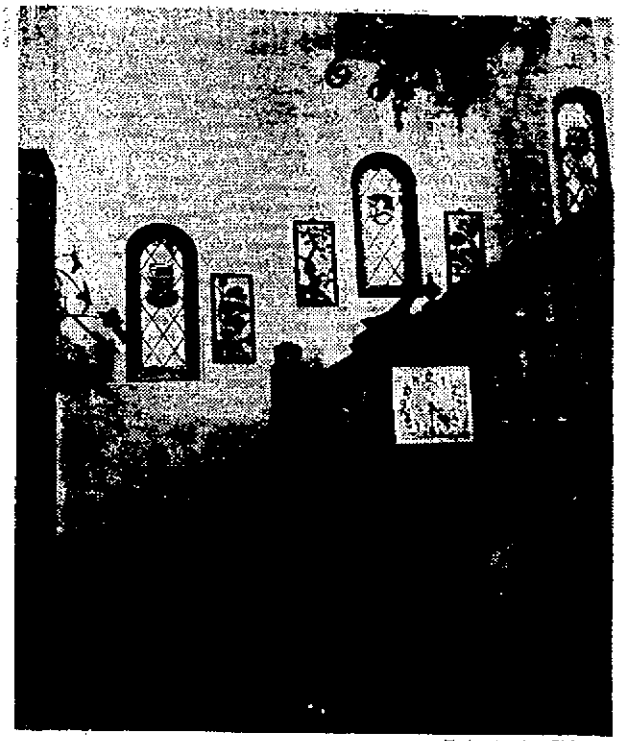

Use small amounts of liquid.

Keep solvents away from latex back.

Allow solvent spot to dry with lots of air.

If the spillage is large or a problem arise, call WEINHEIMER RUG & UPHOLSTERY CLEANERS GE 3-9906 3720 E. Fourth St. Long Beach Member National Institute of Rug Cleaners.

frame customed to the size of the space it has to cover. This bedroom has its own entry hall and a walk-in closet that is almost a small room in itself.

The bathroom is deluxe both in size and decor. Jet black is the predominating color, very effective around the large sunken bathtub. Walls are covered with silk cloth. The wash basin is in the center of a large dressing table recessed in one wall.

The second bedroom also is large and has its own noteworthy details. Corners of the walls near the ceiling were curved to provide room for indirect lighting. A small, multi-colored glass window on one wall overlooks the stairway and front door below.

ONE DOOR in the long upstairs hall would appear to lead to a linen closet; instead, it opens to a tiny stairway at the left which, in turn, leads to a small, semi-circular room, completely private and hidden from view. It is used as a study, and decorated to serve this purpose well.

In this same area, is another surprise across the way to the right of the stairs: a playroom or den which, in every detail, is designed like a ship's cabin! There is metal instead of wood; portholes instead of windows, and bunks in place of beds or couches. And to top off the surprises in this area, there is still another small study or room with access from a ladder in the ship's cabin!

The home was built long enough ago to allow the foliage, trees, plants and shrubs to have attained full-grown beauty. Home and setting might have been transplanted from another country, to be sure, but the warmth and hospitality to be found in the home is as American as the newspaper which lands on the front step each evening.

Comforts of the home and the pleasure of waterfront living are shared by Winslow on weekends with his daughter, Miss Barbara Winslow, a teacher at Camp Hi-Hill.

Raisins Play a New Holiday Role

By Mildred K. Flanary

Southland Magazine Home Economics Editor

TRADITIONAL favorites and brand-new goodies are the epitome of gracious entertaining in the holiday season.

California raisins, a traditional ingredient in most holiday desserts, turn up in a cloud-like filling for tarts this season. These glamorous new desserts are the petite kind, just right to display on a tiered plate or silver platter.

Chop the raisins and cranberries before adding to the creamy sherry accented chiffon filling. Pile into flaky pastry shells and chill until set. For added flair, garnish each little pastry with sugary coated candies in a rainbow of colors.

Holiday Raisin Tartlets

- ⅔ cup dark or golden raisins
- ¼ cup sherry
- 2 teaspoons plain gelatin
- ½ cup orange juice
- 3 eggs, well beaten
- ⅔ cup sugar
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- ⅛ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup finely chopped raw cranberries
- 1 cup whipping cream
- 1½ dozen 3-inch baked tart shells

Coarsely chop raisins; mix with sherry and set aside. Soften gelatin in orange juice. Combine with eggs, sugar, lemon juice and salt. Cook and stir over moderate heat until gelatin dissolves and mixture thickens. Add raisins and cool until filling begins to jell. Fold in cranberries and stiffly beaten cream. Pile high into baked tart shells. Chill until firm. Makes 1½ dozen tarts.

Tiny Tart Shells

- 1½ cups sifted flour
- ¾ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup shortening
- 1 tablespoon butter
- 3 tablespoons cold milk or water

Resift flour with salt. Cut in shortening and butter. Add liquid mixing just until dough holds together; round up in a ball. Divide into 18 equal sized pieces. Roll each piece to fit the inside of a 3 by 1-inch tart pan (plain or fluted edge). Fit pastry into pans, prick with fork. Bake in very hot oven (475 degrees F.) until crisp and rich golden brown, about 8 minutes. Cool before filling. Makes 1½ dozen 3-inch tart shells.

Holiday raisin tartlets have eye and taste appeal and give raisins a new place in holiday desserts.

Decorative Eagle Plaque

By Lorena Fleissig

THE EAGLE is considered a noble bird, "high lord of the sky, master of mountain heights, powerful and enduring." It was chosen as the emblem of the United States and it is also decoratively used as an art symbol of high achievement.

The stylized eagle placque (above) matches a noteworthy ornament over a desk. It is very simple to make of white cardboard or index paper. The design is drawn in pencil, then retraced with black ink.

It is trimmed outside the inked lines and glued on a blue art paper shield that measures eight inches long and six inches wide. Three stars decorate the shield.

Mounted on a mat board, 7½x8 inches (gray), the shield and edge of the mat board are bordered with inexpensive gold cording. Six inches of the cord is attached to serve as hanger at the back.

Recipe of the Week

CHICKEN or, if you wish, left-over turkey goes into a mouth-watering dish that wins $5 as best recipe this week for Mrs. Dawnaline G. Olson, 2227 Belmont Ave., Long Beach 15. The recipe:

Sneak Preview of California-Made Playtime Modes

COLOR goes to resorts

Red, White, Blue Continue to Hold Spotlight

California Contrasts: Rose Marie Reid's one-piece supple swimsuit, born and bred in test-tube Antron jersey, with tasseled belt, contrasts the trim, tailored two-piece pure cotton print suit by Mary Ann De Weese.

Future fashions begin right now in California, where colorful resort clothes spotlight trends for months ahead. What's worn in Palm Springs or exported to Palm Beach in the next few weeks might very well be a sneak preview of what will be worn next summer from Maine to Mexico.

Color and California are synonymous in the fashion sense. There are three favorite colors that return each year at this time to greet the opening of winter vacation spots—a patriotic triumvirate of red, white and blue. But not since the pink phases in fashion of several years ago, has any single color come so close to univeral acceptance as today's brilliant yellows that identify 1963 as a color-filled fashion year. From lemon-tinted pastels to yellow-leaf greens, from sun-kissed ivory to sunset coral, there's a hint of yellow distinctively present in all colors.

Next is what appears to be a paradox, but is really more evidence of contrasts, and it began with the coalition last season of camel and gray, now advances into spring with the teaming of two neutral shades like sand and slate, beige and navy.

More contrasts ahead are to be seen in the military milieu or "Safari" look that is clean of line, assiduously tailored and unyielding to the frills of femininity, the "Little Girl" look which is competitive within the frame of fashion.

"Sandal" dresses, those whose hemlines are southbound, and stop at ankle or instep, focus attention on the strong foothold gained in dressing up to the occasion of staying home.

Bib-topped, "Boston" bikinis are still another study in contrasts. The top gets the build-up, the bottom a cover-up, with skin between. Newsiest cover-ups are toe-touching skirts, but any-length skirted swimsuits are prevalent and protectively modest, more-so than the maillot.

Contrasts in "looks," in color, in fabric, and in silhouette are very 1963. They eliminate the sameness that fashion followed thirty years earlier. Today's smart and chic way of dressing is to find the best style for building your own individuality. California designers are currently contributing much to making this possible.

Under the Yule Tree

By Eleanor Avery Price

ARE YOU looking for last-minute gifts for youngsters? Visit your pet shop. Here you will find wonderful inexpensive books on all sorts of pets, fish and bowls and a world of underwater decorations, terrariums and occupants, wild bird houses, feeders and similar items, many gifts with pet motif, and usually some very interesting pets such as an inoffensive little cavy or Guinea pig. Remember, though, if you select a live gift, it should go to someone who will want it and will take very good care of it.

A cavy is a little tailless rodent with gentle disposition. It will play, likes to run in the yard, will ride on children's shoulders, and sit on their laps.

Several sows and a boar can be housed together without their behavior being publicly affected. An apple box makes a fine indoor house for the pet. If the box is not slatted, cut out little window openings and cover them with hardware cloth. Wood shavings such as cedar, or an absorbent cat litter, both of which are available at pet shops, should cover the floor of the box or hutch. Many cavies will not soil any place but in their box.

Most any child would be delighted to find a cavy, or Guinea pig, under the yule tree. Cavies are good pets.

IF THE PET is housed outside, it must have a roof for protection from the weather and other animals. A floorless box can be moved about on the lawn and the pet will nibble the grass.

Food for the cavy includes lawn clippings, carrot tops, green beans, endive, Brussels sprouts, dandelions, and other greens. Be certain there is no insecticide spray left on foods. If greens are kept chilled in the refrigerator, very little drinking water is needed. And don't forget that most pet stores sell special food for cavies.

Cavies, as a rule, carry their young for 70 days, and when the little ones are born they frisk about their box or pen with wide open eyes. They eat immediately and require little or no attention.

ONE LOOKING for show cavies—and they do make a fine hobby for adults as well as children—should select those with cobby bodies, rose-petal shaped, slightly drooped ears, and broad heads with no hollowness above the eyes. Eyes should be large and bold and placed on the edge of the face. Coats must be healthy and free of parasites.

There are several colors of cavies. An atractive one is the Himalayan, a white cavy with darker pigment at the extremities. He is sometimes called the dwarf of the cavy fancy. Altogether there are 17 "varieties" of American cavy.

You Ask, We Answer

By Haskin

Q. What is the origin of the proverb that a cat has nine lives? B.G.

A. In the Middle Ages, people believed that evil spirits were able to assume the form of black animals, particularly cats, and that a witch could take on the body of a cat nine times. This idea is traceable to the mythology of ancient Egypt, in which the cat-goddess Pasht was said to have nine lives. She was pictured with the head of a cat, and the cat was sacred to her. Pasht, also known under her Greek name of Bubastis, was the equivalent of the Roman goddess Diana.

Q. Does the Government publish a list of all U.S. postage stamps? If so, where can I get one? K.M.

A. The Post Office Department publishes successive editions of "Postage Stamps of the United States," an indexed book of about 230 pages which illustrates and describes all U. S. postage and special service stamps issued from 1847 to date of the edition. The current edition is sold by the Supt. of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington 25, D. C.

Q. Is an accidental killing of one person by another classified as homicide? D.M.

A. Yes. Homicide is the killing of one human being by another—and the act is classified as homicide even if the killing is found to have been completely accidental or justifiable. "Felonious" homicide is manslaughter or murder; "justifiable" or "excusable" homicide involves no legal guilt or punishment.

Q. What is the walking delegate of a labor union? M.L.

A. He is the union's business agent. He is a paid representative of a local trade union whose job it is to look after all outside interests of the union, particularly the relations of union members to their employers.

Story of the California Deserts

By Vern Williams
Southland Magazine Book Editor

THE DESERT . . .

Inscrutable, cruel, inspiring, relentless, challenging . . .

His romance with the great Southern California desert that stretches from the Mexican border to the Amargosa range beyond Death Valley is told by Edward Maddin Ainsworth in "BECKONING DESERT" (Prentice-Hall, $5.95).

Ainsworth, a topnotch Los Angeles newspaperman, weaves his tale of love for the sometimes menacing, sometimes protective, always fascinating desert by presenting it in its complete role—a fearsome prospect to the plains-roaming Indians and the '49ers, a mecca for sun-loving vacationers and a shining promise in the future of the United States.

Tracing the history of man's attempts to conquer the arid wasteland, Ed Ainsworth opens his intimate chronicle of the desert with an account of the trials of the Spanish conquistador, Hernandez Cortez, and those who followed, as they tried to find the western passage out of the desert. He tells of the deeds and legends of fabled desert characters such as Death Valley Scotty and Peg Leg Smith who defied the desert's red heat and dust. He takes the reader to Scotty's Castle and to Punte Penasco, reputed to have been President Franklin D. Roosevelt's "wartime hideaway."

He considers the deadly sidewinder and the gila monster, the night-habitating packrat, the mouse and kangaroo rats and the now vanishing burro. He tells about the growth of the flourishing farm-studded Imperial Valley and the vacationland of Palm Springs.

The desert beckons, and everyone who reads Ed's book will understand why. Don't miss it.

AND HERE'S another book by a Los Angeles newspaperman:

The war in the Pacific and the exploits of the late Adm. William E. (Bull) Halsey are the basis for a power-packed novel by James Bassett, who was press-relations officer for the immortal Halsey from Guadalcanal to the Japanese surrender.

Halsey's fictional counterpart, Adm. Rockwell (The Rock) Torrey, fights back from the humiliation of Dec. 7 to buck not only the vastly superior Japanese fleet and firepower, but the political influence of an ambitious rival as he sails repeatedly into "HARM'S WAY" (World, $5.95).

Tough but humane old sea dog Torrey and the description of a crucial naval battle against suicidal odds give the novel wide popular appeal.

VANCE PACKARD

Author of "The Status Seekers" and "The Hidden Persuaders" takes on American business executives, their training, climbs, dead-ends and pitfalls in "THE PYRAMID CLIMBERS" (McGraw-Hill, $5).

EVERYTHING Steve Allen does—whether as a movie and TV actor or comic, song writer or lyricist, public speaker or pianist — is exciting, because of his popularity and versatility.

Already the author of seven non-fiction books and many collections of short stories, Allen has written his first novel, "NOT ALL OF YOUR LAUGHTER, NOT ALL OF YOUR TEARS (Geis, $4.95).

It's about a Hollywood song writer, Catholic, married and the father of three, who moves into a tortured triangle with another woman.

No master of his predicament, Don Scanlon commits bungles which cost him his wife, children and career, as well as the girl friend, and cause an accident fatal to two persons and almost himself. The achievement of peace is Steve Allen's philosophical message.

BE NEW

Kitti Lee and antique phone that really works

Old Idea New in Phones

JOE SEGAL is a soft-spoken, mild-mannered rebel.

By profession a certified public accountant with his own firm, he has quietly set out on a project to help individuals break the "ugly phone" habit by making available antique phones that actually work.

Segal has organized a movement to make turn-of-the-century telephones popular in apartments and offices. He refers to his project as a "do-it-yourself revolution," in which the elegant phones of yesteryear become an integral part of today's living. He thinks today's phones are ugly-looking instruments and that the public has no choice or voice in what it uses in the way of telephones.

Segal has formed Western States Telephone Co., with offices at 368 Rodeo Dr., Beverly Hills, where he displays a wide assortment of Continental-type telephones from Paris, Copenhagen and Stockholm, available for use here.

THESE PHONES have been completely redecorated, rewired and equipped with dials and modern high-fidelity Western Electric transmitters and receivers, so that they work just as well as the newest phones. These imports sell for $40 to $225.

Each antique phone has a long cord with a four-pronged plug, which fits into the wall jacks found today in many new offices and apartments, to permit moving an extension phone from room to room. Segal says installing one of his antique phones is no more complicated than plugging a lamp into a wall outlet, where jacks exist.

"Interior decorators are among my best customers," says Segal.

The Hospitality That Is Mexico

By Fred Taylor Kraft
Travel Editor

CHRISMASTIME, just about everywhere, seems to inspire the best in people. Once in a while you find these very same gestures demonstrated daily, as common practice in life. And in some of the most remote spots on earth.

That's the way it was in the casa of Don Salvadore Gutierrez, his sweet wife Vicenta, and two of their sons, Nene and Poncho, in an unusual and out-of-the-way town called Patzcuaro, roughly 175 miles west of Mexico City.

My wife and I were on vacation with Lowell and Dorothy Weeks, a Long Beach couple on their tenth visit to Mananaland, and old friends of the Gutierrez clan. With our fine guide, Senor Rafael Aldeco, we had put Patzcuaro on our itinerary in order to see and take pictures of Lago de Patzcuaro and sample the famous white fish—pescado blanco — caught there by Tarascan Indian butterfly fishermen, and to visit one of the largest and most colorful open-air Indian markets in the entire western world.

WHEN THE GUTIERREZ family heard we were coming their way they reacted in true Mexican fashion by arranging what you might call a fiesta. Other friends came from Mexico City to join in the fun, and on arrival at Codallas 34 we got the traditional Mexican greeting—a handclasp followed by a warm hug and another handclasp.

To see the Gutierrez family greet their old friends in such a manner was entirely understandable, but the unrestrained pleasure our hosts displayed over my wife and I—utter strangers—being with them, and the friendship and hospitality they demonstrated to all their guests was an unforgettable experience.

Lengthy felicitious greetings were followed by a true Mexican dinner, completely unlike anything we had ever before enjoyed.

First came a huge bowl of chicken broth with a large leg of stewed chicken, followed by plates full of uchepos (fresh, green corn tamales), generous slices of tree-ripened papaya, rice prepared in a strangely different way with cream and bananas, warm and crisp tortillas, filete con chile—and pescado blanco! While smiling servants brought forth the various courses, Vicenta seemed to hover over all of us at once to keep our glasses filled with wine, her hearty gaiety and musical Spanish resounding pleasantly through the comedor.

WHEN DESSERT time came, we sat around the table sampling refrescos (pop), Uruapan coffee—a special blend made up by friends of the Gutierrez family—and helping ourselves to preserved (in sugar) cherries passed around the table in a large jar.

Nene and Poncho, seemingly as happy as their guests, strummed their guitars and sang such Mexican favorites as 'Malaquena" and "La Barca de Oro."

When time came to go the traditional greeting—a handclasp followed by a hug and another handclasp—was repeated all around, even more warmly than on our arrival.

WE STAYED three days in Patzcuaro, quartering at the friendly Posada de Don Vasco, a comfortable hotel with a splendid dining room.

Evenings we watched the pre-Christmas season heralded by a strange ritual enacted nowhere else in the world—the Old Man's Dance—in which costumed natives with grotesque masks performed to the accompaniment of a septima.

In the early dawn we glided through water hyacinths and tules into Lago de Patzcuaro to photograph the butterfly fishermen and visit Janitzio, the lake's principal island. Later we took in the tremendous open-air Indian market on Plaza Grande, to which the many tribes of barefoot Tarascans had arrived earlier by burro and canoe with their delicate handiwork.

WE DROVE UP the steep, cobbled road to the Stirrup, a mountain overlooking the city, the lake and far out into the countryside where rows of peaks that once were volcanoes rose skyward in strange array.

We also drove through pines, scrub oak, wild crabapple and white-blossomed cazahuate to the neighboring village of Santa Clara del Cobre to watch native coppersmiths make beautiful products with the same methods they have used for a hundred years.

Patzcuaro (PAHTZ-kwahro) means "place of delights." We discovered that it truly lives up to its name.

THE FIRST and fastest nonstop commercial jet service between Los Angeles and Paris was inaugurated Dec. 15 by Trans World Airlines. Departing Los Angeles International at 11:45 a.m. each Saturday, the flight—utilizing the new Boeing 707 331 Intercontinental fan jet—operates over the Polar Route, arriving at 7:35 a.m. Sunday, Paris time. The jet then continues on to Milan and Rome.

Going Places

By SHIRLEY and BOB SLOANE

FROM its place above the entrance to the Church of the Reconciliation on Bernauerstrasse in Berlin, the statue of Christ spreads its arms and looks down in welcome.

But it no longer looks down on the flock, only at an ugly stone wall the top of which is embedded with jagged glass. There is no reconciliation at the church and there is no more flock. The wall that blocks the church from its congregation is the same the blocks freedom for half a city. And half a world.

The wall . . . the hated, heinous, hideous wall above which a man must climb to wave at his brother, or over which he must vault for almost sure death to touch him.

"In Tyrannos!" cries an angry scrawl on the wall in front of the sealed church. "Murder!" leaps in white hot letters further along the street. So do "Souvenir of Eichmann," and the once whispered, most dreaded of symbols "KZ" — Concentration Camp.

In front of the bricked-up windows of a tenement on this border street, where some of the shades are up and some down as they were when the police came to seal them, a funeral wreath marks where Rolf Urban fell to his death in a five-story leap. He lived through two wars and died in a third. Down the street an 80-year-old woman tried, too.

WE CROSSED the border twice, first by elevated, alone, on the all-but-boycotted S-train, the East German line which loops cursorily through West Berlin. From the train there were brief glimpses of the incredible wall, the barbed wire and tank traps that line the meandering Spree River. At the Friedrichstrasse Station it took an hour to unmesh the tangle of passport control red tape, a monument to inefficiency in this world of lowering borders.

We wandered briefly in the gray streets of this other world. Shop windows showed unfamiliar wares—Hungarian and Chinese wines (with English labels), dull magazines in Russian, once-familiar Havana cigars. In a book store was a work by Stephen Crane and a biography of P. T. Barnum.

The autos were Russian and Czech. Uniforms, disturbingly similar to those of Nazi vintage, filled the streets.

We took few pictures; the impression was too strong that we might be apprehended at any moment for doing so. When we innocently photographed the railroad station, a guard with a carbine over his shoulder whistled menacingly.

On our return one of our passports was held up at the control station for nearly an hour. There was no explanation, nor was one sought.

THE NEXT DAY we went over in the mass security of the sight-seeing bus, but there was the same dawdling at the barrier. We drove beyond the showplaces downtown, beyond Unter den Linden, Wilhelmstrasse and the other places whose names tickled memories dormant for nearly a generation now.

Most of Berlin's Imperial palaces, museums, and cultural centers were here, and most were bombed out. Unlike West Berlin, they remain largely untouched, weeds and trees growing out of them.

In East Berlin there has been money only for housing and necessary public buildings. Square and gross in the Russian style, they sprawl endlessly beyond Karl Marx-allee. Everywhere are plastered the glib slogans of communism.

THANKS. Always glad to boost the circulation.

"I was little distressed at your suggestions to career girls in the Sunday paper. . . . I had a grand, unusual and enlightening time. Had my hand kissed by a 70-year-old man, met charming people. Do tell career girls not to be so cautious."

Thanks. Don't be so cautious, girls. (But don't pick up the check either.)

"You are a phony! You keep mentioning Topolobampo (near Los Mochis, Mexico) as a thriving town. I've been been there and even by Mexican standards, there's nothing there."

That's why it's good. You can beach it up without falling all over everybody.

"It is not true that hotels in Lisbon take a percentage when they change your U. S. travelers' checks. . . ."

It is too true. I called four hotels to be sure and asked their exchange rates (three months ago). They quoted a rate that took $3 in every $100. That's the highest I ever ran into anywhere. The banks downtown will cash them for about 35 cents.

"As a former New Yorker, I resent your idea that you have to tip all the time. In my experience, etc."

IN MY experience, I did a check on tipping for three days. I found I averaged 15 tipping situations a day and it was costing me about $15. That's doormen at 25 cents; taxis at 25 cents—and don't tell me you get out of a New York hack and tip less. Hat check girls. The boy who gives your shoulder a whisk in the gentlemen's lounge. Fifteen percent on dinners. Bellboys with the ice. Newsweek magazine did a survey on this. They came up with $20 a day.

MEDICINE AND YOU

No Guarantee for Happiness

By Ben Zinser
Southland Magazine Medical-Science Writer

MENTAL HEALTH and happiness are not synonymous, says psychiatrist Judd Marmor of Beverly Hills in California Medicine.

Says Dr. Marmor: "Obviously even the most successful psychotherapeutic procedure cannot guarantee happiness for anyone. The world in which we live presents us with a continuous succession of real problems and difficulties."

"Even if our personal lives are momentarily free from stress, the world at large never is," he says. "We would be less than healthy if we did not all share some concern about, for example, the current state of our planet.

"One of the challenges which confront modern man, probably more than any of his forebears, is the necessity of living with continuous uncertainty and tension."

MOST AIRLINE stewardesses suffer from sore feet, says an orthopedic surgeon.

Dr. Robert P. Watkins, clinical professor of orthopedic surgery at Stanford University, gives this explanation:

When a plane rises or swoops, there are periods when the hostess weighs up to 400 pounds. All this weight goes to the front part of her feet because of the high heels she wears.

Dr. Watkins told the California Academy of General Practice that stewardesses should wear flat shoes with wide fronts.

A BATTERY-OPERATED thermometer, quicker and more accurate than the conventional mercury clinical thermometer, has been developed in Britain.

Trade-named Dependatherm, the new device takes about three seconds to register a temperature accurate to one-tenth of a degree. A conventional thermometer requires about two minutes to note a temperature accurately.

Dependatherm is small enough to be carried in the pocket. The manufacturer claims it can record 4,500 temperatures on one battery. In case of loss of battery power, a compensating element prevents an inaccurate reading.

IS THIS A record for blood transfusions for a single patient: 584 pints?

Some doctors think it is.

The patient is Jerry Ward, 31-year-old hemophiliac (victim of a blood disorder) from Borger, Tex.

Modern Medicine reports that up to early November, Ward had received 532 pints of blood, packed red cells or plasma in Baylor University Hospital. Earlier he was given 52 pints in a Borger hospital.

The patient has been hospitalized for more than two months with a bleeding ulcer. Three operations have been performed in an effort to halt the hemorrhage.

The blood given at Baylor has been valued at $20,740—but the bill will be absorbed by the Wadley Research Institute and Blood Bank.

THIN SHEETS of polyvinyl sponge are valuable as a temporary but life-saving cover for widespread body burns in children, two researchers have reported to the American Academy of Pediatrics.

Two Buffalo, N. Y., doctors report that the covering aids in control of infection and protects severely burned areas from other threats until skin grafts can be placed.

Four children have been treated in this manner in Buffalo Children's Hospital. Their burned areas involved 20 to 45 per cent of the body surface. All recovered.

Camellias on Display

Early varieties of Sasanqua and Japonica camellias are now in flower at Los Angeles County's Descanso Gardenas, 1418 Descanso Drive, La Canada. The 1962-63 bloom season will continue through next March.

Among the Japonicas is an entirely new chance seedling, named Red Oak, which was found growing out of an old oak stump several years ago.

Red Oak has large, red, peony-shaped flowers. Descanso officials surmised that the seed probably had been deposited in the oak by a squirrel.

Some of the Sasanquas now in bloom are Brilliancy, Showa-no-Sakee, Narumi-Gata, the fragrant Camellia, and Papaver. Other early Japonicas are Daitairin, High Hat, Daikagura red and variegated, Kikitugi, Alba Plena, and Joshua E. Youtz.

About 100,000 camellias grow at Descanso, a facility of the County Department of Arboreta and Botanic Gardens. Admission and parking are free.

New Zinnia

Large, airy and ruffled, white blooms of Snowman (above) bring new interest to the zinnia family in the garden. Flowers measure from 5 to 6 inches in diameter and grow on compact plants which reach only about two feet in ultimate height. It's new for 1963.

By Dorothy Jonson

During the winter months when we can't be out in our gardens every day, we especially enjoy the plants we grow indoors. With a little special care, these can be kept healthy and luxuriant.

There is nothing better to use for watering house plants than the water saved from defrosting your refrigerator, and for most plants the rule is to allow the soil to become dry before watering.

For a fertilizer, my first choice is liquid fish; and every two or three months I like to give a treatment with a soil penetrant containing chelates. A little cottonseed meal (1 tablespoonful to an 8-inch pot) is beneficial to philodendrons, given 3 times a year.

House plants are tender and cannot stand the same insecticides you use to spray your plants outside. However, there is a spray especially for tender-leaf plants.

Tips on Gardening

Garden tips for the week, . . . Start your winter spray program for fruit trees. Ask your nurseryman if you're in doubt about the proper sprays.

Most bareroot stock arrives on the market this week or next. Fruit and shade trees, as well as bareroot roses, are best planted during bareroot season.

Perennial vegetables such as asparagus and artichoke may be set out this month and next.

Deciduous fruit trees may be pruned now. So, too, may grapes.

Holly and other berried shrubs may be purchased now and kept in their containers for indoor decoration during the holiday season.

Days of Silent Films Recalled

theater, sure enough, it wasn't bad, at all.

IN FEBRUARY 1919 I was called to the Metro Studio to play Madame Alla Nazimova's young cousin in "The Brat." She was a Russian star, tops at the time.

The character was a 17-year-old boy who had stolen some jewels and sought refuge from the police under a pile of dirty clothes in his mother's shantytown hovel. The rain beat down on the glass roof, we worked under lights that made us look green as shamrocks. And another boy waited at the edge of the set to replace me if I didn't make good.

The little Madame was very helpful and gave me some valuable hints. When two big policemen pulled me out from under the pile of clothes, it gave me a chance to cry and plead and emote quite a bit. After it was over, I heard Madame Nazimova tell the director general that I did very well. It was like an all-clear signal to me. When the picture was released, I was gratified when many strangers recognized me and spoke to me of my work in it.

"THE CLEVEREST Negro performer I ever knew was an actress named Nellie Conley whom I met at the old Griffith Studio in 1916. When she started out with a circus in early life she assumed the name Madam Sul-Te-Wan and used that name professionally all her life. I still have a photograph she gave to my mother.

She died recently at the age of 85. But she lived to see many of her hopes realized in her granddaughter, Dorothy Dandridge.

WHEN A news commentator on TV announced the death of Louise Fazenda, I looked up at the wall of my apartment and saw her face smiling down at me from an autographed photograph just as it has since 1918. It brought to mind the last time I saw her in person. I was working in court and just after quitting, I met Louise at First Street and Broadway. We stopped to talk and she filled my hands with lemon drops from a large paper bag she was carrying.

When I see Morris Ankrum play a judge in a Perry Mason picture, I wonder if he remembers the time I congratulated him on his first part in pictures. Lou Tellegen was the star and director. Lou played a priest who went into a saloon to pick up the protesting Morris and take him home.

BEN ALEXANDER is a great MC and when I see him on the screen I always think of the first time I saw him. He was 5 years old and had just created a stir by his realistic acting in D. W. Griffith's "Hearts of the World." I was playing a choir boy at the Brunton Studio and was sitting in the choir loft waiting for the shooting to start. Ben and his mother appeared on the set. With the freedom and spontaneity of childhood, little Ben made his way up the steps, climbed up on my lap and put an arm around my shoulder. From that coign of vantage he sat quietly watching the preparations going on below until it was time to shoot the scene. I have never seen Ben in person since he waved goodby to me that day.

Early in 1921, under pressure of a severe slump in the motion picture field, I became a clerk of the Superior Court. After serving for 31 years in that capacity, I now look back on the earlier period from the vantage point of happy retirement.

I know that Hollywood is still there, but I wonder if there is the same spirit of camaraderie and helpfulness that we all knew in the old days.

Praise vs. Fear

By Harry Karns

Education Research Associates

QUESTION: Does fear of punishment help a child learn a lesson?

ANSWER: Fear is probably more effective than no motivation at all. But why use it when praise of good work is vastly superior as an aid to learning?

A child in a state of anxiety will often try frantically to learn. This frantic effort may lead to achievement at simple tasks. If the problem is a difficult one requiring some fine distinctions, however, he will be easily defeated.

The child who is taught by fear learns one thing very well, a resentment of learning.

QUESTION: "Will it help if I test my son at home in preparation for his exam at school?"

ANSWER: Such an exercise can prove very helpful—if properly conducted. Otherwise, you may succeed only in wasting the boy's time and throwing him into confusion.

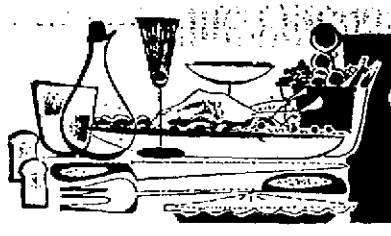

Some guide lines:

Examine previous homework lessons and test papers to discover the kind of question the teacher will probably ask. With due consideration for the teacher's idiosyncracies, steer away from obscure details and touch mainly on essentials.

Cover only the material assigned. If the test is on the life of Shakespeare, don't expand the study effort to cover the entire Elizabethan period and all the writers in it. For the purposes of the test, such information is extraneous.

Finally, don't ask "trick" questions. They create suspicion in the child's mind and may cause him to see tricks in questions where none exist. Play fair; ask a straight question and expect a straight answer.

These suggestions will help you give the child a good test. But you will help him even more if you encourage him to go through the assigned work and write out the test for himself.

WHERE SHALL we go for Christmas dinner?

Why, to the azure, gold and red tints of the New Mexico desert, of course, where the restful atmosphere is conducive to pleasant dining. And to make it all the more restful it isn't even necessary to drive from Long Beach to New Mexico, because a restaurant located at 1735 W. Pacific Coast Hwy. provides all the charm of that southwestern locale.

This restaurant is called Currie's Santa Fe. Large and luxurious, with murals of New Mexico on display, Currie's is operated by Gabriel (Bill) Dovalis, his wife Goldie and their son Rodney, 25, a St. Anthony's School graduate who studied business administration at St. Edward's University in Texas and the University of Arizona.

On Christmas Day Currie's will serve a sumptuous special menu from 11 a.m. to 11:30 p.m. One of the highlights will be roast turkey ($2.95), served with giblet gravy, a mildly spiced dressing and all the pleasures of a holiday dinner, such as chilled appetizers, choice of cream of chicken soup or clam chowder, tossed green salad, whipped potatoes, baked potato or sweet potatoes, fresh garden peas, cranberry sauce, garlic toast, beverage, hot mince pie or apple pie. Other fine entrees on that dinner will include Currie's special steak, $3; Long Island duck, $3; whole broiled lobster, $3.60; baked premium ham with fruit sauce, $2.95, and fine New York cut steak, $4.75.

Currie's will serve its regular menu today, starting at 11 a.m., including such appetite teasers as broiled lobster stuffed with shrimp and crabmeat, loin pork chops, extra cut lamb chops and broiled half chicken ($2.50), all served on a large dinner.

Mary Martin Remembers Snow, Carols, Two Deer and the Joy of a Child

By MARY MARTIN
As Told to Bert Resnik

To me Christmas means family.

That's why last Christmas was one of my most thrilling —I spent it with my family.

Most of my Christmases have been devoted to doing two shows on the New York stage.

But last year was different.

We went to a log cabin in a place called Starling Forest. All my family was there, my son, my daughter-in-law, my grandchild, my daughter, her husband-to-be, my husband, his sister and her family.

It was an unforgettable weekend.

It snowed — one of the biggest snowfalls in years.

We all had the joy of going in the middle of those mountains and cutting down our own tree.

My grandchild, Heidi, cut her own little tree.

* * * *

WE SPENT a wonderful afternoon trimming the trees and the snow kept coming down.

We sang Christmas carols.

I played the "Little Donkey" and Heidi was Mary. She rode on my back.

On Christmas morning Santa Claus (my son Larry is six feet tall) came in front of the cabin's picture window.

I called to my grandchild:

She came running to the window and just at that moment—almost as if it had been planned—two deer came out of the forest.

It was just the greatest Christmas.

If you get one Christmas like that in your lifetime, you're forever grateful.

'CRAZY GUGGENHAM'

Fontaine Hit as Zany Character

By DOC QUIGG

NEW YORK (UPI)—"Jackie Gleason said to me last September, he said: 'Frank, you been raising a big family a long time.'

"I said, 'Yep, I sure had.' So then he said: 'It's time you were a big star. I'm going to do my utmost to make you one before this season is over.'

"Well, it was good to be on a television show with a buddy of 16 years—but to see him favoring the second comedian, this has been a delightful experience.

"You know, I've been doing a zany character since I was 15—I call him John L. C. Sivoneey—and Jackie said to me: 'Why don't you have John be the character called Crazy Guggenham on the (Joe the Bartender) skit on my show?' I said okay, and we did.

"Then after the third week of the show, Jackie heard me singing in the dressing room and he said: 'Frank, you gotta sing on the show.'

"Me, Frank Fontaine, I first went onstage with my father when I was 8, and I was traveling with a Major Bowes amateur unit doing imitations when I was 16—and I turned professional, doing vaudeville and night clubs, when I was 17—and I never sang on the stage before.

"I HAD ONE singing lesson—nine months ago. I had it because I realized that record companies were approaching the comedians. I never had a chance to continue the lessons, but now I've got my own album coming out Jan. 2 on ABC Paramount. It's titled 'Songs I Sing on the Jackie Gleason Show.' People who watch the show will know what type songs are on the record.

"My kids? Yes, I've got 11—nine boys and two girls—and they just can't wait to get in show business. My oldest boy, Frank Jr., —he's the one that has the two kids, and he's 24 and studying to be a radio announcer that makes me a grandfather, me with this big shock of blond hair.

"My second son, Robert, 20, he was a comedian—he imitated my zany act—before he got in the Marine Corps two years ago. He's at Guantanamo now, and that's one of the reasons everybody on the Gleason show was glad for me going down to Guantanamo with Ed Sullivan to be on the Sullivan Show from there (8 p. m. today, channel 2). It was my first reunion with Robert for 17 months —and a chance to bring him all the love from his Mom and brothers and sisters.

"YOU KNOW, it was Ed Sullivan who introduced me to the nation on his first three TV shows in 1948. In the early days I had this goofy character Sivoneey as a sweepstakes winner, and Sullivan had me do the sweeps bit three times in a row.

"I said, 'Ed, what're you doing?' He said, 'Frank, it's that good.' Then, after each performance, he'd tell the audience: 'This boy oughtta be in picturrrrs.' The fourth week I was in Hollywood doing it at M-G-M.

"I have a daughter, 21, going to TV and dramatic school in Boston, and the other daughter, 13, does ballet. The boys all imitate me. When Gleason heard about this imitation at rehearsal, he said, 'Pick one out of the middle and let's put him on the show tomorrow.' So I went and got Chrissie, he's 10; you may have seen the show.

"Anyway, you can just say that with all the nice things that have happened to me this year, it'll certainly be a merry Christmas and a happy New Year. A book? Yes, it's true I've always wanted to write about the people I've known in show business throughout the years.

"The most remarkable? I gotta say Jackie Gleason. What a hunk of talent that guy is."

FRANK FONTAINE . . . On Sullivan Show Tonight

OPERA STAR Rise Stevens sings Christmas songs during "Voice of Firestone" at 10 p. m. Sunday, channel 7. Also featured will be tenor Brian Sullivan and the Columbus Boys Choir of Princeton, N. J.

Young Stage-Screen Star on 'Steel Hour'

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — If the movies ever turn out another "America's Sweetheart" odds are she will be Patty Duke who blends the best qualities of Shirley Temple and Mary Pickford, 1962 style.

At 15 Patty is blessed with a compelling sweetness and vast talent. She also is startlingly unspoiled.

(Patty guest stars on the "U.S. Steel Hour" at 10 p.m. Wednesday, channel 2.)

Two years of stardom on Broadway in "The Miracle Worker," plus her Oscar-contending performance in the film version, were followed by an outright flop.

* * * *

REACHING the heights and bouncing to the depths have left Patty philosophical and optimistic.

"After 'The Miracle Worker' I thought it would be wonderful to be in another hit play," she said, grinning at her own wishful thinking. "So for eight months we prepared for 'The Isle of Children.' Our hopes were high. But it fasted only for eight performances.

"It hurt. It hurt very much. But I forced myself to think ahead.

"The hardest thing is to say goodbye to people you've grown fond of during the tryouts and rehearsals. But I've learned you must take the good things with the bad in show business."

* * * *

ONE OF THE good things coming up for the fair-haired youngster is a television series.

Peter Lawford's Chrislaw Productions has signed the diminutive actress to star in "The Patty Duke Show," the pilot of which will be filmed this fall.

"It will be aimed at teen-agers and situation comedy," she said. "I really like working in television."

Patty says the burdens of being a working teen-ager are slight indeed compared to the advantages.

"The majority of teen-agers don't have enough to do. They haven't got any responsibility," she said. "When they are out of school there is nothing to occupy them, except maybe trouble.

"In the afternoons, when I'm not actually working, I have interviews, read scripts and study. But I also have time to play.

* * * *

"I DON'T have any boyfriends, but I like to hang around with the kids who live in my neighborhood back in New York. They treat me just like anyone else. I'm not a star to my friends. In fact they sometimes take off for a movie or something and forget all about asking me to go along.

"I really like my life better than theirs.' And I hope I never have to return to being just a teen-ager. I'm having too much fun being an actress."

If Lawford and company decide to go ahead with the series for the 1963-64 season, Patty will be the busiest girl in New York.

"That's where they'll shoot the series," she said happily. "I can't think of anything nicer happening to a girl like me."

'THAT WAS WEEK THAT WAS'

Protest BBC Program But Show Goes On

By ROBERT MUSEL

LONDON (UPI)—Someone once said American television sponsors get a lot of their exercise bowing to pressure groups.

The British Broadcasting Corp., on the other hand, is apt to develop a case of instant deafness just when pressure groups are howling their loudest.

So the producer of a new Saturday night weekly program, "That Was the Week That Was," got the green light to continue with a satirical revue that has drawn a record number of protests in its first month.

An American producer who got 462 abusive phone calls, one threat of legal action and a request by a government official for a look at the script after a single show would be moodily scanning the "Help Wanted" advertisements.

BUT PRODUCER NED SHERRIN, 31, whose show got just that reaction, is delighted that "That Was the Week Thas Was" has aroused so much interest. Besides, among the phone calls in praise—there were 619 of those—was one from his boss at the BBC, Alastair Milne.

Sherrin has been given what he describes as "tremendous independence" through a genial bit of manipulation at BBC headquarters. If "That Was the Week That Was" was a revue it would be subject to the BBC rule that revue and variety shows must not deal with politics, religion or royalty.

So although it has sketches, songs, monologues and music —in fact everything a revue has—the BBC insists with a straight face that it is a "talk." And BBC "talks" can be on almost any subject under the sun.

"PEOPLE SAY THAT it's a satirical revue," said Sherrin, who was a lawyer before he joined the BBC. "But that's not how we look at it. We try to provide an intelligent commentary on the week's events in the form of sketches, musical interludes and comment."

He admitted that "some of the people we have attacked haven't been too happy about it. But, touch wood, there have been no writs—yet."

The show's immunity from writs may not last long at the rate it is going. In the first show a month ago it dug so deeply into various practices on Tin Pan Alley that one well-known musical figure was said to have taken legal advice.

Fifteen writers, working right up to Saturday morning, produced the script for the last show. It attacked British food, distorted a speech by Prime Minister Harold Macmillan to show what might happen if a sound track went wrong (the prime minister appeared to be advocating war). There was a comment on the end of the Ecumenical Council—a chorus of cardinals singing "Arriverdeci Roma" (Goodbye Rome)—and at least one of the skits was rather blue.

The willingness of the government-owned broadcasting corporation to let Sherrin name names, even when it may mean antagonizing prominent personalities, is new to television here.

FCC Warns on Lotteries

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Communications Commission has warned that radio and television stations face possible fines or license revocation if they broadcast lottery advertisements even where permitted by state or local laws.

The FCC notice apparently was issued after the commission received reports that some stations were broadcasting lottery information "in the mistaken belief that it was permissible." The commission, however, named no specific violators.

* * * *

IT SAID broadcasting lottery advertisements or information was subject both to criminal prosecution and administrative crackdowns under the Communications Act and FCC rules.

Pan and Fan Mail

What kind of a jacket was Arlene Francis wearing on "What's My Line?" on Dec. 2?

Part of it was mink, but I don't know what the other material was.

Can I get it? What is the approximate cost?

Mrs. Virginia Martin, Buena Park

The part that wasn't mink was velvet. It was made especially for Arlene by Scaarsi Inc., 550 7th Ave., New York, N. Y. Cost not revealed specifically but termed "very expensive." As to whether you can get it, Virginia, why don't you discuss it with Santa? Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus.

* * * *

Won't you please tell Desilu—or whoever—not to terminate "Fair Exchange?" It's delightful. It's absolutely wizard.

Why do they always take off the best programs?

I guess I know the answer to that one, but surely there are enough viewers with discrimination to give this show a fairly reasonable rating—or isn't that enough?

Charlotte Hull, Long Beach.

"Fair Exchange" should come back in late spring in half-hour form—half- wizard.

* * * *

I have just finished reading that the Roy Rogers-Dale Evans show is being canceled because of ratings.

This, in my opinion, is a good show. No one ever called me asking what program I was listening to.

This is the opinion of one woman and that of many others. I am sorry that Roy and Dale are to be taken off the air and I hope that TV moguls are happy.

Merry Christmas.

Mrs. C. F. Bales, Westminster

Same to you, Roy, Dale and the moguls.

Q. I am told that the most exciting new ballet dancer in Russia is an American named Edward Villella. Can you tell us anything about him?—Maria Dunnison, New York, N.Y.

A. Villella on tour in Russia with the New York City ballet was described by Moscow dance critics as "one of the most exciting new male dancers of our time." A native New Yorker, Villella is a former boxer who trained for the merchant marine, gave it up for dancing.

Q. Is it true that Premier Stalin planned to exile the entire Mikoyan family to Siberia during World War II? —J. Palmer, Wheeling, W. Va.

A. There was some talk of it. Eventually one or more of Mikoyan's four sons were exiled to Siberia, which is why there was never any love lost between Stalin and Mikoyan.

Q. Raymond Massey, the actor, has a daughter, Anna, 25, who is extremely talented. I saw her on the London stage. Is she married and if so, to whom?—Lillian Plant, Dencer, Colo.

A. Anna Massey, alleging misconduct by her 29-year-old husband, English actor Peter Huggins in London, recently was awarded a divorce and custody of their 3-year-old son.

Q. Where will the 1964 and 1968 Olympic Games be held?—Anthony M. Ford, Chicago, Ill.

A. 1964 in Tokyo—1968 as yet undecided but probably Lyons, France, or Detroit, Mich.

Q. Is it true that most of the world's great financiers end up unhappy, miserable suicides? How about men like Insull, Hopson, Kreuger, Livermore and others?— J. Christopher Stallings, San Francisco, Calif.

A. It is true that many, but not most, of the world's financial giants have come to an unhappy end. Jesse Livermore and Ivar Kreuger were suicides. Insull died a fugitive. Howard Hopson died insane. Money frequently brings unhappiness.

Q. Republican National Chairman William Miller said recently that the Republican Party in his opinion did not have "anything to worry about." In the last 32 years how many times has the Republican Party controlled Congress?—T. L., Tucson, Ariz.

A. Twice—in 1946 and 1952.

Q. I understand that C. P. Snow, the author-scientist, recently died on the operating table. Details, please.— Anna Gold, New York, N.Y.

A. Sir Charles Snow is very much alive. During an operation on the retina of his eye, his heart suddenly stopped beating. Dr. Lorimer Fison, the ophthalmic surgeon, opened Snow's chest, massaged the heart by hand. After two minutes it began to beat again. Snow recovered, but lost the sight of one eye.

Q. Does anyone know how much money Khrushchev has poured into Cuba?—Stephen M., St. Louis, Mo.

A. An estimated $1,000,000,000 in arms; an estimated $912,000,000 in economic aid, for Castro's Cuba.

Q. Is Senator Hubert Humphrey the only pharmacist in Congress? What are his degrees?—Janet Mollifson, Minneapolis, Minn.

A. Humphrey, 51, is the only pharmacist in Congress. He attended the Denver College of Pharmacy, but got his Bachelor of Arts degree from the University of Minnesota and an M.A. from Louisiana. He was elected mayor of Minneapolis at the age of 34 and a United States senator at 37.

Q. Is it true that Yehudi Menuhin, the great violinist, is now in the food business?—C. Kirk, Springfield, O.

A. Yes, the health food line in London.

Q. I would like to know the minimum wage for members of the Screen Actors Guild who work in Hollywood.—Susan Leonard, Evansville, Ind.

A. $100 a day or $350 a week, but work is so scarce in films that last year 70 per cent of Guild members earned less than $2500 from motion picture work.

Q. What is the relationship between President Kennedy and pollster Lou Harris?—J. Leylan, Dallas, Tex.

A. Lou Harris, 41, of Louis Harris & Associates, is a close friend of President Kennedy's. His samplings of public opinion have helped guide Kennedy since he was a U.S. senator. Harris is known figuratively as the President's private pollster. He employs 25 assistants and 3,000 part-time interviewers. Reportedly the Democratic National Committee paid Harris $76,000 in the first 5 months of 1962.

ON PARADE

The first Christmas—what was it really like? What if we could go back in time, taste the crisp air of that winter's eve in Bethlehem, listen to the creaking carts and the voices in the narrow streets, watch the people of the town as they moved about their business on the night of the birth of Our Lord?

In an attempt to recapture a sense of that moment, PARADE's Jack Anderson made a recent journey by plane to the Holy Land. There, in Bethlehem, he found much that had not changed. He even discovered a mother and her new-born child near the very spot where, scholars believe, stood the manger that sheltered Mary and Joseph. From these ordinary people of today, he gained a vivid insight into what it must have been like to be present at that other birth long ago.

Anderson's inspiring story of Aida and Tofick Canavati and their new son appears on page 8. It reminds us once again how richly human, how timeless and ever-pertinent, were the miraculous events that took place, nearly 2,000 years ago, among the simple townfolk of Bethlehem.

DON'T YOU READ BEFORE YOU BUY?

Most people do.
They not only read about products in print but they study and compare. They clip and they save and they show to their friends. They make notes, choose colors, pick designs, consider styles.

And then they buy.
They, like you, count on print advertising for information about all kinds of products that interest them. Cosmetics and clothes, cars and cash registers, groceries and garbage disposers, barbecues and boats.

So if you and your product are in close competition with other advertisers and their products —better put part of your advertising in print. Better put it where the clippers and savers and ready-to-buy buyers can get their hands on it.

Print makes sense, because print makes sales.

'PEOPLE ARE GOOD'

The amazing experience of a stunt man who died three times

BY LLOYD SHEARER

HOLLYWOOD.

THERE ARE NO MOTION PICTURE STARS who do all their own stunts.

There are several reasons for this: 1) Many stars are not particularly courageous; 2) many stars are foppish and physically weak; 3) many stars enjoy a realistic sense of values and see no point in endangering their own photogenic faces.

When a script calls for dangerous feats, a breed of strong, athletic man is hired to perform them.

Hollywood pays these stunt men a minimum of $400 a week. They risk their lives in action scenes which generally are filmed from a distance so that the audience will not detect the substitution of the stunt man for the star.

One such stunt man is Bob Morgan, 47, husband of screen actress Yvonne De Carlo.

In 17 years, Morgan, a former Navy pilot from Mt. Carmel, Ill., has performed stunts for Burt Lancaster, Humphrey Bogart, John Wayne, Gary Cooper, Jim Arness, dozens of others.

This past April, Bob was stunting in a film, How the West Was Won, on location near Globe, Ariz. His hair was bleached blond so that he looked like actor George Peppard. The script called for him to ride a flatcar loaded with 6,000-pound logs (see photo).

Bob was supposed to hide in the coupling that connected two cars and to hold on to the slipping logs while the train was in motion. It was part of an outlaw scene.

He performed the stunt, and the Cinerama cameras filmed it. Morgan then moved out of the shot onto the coupling. Suddenly some assistant shouted, "Logs!" The logs were hydraulically released. They crashed down on Bob, throwing him beneath the speeding train. Two flatcars and a caboose passed over him.

This once-tall, lithe, handsome athlete, 6 feet 2, 200 pounds, lay like a limp, boneless, tattered rag doll tossed aimlessly from a train window. The few remaining sparks of life in him seemed about to flicker out.

Morgan refused to die. He was carried into a station wagon and driven to a hospital in Superior, Ariz. En route, still conscious, he asked Hayward, "How bad am I?"

Said Hayward, expecting his friend to die momentarily, "Not bad, just a little skin lost." Then Hayward took some gauze out of the first-aid kit, bandaged Morgan's eye "to keep the eyeball in."

At Superior the doctor began blood transfusions, announced quickly: "We can't save him here. We don't have the equipment. You've got to get him to Phoenix."

They loaded Morgan, bone-broken and bleeding, into an ambulance, raced 70 miles to Phoenix where 7 doctors took turns trying to save him. Says Bob: "They tell me I died twice, that my heart stopped beating, but somehow they got me going again. The doctors were wonderful. They performed miracles. And so were the people in Arizona.

80 Pints of Blood

"Some radio announcer went on the air and said I needed blood, lots of blood. I think they pumped 80 pints into me. The response was magnificent. You think people are selfish and hardhearted? Well, they're not. When the chips are down, when another human being is in trouble, it brings out the best in people. You know, I had so many volunteer blood-donors they had to stop them from coming to the hospital. Talk about the brotherhood of man. I'm going to have Christmas dinner with my family this year because of that very same brotherhood. Perfect strangers—guys I never heard of—they gave their blood. They offered money. They wrote letters of encouragement.

"And my wife, Yvonne—what guts! You think I look like a mess now? You should've seen what I looked like when she first saw me after the accident. I was a horrible freak. But she came into that hospital room and when I opened one eye, there she was, standing above me, smiling, telling me over and over again that I was going to make it.

"You hear a lot about actresses, how they're selfish

On the mend after his catastrophic accident last spring, and with high hopes for the future, former stunt man Bob Morgan is seen with wife, screen star Yvonne De Carlo, daughter Bori Lee, 15, and sons Bruce, 6, and Michael, 5.

Minutes before his accident, Morgan performs stunt for film How the West Was Won.

egomaniacs, thinking only of their beauty, how they're ready to ditch a guy as soon as he can't help them. Not my Yvonne. She's stayed by me; and the truth is that without her encouragement I couldn't have made it. I drew my strength from her. I can tell you—for her, it wasn't easy. It isn't easy now because I still have a long way to go. But now I know I'm going to make it."

Yvonne De Carlo's recollection of what happened is graphic. "I had just gotten in the front door from Hesperia," she says. "That's a little town not very far from Los Angeles where I'd gone to break in my new night-club act. I had just kissed our two little boys hello—Michael, 5, and Bruce, 6—when the phone rang. It was a friend calling. But the operator broke in and said, 'I'm sorry. This is an emergency.'

A Few Hours to Live

"Then I heard Chuck Hayward's voice. He told me Bob was dying and to charter the first plane I could get. The doctors didn't expect Bob to live more than another few hours. You can imagine how I felt.

"Bob has a teenage daughter by his first marriage who lives with us," Yvonne explains. "A delightful girl, Bari Lee. She's 15 now. Bob's first wife was Helen Crlenkovich, the national diving champion. She used to be under contract to Larry Crosby, Bing's brother, when they were staging water shows—which is how Bob came to Hollywood in the first place. She died in 1956. After that, I met Bob and we got married. Anyway, in getting ready to go to the hospital in Phoenix, I said to myself: 'If he's dying now, his daughter has a right to see him so I'd better take her with me.' "

Bari and Yvonne flew to Phoenix. At the hospital, the actress suggested to her stepdaughter that she wait outside her dad's room.

"I'm glad I did that," she says, "because Bob was so mutilated. He looked so bad that I knew it would have a terrible effect on Bari. If her father was going to die—and it looked that way—I didn't want her to remember him in such a state.

"Besides, he was just about to go into shock, and did, which was an awful thing because it meant they couldn't operate on him. He grew more and more toxic, because all his elimination apparatus had been crushed, and there was no way of getting the poison out of his body and, of course, contamination and fever set in, and eventually gangrene.

"I stayed in Phoenix for a month, because I expected that every day with Bob would be the last, but the doctors—they were just wonderful—kept him alive. And after a month they told me he had a chance, that I could go back to Los Angeles—which I had to do, because, after all, somebody had to earn a living and keep the family going. I hadn't been doing much film work, just a picture in Rome (Mary Magdalena), and I had to perfect my night-club act. I'd already been booked into one club, and I'd had to cancel that date. But this second date I could keep."

Yvonne was singing at a small club across the highway from Disneyland, doing three shows a night, trying to be funny with a comedy routine, when one evening a phone call from Phoenix interrupted her act. It was one of the doctors. "You must fly here immediately," he declared. "Your husband's left leg is gangrenous. We want you to sign for immediate amputation or we're going to lose him."

Yvonne flew to Phoenix. At the hospital she found her husband a deathly white, completely toxic, cold as ice.

"I said to myself," she recalls, "that this was it, because poor Bob, he was hardly alive. He was just hanging on. They took him up to surgery, and for two hours they couldn't do anything. They told me he died once on the table before they could get more blood into him. But somehow they went ahead and even after the amputation, the toxemia wouldn't go away and it looked as if we were going to lose him after all.

'It's a Miracle'

"But I prayed and I prayed, and he held on—or God let him hold on. I'm sure it was God, because it's a miracle that he's alive today, a miracle that God can give surgeons and doctors and nurses such skill, such goodness, such power, such understanding.

"Take the psychiatrist whose job it was to tell Bob that his left leg was gone. Bob wouldn't accept it for days. He's a golf fiend, you know—has always played golf and loves the game more than almost anything else. Of course, after the operation Bob was still drugged. It's not like they show it in the movies. After screen amputation, the patient looks down and sees his leg is missing and screams. It's not that way at all.

"Bob's reaction was not to look down or to accept it. The doctors who performed the operation tried to tell him, but he wouldn't accept it and finally they called in this psychiatrist—and it even took him two or three times, because how do you tell a man who is primarily physical that his left leg and thigh have been amputated?

"But this psychiatrist was wonderful. 'Well, Bob,' he said, 'it looks as if you're out of the woods, boy. As you know, we had to take it off.' Bob said, 'What do you mean? Take what off?' The doctor replied simply, 'Your foot.' Bob said, 'Oh, no, not on your life. I made a bet with Doc Hartman. We both made a bet that I'm going to keep my leg. And by golly—I'm going to keep that old leg! Yes, sir—I'm going to keep that leg.'

"But the psychiatrist was determined to tell Bob the truth. I was standing outside the door, tears streaming down my face, my heart breaking, but I could hear the conversation and the moment of truth had come. And the doctor wasn't going to be turned away. God—what a man! He said to Bob, simply and gently and matter-of-factly, as if he were talking to Michael or Bruce or any little boy, 'It's done. It's over. We had the choice, life or death. You helped us make it, Bob. The leg is gone, but we're getting you another one. You're going to be all right.'

"There were a few moments of silence. I didn't know what Bob was going to do—accept it or scream or faint or go into shock or what. Then very slowly, very softly, Bob said: 'Tell me the truth, Doc. Will I ever be able to play golf again?' The doctor replied, 'You've got my word for it.' And then—big, brave wife that I am—I dried my eyes, knocked on the door and walked in."

Today, 9 months following his accident, Bob Morgan is working on his golf game and hopes soon to be shooting in the 80's. He's become adjusted to his artificial leg, has devised with pro golfer Tommy Bolt a stance chart for balanced golf which should be on the market any day now. The chart shows the beginning golfer how to stand and swing with each different club.

The Future Is Bright

Morgan is cheerful, optimistic, ebullient. Plastic surgeons plan to repair the left side of his face and have him "almost as good as new" within the next few months. Furthermore, doctors expect him to regain full sight in his right eye.

The motion picture industry, for the most part, has been exceedingly kind to him and his family in a basically practical as well as spiritually encouraging way. John Wayne, for example, when he was casting McClintock, his latest film, dealing with the life of a cattle baron, said: "I don't care who else goes into this picture. Bob Morgan's wife gets a fat part."

The result is that Yvonne De Carlo shares star billing in the production with Wayne and Maureen O'Hara. It's her first film job in a long time, but now other offers are coming in.

Morgan has also been told that if he'd like to go into film editing or second unit direction, union rules will be waived and he'll be given the opportunity to earn a good living.

"I don't know why it should've taken a near tragedy for me to learn it," he says, "but the truth is that people are essentially good, essentially kind. And that's not too easy to be in this competitive world of ours. Many of us are so busy making a living that we forget or lose our basic sense of values. What's important in life—I mean really important and lasting? It's love and kindness and decency and helping your neighbor or, for that matter, a perfect stranger.

"I owe my life to I don't know how many people—maybe 200. 'No man is an island unto himself.' How true! From here on in, I'm determined to pay back in kindness and consideration what other people have shown me. Matter of fact that's gonna be my message to the kids this Christmas. Try to fill the world with a little kindness." ■

Lighting candles, Mildred and Don Maxon and girls of "Mildred's Happy Home" wait for Christmas. They'll spend the day doing good deeds.

'NOBODY CAN OUTGIVE GOD'

An inspiring story for Christmas about one woman's loving-kindness

by SID ROSS

PHOENIX, ARIZ.

MILDRED MAXON, 38, is one of America's most remarkable women.

At a given moment, you might find her in the Phoenix slums, giving out groceries to hungry families. Or she might be in a clothing store, buying shoes for needy children.

You might meet her on Skid Row, aiding a derelict; or in a hospital waiting room, providing a sympathetic ear for a tearful family; or in a utility office, paying the bills of a jobless man.

Or you might find her at "Mildred's Happy Home," one of the nation's most unusual institutions—a refuge for teenage girls which Mildred founded and operates in her own home.

The most remarkable thing about Mildred, however, is that she does all this on practically no money. Mildred's husband, Daniel, a schoolteacher, is sick and lives on unemployment compensation.

But Mildred does have faith—the kind of faith that moves mountains. And she uses it to help those less fortunate than herself and to provide an object lesson for the Christmas season.

Not long ago, for instance, Mildred heard about a desperate widow in the nearby town of Surprise. The woman was sick, had no medicine and no money to buy any. Her five children needed milk; her oldest son wanted to drop out of high school because children made fun of his tattered clothes. Mildred went to their home and promised everything would be taken care of. She charmed food out of grocers and farmers, got emergency milk rations, bought the boy a pair of trousers at a rummage sale. She bought medicine and gave the boy spending money.

Mildred wasn't worried about being paid back. "When you have faith," she says, "you live for today and let tomorrow take care of itself.

"Besides, nobody can outgive God."

This is the philosophy that makes people call Mildred "a perfect saint"—and helped to establish the chief of her charities, Mildred's Happy Home. The Home, where the Maxons also reside, is a flourishing institution here in Phoenix—an eight-bedroom, one-story ranch house now shared by five girls from broken homes and the Maxons' own two daughters, Margaret, 16, and Marcia, 13. In its unique family setup, Mildred and Daniel dispense family love in large doses. Dozens of girls who have been kicked around for years learn to feel wanted again.

What Neglected Girls Need

"There are so many young girls who are homeless, neglected and unhappy—products of divorce and broken homes," Mildred says. "They should have a wholesome family environment to help them grow up in a normal manner. They need not only the closeness of family life but education in things they've never had—manners, grooming, cleanliness, self-respect. They need to know that a family can live together without fighting and quarreling."

Mildred seems to answer some secret longing in every human heart. She is cheerful, tender and kind—and people gravitate toward her. Not long ago, in a poor section of Phoenix, she provided clothing for a raggle-taggle of kids who would have put the Pied Piper to shame. On the same day, she called at the gospel mission. Minutes later, an old man was crying on her shoulder, telling her he was sick and pleading for comfort. Mildred dropped everything and got him into a hospital.

Mildred dotes on her girls and glories in little triumphs. Not long ago, she took in a shy, scared, withdrawn rabbit of a girl who had never known her own mother. She always held back, avoided contact with Mildred. Then one day, very hesitatingly, she called Mildred "Mother." Mildred threw her arms around her and cried.

And there was the time recently when Mildred was visiting Susie's school during Open School Week. Product of a broken home, Susie met Mildred at the door and seized her arm. "Please walk down the corridors with me," she said, "so everyone can see what a wonderful mother I have."

Actually Mildred's Happy Home has roots in the founder's own girlhood. As a child, Mildred often went barefoot and hungry because her watchman-father couldn't support 11 children. Once she wanted to go to a party and couldn't afford a dress. A kindly shopkeeper gave her one. Mildred determined then and there to do things for others.

It wasn't until 1949, however, that Mildred went into philanthropy on a grand scale. It came about, oddly enough, because she was overweight. Her doctor advised her to "do something to take your mind off food."

So Mildred volunteered to help at the local hospitals. She started by teaching patients at Arizona State Hospital to cook and sew. Next she went to Maricopa County Hospital, where she sought out patients' distressed families and tried to cheer them up.

The Price of a Suit

The poor people of Phoenix have a grapevine which spread the word about Mildred. Soon she was paying bills, buying clothes, giving out groceries—and charming others into helping her do it.

Meanwhile, her own family cheerfully learned to live on a shoestring. They ate pancakes and macaroni. Mildred's husband Don never bought a suit that cost more than $8 second-hand. Marcia and Margaret wear dresses bought at rummage sales.

It was inevitable that Mildred's charities would bring public attention. And that, in turn, brought Roy Michell to Mildred's door.

Michell is a Detroit manufacturer who winters in Phoenix. One day he read about Mildred and came to see her. He looked over her home, also listened to her dream of a "real home for forgotten girls." The next day the mail brought his check for $500.

That was the start of Mildred's Happy Home. (Daughter Marcia gave it the name.) Michell helped the Maxons incorporate as a child-care institution and underwrote some expenses. Later, when the Home bought its present quarters at 5844 N. Second Ave., he and local businessmen put up more money.

The Home today bubbles with joy and laughter. Its present "family" consists of Sherri, 16; Susie, 16; Peggy, 15; Frances, 17; and Grace, 19; and the Maxon girls. Mildred treats all her "daughters" equally.

As a mother, she is both strict and gentle. She "reaches" each girl by a different route. For instance, Susie, who had been raised by lenient grandparents, came to the Home arrogant, abusive and lazy. One day she sassed Mildred and was hauled off to the kitchen and spanked. "Thank you," Susie sobbed afterwards. "That should have been done long ago."

On the other hand, Sherri arrived a wild and unmanageable creature, who promptly got into trouble at school. Mildred was called to the school where she declared, "I'm Sherri's mother and I love her. Please help me to help her." Sherri was so moved by the defense that she never misbehaved again.

Mildred's girls lead a demanding life. They have housekeeping duties, must follow a schedule and are restricted in what they can wear and when they must go to bed. They are allowed to date, but must answer a 10 o'clock curfew. They are told to abide by the Mildred's Happy Home Ten Commandments, which cover personal behavior and decorum and also stress "Go to church faithfully." And if they do not keep up their school grades, their privileges are revoked.

As of this writing, the Home has problems. It is threatened with a shutdown, because it is operating in a residential zone. In addition, the treasury is low and has only enough for a few months' operation. Finally, there is Dan. His unemployment compensation is about to run out. His health is not improving.

But Mildred just goes on giving. Perhaps the best testimonial comes from her daughter, Margaret.

"I'm a better person for the kind of mother I have," says Margaret. "She's brought us happiness and taught us the satisfaction of living for others. When I grow up I know the kind of mother I want to be—a mother just like mine." ■

Sympathetic Mildred consoles one of girls—Grace, 19—about a dating problem. Girls call her "Mommy," always seek her for advice.

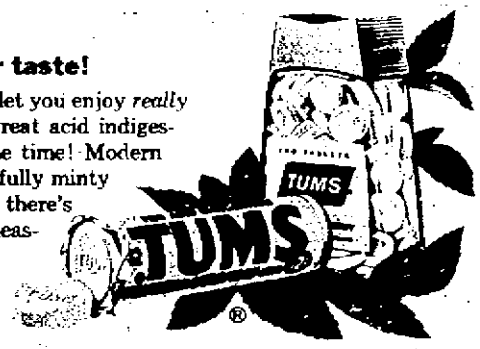

Charitable Mildred and girls visit Phoenix Gospel Mission, Skid Row. They bring presents to derelicts, and also try to cheer the men up.

A child is born in Bethlehem

by JACK ANDERSON

BETHLEHEM, JORDAN.

WHEREVER A CHILD IS BORN, whether among the uncounted millions of Africa and Asia, on the lonely icecaps of the Arctic, or in the teeming cities of Europe and America, it shares something of the miracle of the child who was born in Bethlehem nearly 20 centuries ago. Even behind the curtains of Communism, where Christmas is celebrated only in secret, a birth brings joy.

Such joy came this year to Tofick and Aida Canavati. Their story is moving not only for its simplicity but for its similarity to that other glorious story of old, spanning the ages with a baby's first cry. For the Canavatis live in Bethlehem, across an alley and around the corner from the manger where Jesus Himself first drew breath.

Bethlehem remains much as it did when Mary and Joseph first halted before the inn and, finding no room, sought shelter in the stable. It is a huddle of flat-roofed stone houses, clinging to the bleak Judean hillside. Its narrow streets still echo to the clattering heels of heavily laden donkeys. In daytime, the little town of 8,000 people, mostly Christian Arabs, shimmers in the heat. In the evening, it becomes a jewel sparkling amid the velvet browns and purples of the ancient hills.

It is peaceful in Bethlehem. For gentle people live here, and the memory of Jesus is fresh and breathing. When darkness falls, the stars shine brighter than anywhere on earth. There is a star, goes a belief, for every child in the world.

On such a night of peace and serenity, with the stars sparkling above like the spear points of a heavenly host, Aida Canavati was delivered of her first born, Saliba, a son. (They are shown on today's cover at the site of the manger where Jesus was born.) Aida did not lie in a manger but in the humble home of her husband's parents. After the babe had been wrapped in swaddling clothes, wise men came with gifts: bearded, black-robed fathers from the Church of the Nativity next door. At their head stood the Rev. Saliba Canavati, the child's grandfather and namesake.

Mother and newborn son, Aida Canavati and Saliba, stand in front of grotto leading to manger where Jesus was born.

As she heard her baby cry, Aida must have thought how like the story of Mary was her own story. She, too, had come to Bethlehem, almost in despair, and had found happiness. A beautiful girl with the sweet, sad, majestic face of a madonna, Aida had come to Bethlehem as an orphan and refugee from Lydda, where St. Peter once cured the palsied man, Aeneas. She had known hunger and hardship.

Tofick Canavati had come from a strange and wonderful land called Texas. There his father, the Rev. Canavati, a Christian Arab, had spent several years in the Greek Orthodox ministry. But in 1935, he was recalled to serve in his native Bethlehem, and young Tofick returned with the family.

The Church of the Nativity, one of the world's oldest, was built in the fourth century over a grotto which most authorities believe to be the true site of the manger where the Christ Child was born. It is administered by Catholic, Greek and Armenian priests.

The great pile of gray stone might be mistaken for a fortress, except for the three cupolas from which the priests ring their separate Bethlehem bells. But the grotto, hung with rich drapes, lighted by candles, surrounded by shrines, is shared by all three sects.

It was here that Tofick first saw Aida attending the Greek services. He was as shy as she when their eyes first met in the gloom of a nave, and there were many glances before he summoned the courage to speak to her. Thus began the courtship that was to end in their marriage.

It was also to the grotto that little Saliba, dressed in his finest white gown, was brought to be blessed and baptised where his Savior was born. In Aida's eyes, Tofick had never looked more handsome, her son more like a cherub. To Tofick, Aida was the Madonna.

And gathered around them, once again, were the wise men, led by the Reverend Canavati. He might have been a prophet of old, but for the proud grandfather's smile that divided his ferocious black beard.

You do not have to travel to Bethlehem to see such a doting group. You have but to remember that Bethlehem is anywhere a child is born, wherever human hearts rejoice over the miracle of birth. For did not the Master say: "Suffer the little children to come unto me . . ."? ■

an astronaut's faith

One of the most widely acclaimed magazine articles of 1962 was "Why I Know There Is a God," by Astronaut John Glenn. It first appeared in PARADE, April 1. Many readers have since asked that it be reprinted. Here again—for the Christmas season—is Glenn's stirring message:

"WHY DO YOU WASTE YOUR TIME going to church?"

I was asked this question at one time by a fellow pilot in a Marine fighter squadron on Guam. This fellow's name was Sam, and Sam made no bones about the fact that he had been in church exactly twice in his life. One time was when he was baptized, and the other time was when his wife insisted on being married in church.

Well, by various devious means, we got Sam into church for the third time on Guam. I'm sorry to say this doesn't have a happy ending as far as Sam's becoming a practicing Christian. But the question posed by Sam—why do we waste our time going to church?—might be one for all of us to back off and answer once in a while.

Another way of asking the same question is probably to say, "Why do we believe in God?" I think it follows that if we believe in God, we probably will wind up in church. Is there a power greater than we are? Is there really a God that we worship, or are we just wasting our time? Have you ever doubted there really is a God?

I certainly have many times, and I admit it freely. I think perhaps this is part of our growth pattern in Christian life—that we do doubt sometimes. We may doubt that there is a God, and we search our minds for signs that we really believe and that we should believe in Him. Through such questioning of ourselves, I think we may be better Christians.

When I was selected for the space program, one of the first things we were given was a booklet. This booklet is a space handbook put out by the Government Printing Office, and it contains a lot of information about our space program. But there was one paragraph that concerned the hugeness and enormity of the universe that impressed me very much.

There is only one technical fact that you have to know to be able to understand this particular paragraph. You have to understand what a light year is, a light year of distance.

Probably you remember that light travels at about 186,000 miles per second, about 7 times around the earth every second. Now if you start that light ray out straight and let it continue on out for a year's time, then that distance is a light year of distance.

Let me quote now on the subject of how big our universe is: "When we recall that our galaxy is some 100,000 light years in diameter, the sun being an insignificant star some 30,000 light years from the galactic center, circling in an orbit of its own every 200,000,000 years as the galaxy rotates, we realize that even trying to visualize the tremendous scale of the universe beyond the solar system is difficult, let alone trying to attempt physical exploration and communications. Nor is the interstellar space of the galaxy the end, for beyond are the millions of other galaxies, all apparently rushing from one another at fantastic speeds. The limits of the telescopically observable universe extend at least 2,000,000,000 light-years from us in all directions."

This shows us a little bit about how big our universe really is. It's tremendous. Still, we come back from something of this size to what we know of atomic structure, the smallest particles we know of. They, too, have a great similarity to our solar system and to the universe in that they have electrons rotating about a nucleus in regular patterns.

Now what's the point I am making? It's the orderliness of the whole universe about us from the smallest atomic structure to the greatest thing we can visualize: galaxies millions of light years across, all traveling in exact prescribed orbits in relation to one another.

Could this all have just happened? Was this an accident that someone tossed up a bunch of flotsam and jetsam, and it suddenly started making these orbits all of its own accord? I can't believe that's really true. I think this was a definite plan. This is one big thing in space that shows me there is a God, some Power that put all this into orbit and keeps it there. It wasn't just an accident.

Let's go on to compare some of our Project Mercury speeds to some of these things we've been talking about. We get to thinking sometimes that we're pretty good in this project and that we're really going out with some tremendous speeds. But when you think about the tremendous areas of space and speed, our efforts from earth here really are pretty puny. We will get up to about 18,000 miles an hour in orbit, which is about 5 miles per second. This is pretty fast by our earthly standards. We'll be at an altitude of a little over 100 miles. But thinking in terms of what's already going on in space, this is really a pretty puny effort.

We are used to dealing in scientific terms in all the measurements that are taken in science. But you can't reach out and say, "I would like to be a 110-volt Christian, and I am only a 5-volt Christian this morning. I'll have to go get pumped up some place."

YOU CAN'T MEASURE God in that way. We can't see, feel, smell or touch our religious power. It's an intangible something.

The same thing is true if we are getting ready to test a new airplane. It may have the most powerful engine in the world. It can have the finest aerodynamic design. It can go the fastest. But for the airplane to fulfill its mission, what do we have to do? We have to give it a direction. And how do we do this? We do this by reference to our compass in the airplane.

Now the force that runs the compass, you can't see, feel, touch, taste, smell. It defies all of our senses. But how do we know it's there? We know it's there because we see the results. We can look on an instrument here in the cockpit, and we can see that our compass is pointing a certain direction. And we have faith that the force making that compass work will continue to work. All of us who fly have staked our lives literally thousands of times on the fact that this compass will give us the proper reading and will guide us where we should go.

The same thing is true of the Christian principles in our lives. If we will let them guide us, our senses don't have to pick them up. We see the results of it in our lives and in the lives of other people. So we know it's there. There's no doubt about it. We see the results of it. We're going to believe in God and the teachings of Christ. But what was this man Christ like whom we're going to follow?

He's revealed to us in the Bible. As far as physical characteristics go, we don't know too much about Him. My impression of Christ physically is not the popular impression, I'm afraid. Somehow the idea of Christ the weakling, Christ the one on whom everybody heaped abuse, has never been an appealing one.

The emaciated Christ we see in the pictures is not my idea of Christ. I think He was a real man's man. I think He's someone we'd all be proud to follow. I read an article in which some place in the Bible said that Christ led His disciples from one spot to another spot in a day's time. They had measured this distance, and it turned out this was some 32 miles, I believe it was, in a day's time. How many of us could start out this morning and walk 32 miles by tomorrow morning, leading a group of men? I doubt if I could do it. I think Christ was a real man's man. He was someone really to follow.

THIS IS BORNE OUT to a degree, too, in one of my favorite passages. The Jewish Passover was approaching, and Jesus made the journey up to Jerusalem. In the temple, He discovered cattle and sheep dealers and pigeon sellers, as well as money changers sitting at their tables. So He made a rough whip of rope and drove the whole lot of them, sheep and cattle as well, out of the temple. He sent the coins of the money changers flying and turned their tables upside down.

The important thing is not the physical strength that Jesus used, in this example. The important thing is that Jesus had His beliefs, and He had the courage of His convictions to act upon them, to live by them. He believed, and He acted. These guidelines guided Christ in His everyday life when He was here on earth. The guidelines He used are available to us today, and they are just as timeless today as they were in Jesus' time.

These guidelines apply just as much to one business as they do to another. But the choice is ours. We are the ones who have to make the choice. God hasn't said, "You will do this." We have been placed here as free agents to decide whether we will or will not live by these guidelines. The choice is ours. ■

Shortly after working on a film in Alaska, I was on a New York-bound jet. I was seated next to a Texan. He started bragging and, among other things, told me he owned thirty acres. "Thirty acres," I exclaimed, "that doesn't sound like much for a Texan!" "Downtown Dallas," he retorted.

This man wouldn't stop talking about Texas. I then started telling him about Alaska, how high the mountains were, how large the salmon were, how a friend of mine had sold No-Cal blubber to the Eskimos, and topped it by needling him with the fact that Alaska was now our biggest state. "Oh, yeah? Alaska bigger than Texas?" he drawled. "Just wait till it melts!"

In my far-flung travels, I'm often asked just what is Hollywood. Actually, I'm still looking for the precise answer. But for now, I lean toward identifying it as a place where every actress thinks she's under 30 and every woman under 30 thinks she's an actress.

A Hollywood sob sister found the mother of a well-developed screen princess unusually modest. "My little girl," admitted the mother, "is like any typical American young lady who earns more than two million dollars a year."

Christmas parties in Hollywood are a real institution, and naturally I love them. There's always plenty of mistletoe and a chance to meet Hollywood's most wonderful stars. Last year I went to one party where a big redhead rushed up, grabbed me and planted a kiss. But who wants to be kissed by Red Skelton?

I know one kid in Bel Air who is getting a set of trains for Christmas —the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe.

Overheard at a Hollywood restaurant:

AT MGM IN HOLLYWOOD, as in other film studios these days, a few of the executives over lunch were discussing the feasibility of taking old movies and adapting them to new TV series. That's the vogue at the moment, i.e. Gene Kelly in Going My Way and Fess Parker in the video version of Mr. Smith Goes to Washington.

In the course of the discussion one fellow mentioned the possibility of making a Western-type TV series out of the old film, Viva Villa, in which the late Wallace Beery played the Mexican outlaw Pancho Villa.

A hungry actor at a nearby table overheard the discussion. When he had finished lunch, he raced to a phone booth and rang the executive who'd made the suggestion.

"Sir," he began, "if you make that TV series on Viva Villa, you've got to use me. I was in Mexico for years. Matter of fact, Viva and I were personal buddies."

Two beams in one: With this new movie light (above) you can throw either a flood or concentrated spot beam at the flick of a switch. Especially useful with zoom cameras, the 2-filament lamp matches light coverage to varying viewing angles of the lens—flood for close and medium distance shots, spot for long. Complete with lightweight, ventilated hood and a bracket that adjusts for lighting angles from direct to 90° bounce: $17.95. Flex Electric Products, Dept. PP, 39-08 24th St., Long Island City 1, N.Y.

Table-top golf: Here's fun for the whole family—a 9-hole miniature golf course in a 22¼" x 23½" plastic case you can set on floor or table. It incorporates bridges, tunnels, sand traps, other hazards—and a 5"-tall mechanical golfer. You dial angle from which golfer makes his shot to each hole—work a lever to control length, speed and touch of stroke. PP, Lafayette Hill, Pa.*

Step de-icer: Put a new mat outside on a house step and it helps solve a dangerous winter-problem—icing after snow or rainstorm. Stays springy in all weather, makes efficient mud mat, too. 8" x 24": $2.49; 10" x 24": $2.98; 16" x 24": $4.98; 20" x 24": $5.98. *Outdoor Step De-Icer, Dept. FIDGET MYSTERY. Why do people fidget so much? A group of British doctors are determined to find out. They are conducting a series of experiments at the Graylingwell Hospital, Chichester. Volunteers are being wired to electrical machines which record their every twitch. Thus far doctors have found that "anxious" people fidget to avoid nervous tension; in many cases the nose-pullers, skin-scratchers and finger-drummers suffer from frustration and marked mental conflict. The doctors have also proven that emotions can produce so much muscle tension that people find the pain unbearable. There is also evidence which leads to the belief that fidgeters are primarily thin people who burn up most of their excess energy by constant activity.

BOOTLEGGING. One of the biggest and most dangerous U.S. rackets today is the bootlegging of poisonous moonshine liquor. In the past decade production of illegal liquor has averaged 50,000,000 gallons a year. Approximately 20,000 stills are raided each year. Reason for moonshine is to avoid federal tax on liquor, which is $10.50 per gallon, one of the highest taxes in the nation on any commodity. Consumers who patronize bars are warned to suspect any bartender who either demands payment in advance for a drink or turns his back on the customer while filling his shot-glass.

HOSPITAL EMPLOYEES. Four out of every five hospital employees in the U.S. are women.

FILM DRUNKS. In Colorado drunken drivers are frequently filmed from the moment they arrive at the police station. This produces an irrefutable record of their behavior. As a result, Colorado drivers accused of intoxication have raised their guilty pleas in one year from 20% to 85%. Other states and countries are thinking of using the same procedure.

SUPERSONIC AIRLINER. An Anglo-French supersonic airliner flying at twice the speed of sound -- New York to London in three hours -- will shortly go into the planning stage. The joint project is an attempt by British and French aircraft manufacturers to capture the lucrative civil aviation market from the Americans. First supersonic airliner should be completed by 1969, cost $750,000,000. Undoubtedly U.S. manufacturers will join the production race.

ITALIAN WOMEN. Long considered homebodies, Italian women no longer are. Approximately 300,000 women in Italy are currently managing businesses, pointing up the massive intrusion of females into that country's postwar industrial complex. There are now more than 6,000,000 women gainfully employed in Italy, outnumbering men in three major industries -- textile, clothing and paper. Faster and faster, Europe is becoming Americanized.

Film actresses Claudia Cardinale...

Sophia Loren (shown with Tony Perkins) and...

Gina Lollobrigida are among Italy's working women.

COMEDIENNES. What show biz needs most: comediennes. Women who are genuinely funny, who can make the audiences laugh, can earn $5,000 a week and up. Jackie Gleason and Garry Moore are both desperate for comediennes. So, too, is Hollywood. Newcomer Carol Burnett, who starved a few years ago, is now good for $250,000 a year.

STARTLING REPORT. Dr. John Scott, medical officer of the London County Council, offers some amazing facts about the intelligence of British children relative to their physique and the size of their families. In the British Journal of Preventive and Social Medicine, Dr. Scott reveals that children of large families are smaller and less intelligent than children of small families. After studying 6,200 boys and girls age 10 and 11, the doctor claims that children from large families tend to mature later physically and mentally.

DEATH RAY. Government scientists the world over are searching for a death ray. Writing in the British scientific journal, Discovery, C. M. Cade, a crack English engineer, points out the possibility of beaming man-made thunderbolts or bolts of lightning on specified enemy targets. War weaponry becomes more frightening each day.

GLASS HOUSES. So many adults and children have crashed through the sliding glass doors in today's modern houses that revised standards for glass doors and picture windows have recently been announced by the Federal Housing Administration. Recommended are markings or insignia on the glass to distinguish the interior from the exterior of the house -- also the use of safety glass, wired, tempered or laminated so that it doesn't shatter. By April, 1963, builders will be required to comply with minimum-thickness specifications.

TEACH OR RESEARCH. One of the most perplexing problems in the education field is to determine the primary function of teachers. Should they teach or do research? Most college faculties are being pulled two ways. The glory and the promotions lie in research and specialization, but the institutionalization of research eventually threatens the survival of the liberal arts colleges since expert professors tend to regard teaching undergraduates as nuisance work.

'SHARKS? SHUCKS!'

PALM BEACH, Fla. (UPI)—President Kennedy swam and his wife water-skied Saturday in an ocean area which local boatmen say abounds with sharks.

Capt. Bob Owen, skipper of the fishing boat "Honeychile," said he was amazed that the Kennedys were swimming in that area.

"Any fishing - boat skipper will tell you that these waters are loaded with sharks," Owen said. "You could not get me to swim out there for $10,000."

RUSS EXPERT ON ORIENT TAKES OVER KEY POST

Zorin Out as Delegate to U.N.

MOSCOW, Sunday (AP) — Valerian A. Zorin, veteran hard-line Russian negotiator tripped up by the Kremlin's soft-line switch in the Cuban crisis, was removed today as Soviet delegate to the United Nations.

Nikolai T. Fedorenko, now ambassador to Japan, was named his successor, Tass reported.

In announcing the change, Tass mentioned no new assignment for Zorin and left unclear whether Zorin's rank as a deputy foreign minister was affected. When a senior Soviet official loses his rank, this normally is made clear.

(Newsmen's inquiries at Soviet U.N. delegation headquarters in New York brought only expressions of surprise. Callers were told no official word of the change had been received.

(Zorin was at the delegation's country house in Glen Cove on Long Island. U.N. acquaintances of Zorin suggested health might be a factor in the change. They said Zorin was tired and seemed somewhat unsure of himself at a news conference Saturday reviewing the U.N. General Assembly session.)

The Tass announcement said:

"The U.S.S.R. Council of Ministers has appointed Nikolai Fedorenko as Soviet permanent representative at the U.N. and the U.S.S.R.'s representative in the U.N. Security Council.

"U.S.S.R. Deputy Foreign Minister Valerian Zorin, who had held these posts, is relieved of his duties."

Fedorenko, 50, is a Far Eastern-affairs expert who also has served in the Russian Embassy in Peking.

The standing of the 60-year-old Zorin apparently suffered because of the Cuban crisis. In the United Nations, he flatly denied U.S. charges in October that Soviet missile bases were being built in Cuba, only to have Premier Khrushchev admit their existence shortly afterward.

U.S. Chief Delegate Adlai Stevenson exhibited aerial photographs of the missile sites and then—in one of the most dramatic confrontations in the history of the U.N. Security Council — demanded to know if Zorin denied the existence of the sites.

Zorin replied, "I am not in an American courtroom . . . In due course, sir, you will have your reply." To this, Stevenson retorted, "I am prepared to wait for my answer until Hell freezes over."

Zorin eventually denied existence of the sites.

• • • •

ZORIN ALSO was overshadowed in the negotiations that followed in the United Nations. The Soviet Union sent First Deputy Foreign Minister Vassily V. Kuznetsov, known among Westerners as more of a soft-line diplomat. First Deputy Premier Anastas I. Mikoyan also took part in the talks after a lengthy stay in Cuba.

Since then, Western diplomats here had speculated about the possibility of Zorin's dismissal.

Shuffles in the high ranks of the Soviet Foreign Office often have been followed by a change of policy.

Zorin, regarded by Western diplomats as a hard-line negotiator, in particular has expressed the Kremlin's rigid stand against international inspection as a part of disarmament.

If the change heralds any new Soviet approach, it may become known after the disarmament talks reopen Jan. 15 in Geneva.

• • • •

EAST European Communist sources have hinted recently that new Soviet proposals would be offered at Geneva about Feb. 1. They did not disclose what these might contain.

Zorin has ranked with Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko at the front of Soviet diplomacy since the death of Andrei Vyshinsky and the downfall of Vya-

Freed Cuban Captives to Land Today

First Plane Due in Florida This Morning at 8:30

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—U.S. official sources said Saturday night the first planeload of Cuba invasion prisoners would be flown to Florida about 8:30 a.m. (EST) today.

The source, at Homestead Air Force Base where the captives are to be landed, said a Pan American World Airways plane would depart at 6 a.m. from Miami International Airport for Havana.

A second flight will leave Miami at 6:30 a.m., the spokesman said.

Meanwhile other Pan Am planes will fly to Havana carrying cargo which will supplement the drugs and food demanded by Fidel Castro in modern history's biggest ransom deal for 1,113 men captured in the April 17, 1961, invasion of the Bay of Pigs in southwest Cuba.

• • • •

WORKERS toiled Saturday night, and a ransom-laden freighter sailed from Port Everglades, Fla., for Havana.

The activities, implementing a $53-million ransom demand by Castro, all had one objective—to free the men for Christmas reunion with their kinfolk.

The work had the fervent blessing of prisoners' relatives fighting to remain calm over impending reunion. It drew vigorous op-

NIGHTMARE ON FREEWAY

200 Autos Crash, 1 Dead, 100 Hurt

Two hundred cars piled up on the Santa Ana Freeway Saturday in a massive traffic nightmare that killed one person and injured more than 100 others.

The California Highway Patrol report on the cause of the fantastic wreck was terse and to the point: "Too much fog, driving too fast."

Crushed to death when the car in which she was riding was struck by a produce truck was Sister Mary Refuge, 28-year-old Roman Catholic nun, principal of the School of Our Lady in Santa Ana. The driver of the car, Sister Angelina Chavez, 24, a fourth-grade teacher at the school, was reported in "only fair" condition at Santa Ana Community Hospital, where 24 of the others injured were hospitalized Saturday.

• • • •

FIFTEEN other persons were released after treatment at the hospital and nine others were treated at El Toro Marine Air Station dispensary. Officers said more than 50 other injured persons went to their own physicians.

The pileup was the result of three separate accidents in a two-mile stretch of freeway between Myford and Jeffrey Roads near the El Toro Air Station in Orange County.

At least 60 cars were involved in the first accident in which the nun was killed. Officers said the nuns' vehicle swerved to avoid hitting a car in the fog and was struck by the truck. Sister Mary Refuge was crushed to death when the truck ran over the car.

• • • •

THE ACCIDENT precipitated a chain of collisions on the freeway as motorists, unable to see in the thick fog, plowed into the wreckage in front of them in the southbound lanes. Other minor mishaps occurred when northbound lane motorists slowed to see the wreckage and were struck from behind by other cars.

Police called 27 towtrucks and 10 ambulances to the scene. The trucks hauled 57 disabled cars off the freeway to clear lanes for traffic, which was backed up for more than 12 miles.

Visibility at the time of the pileup was reported to be 50 feet or less.

• • • •

THE SCENE was described by one of the injured motorists, Marine Maj. V. J. Smith of El Toro:

"I was driving along the freeway in perfectly clear weather and the visibility was fine. Suddenly, I hit the thick fog. Just as suddenly, I saw the pileup of cars in front of me. I couldn't stop in time to avoid plowing into it."

The wreckage was not cleared away for more than three hours, although officers and towtruck crews worked at top speed.

CHP Sgt. Jim Taylor called the wreck "the worst series of accidents I've ever seen in 25 years with the Highway Patrol."

• • • •

POLICE SAID the nuns were on their way to the University of San Diego to take courses during their Christmas vacation.

The two other accidents on the freeway, which began similar chain-reaction pileups, were not so serious, officers said, and there were no fatalities.

The fog caused another crash marathon near Oceanside, where 19 persons were injured, 11 seriously, in a 16-car pileup on U.S. 101. Police said a trailer truck jackknifed across the highway to avoid a slow-moving car. The truck was rammed by north and southbound traffic and other cars smashed into the wreckage.

The fog blanket settled over the Long Beach area and most other coastal sections of the state for the third day late Saturday afternoon, and was expected to slow holiday traffic to a crawl until this morning.

For additional traffic-crash news, See Page B-3.

Arts Buildings Urged for Fair

By GEORGE ERES

Reconstruction and remodeling of the Long Beach Municipal Auditorium to provide a concert hall seating about 2,700 is proposed in a report on suggested performing arts facilities for the World's Fair in 1967-68.

The proposal for use of a remodeled auditorium is made in Economics Research Associates' study of "Facilities for the Performing Arts" at the Fair and includes suggestions for construction of two permanent facilities:

An amphitheater on the fairgrounds, seating about 8,000 and designed to accommodate both stage and water spectacles;

A playhouse to seat about 900.

The proposal also includes suggested use of the new Arena for some events.

ESTIMATED cost of construction and remodeling of the facilities is put between $2,320,000 and $3,740,000 although the report notes that "in the absence of design data . . . it is impractical to attempt precise construction cost estimates."

The proposal for use of a remodeled Municipal Auditorium and the Arena, involves extension of the Fair site from Pier J to the shoreline area between Magnolia Avenue and the auditorium. This area will be connected with the Magnolia Avenue bridge which the Harbor Department will construct. Contracts for bridge plans and specifications have been let and the timetable calls for completion of the bridge between West Beach and Pier A by 1965.

Under this proposal, lease of the area for parking and use of existing buildings, Fair Corporation officials would build the proposed new permanent structures and pay for remodeling of the Auditorium.

• • • •

THE Auditorium, in its present form, states the ERA report, "is not considered suitable for use by the Fair for performing arts

The . . . Drivers . . . Were . . . Rushing . . .

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The poem below is published, not for its shock value, but as a public service in the hope that drivers who read it will think twice before mixing alcoholic spirits with the spirit of Christmas.)

By BOB DAVIS

'Twas the night before Christmas, and down on the freeway
The traffic was stirring, right into a melee;
Gas pedals were pushed almost down to the floor
And the drivers were rushing to get home before four.
At home their sweet children prepared for their beds
And visions of happy things danced in their heads;
Poor mama was fretting and watching the clock
Hoping daddy would get home to help fill each sock.
When all of a sudden, weaving over the road
One driver came rushing, blind drunk, we are told;
Across the divider he came like a bullet
His eyes were half shut, for him death in a minute.
Into the path of daddy's car he roared
Slumped over the wheel, the pedal still floored;
With a screaming of brakes, and the grinding of metal
The two cars collided and ripped like a petal.
Daddy lay dying alongside his car,
His ears heard the officer, wearing a star;
"Stick with it, fellow, help's on the way,
"A doctor is coming, and others will pray."
He felt himself lifted by two white attendants
Who left behind packages for his three dependents;
Then suddenly the scene turned rosy and clear
And daddy knew he had no more to fear.
As he turned to look at the people below
He saw mama and kiddies; the music played slow.
Peter and Mary both held mama tight
And she shed a tear, mama, sweet wife.
Except for a drunk who thought he could drive
They would have had Christmas with daddy alive.

39 Survive Brazilian Air Crash

BRASILIA, Brazil, Sunday (AP)—A Brazilian airliner with 40 persons reported aboard went down with its engines ablaze Saturday night near Brasilia International Airport only minutes before its scheduled landing at this inland capital.

Reports indicated the pilot was the only person killed, giving his life in guiding the plane to an emergency landing from which 35 passengers and four other crewmen escaped alive.

The accident came near the end of a two-hour flight originating in Rio de Janeiro.

Press reports said the pilot in his last contact with the Brasilia Airport Tower reported fire in the engine of the propeller-driven Convair airliner. The captain said he was trying to close off the gasoline tanks and would make a forced landing with the landing gear retracted.

A surviving passenger reported the plane ploughed into a field and skidded 300 yards. Both wings were snapped off.

Test Fails to Revive Skybolt

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Defense Department said Saturday that the last-minute successful test of the Skybolt missile will not alter President Kennedy's decision to jettison the controversial nuclear weapon.

The department also indicated no more Skybolt tests will be conducted.

Deputy Defense Secretary Roswell Gilpatric, acting in the absence of Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara, issued a statement several hours after a Skybolt had sped 900 miles to hit its target on the Cape Canaveral Atlantic range. It was the first succesful test of the rocket.

• • • •

"TODAY'S single test did not conclusively demonstrate the capacity of the missile to achieve the target accuracy for which the Skybolt system was designed," Gilpatric said bluntly.

Gilpatric said the test, the only sucessful one in six firings, had been sched-

92 Useful Years

Those of us who have had the privilege of knowing Bill Prisk for most of, or all, of his 42 years in Long Beach are fortunate. This writer is one of those so fortunate. For 14 of those years we were vigorous competitors. It was during those years of competition we came to truly appreciate the toughness of his character and his true dedication to the high principles for which he stood. We can recall the endless civic programs he supported with his newspaper—but much more important his own personal active participation.

We remember the time when his doctor warned him that he must give up some of his strenuous tension-producing activities. Mr. Prisk replied that he could do as much as anyone else and went on for the next 40 years to prove he was right. Even after his retirement from active newspaper work at the age of 82 his activities continued. Because of the great respect for him in the community he was called upon annually to head up some civic drive. He always accepted and added prestige to all the efforts that went into those programs.

In looking through our files we found some notes on a talk we gave at the Jewish Veteran "Man of the Year" award to Mr. Prisk in 1953. Because we feel our words spoken then are even more appropriate today we quote some of them as follows:

"When I was asked to speak at this presentation I was thrilled because no man is more deserving of the honor than is he. I never grow tired of seeing honors heaped upon him because he represents something that symbolizes Americanism at its best.

"He has for 60 years served the public in his capacity of newspaper publisher and good citizen. It has been 60 years of the most rapid growth of a state ever known in history—with tremendous changes in our economic and political philosophy. If we could take all our young people back through the experiences and years of Mr. Prisk's life, we would give them a better understanding of what democracy with freedom of enterprise and freedom of the individual means."

What we thought—and said—then 10 years ago is even more true today. The examples given by his dedicated life should be an inspiration to each of us. One example was shown us when we called on him last election day. For months he had been confined to his home. We were sure he had had an absentee ballot. But we found that he and his lovely wife, also 92 years old, had been about the first to go to the polling place to cast their ballot that morning. It was but one more indication of how he discharged his responsibility as a fine citizen.

We feel a great loss—but it would have been a tough life for Bill Prisk to have been confined to inactivity. Our great concern is for his companion and wife of 71 years. No man has ever given so much of himself and of his influence for good in the city of Long Beach. None so much deserved the title "Mr. Long Beach." What greater honor—or satisfaction—can come to a man than that he was so appreciated and honored while he was here to accept it. His was truly a useful 92 years.—L.A.C.

productions . . . The acoustical properties of the halls are not the best, and the facility is deficient in rehearsal area and dressing rooms . . . The stage is not provided with modern scenery-handling equipment . . ."

Economics Research Associates was retained by the Fair Corporation to provide techno-economic services for planning the Fair.

The report was prepared to determine existing facilities and what would be needed for the World's Fair.

* * * *

"A REVIEW of existing and planned facilities in the Long Beach area," states the report, "indicates that only the Municipal Auditorium and Arena appear feasible for housing some of the Fair's performing arts productions."

The report states that attendance at pay and free performing arts attractions should be about 22 per cent of the total Fair attendance, which has been estimated as 6,666,000 the first season.

The ERA survey of local support for the Performing Arts noted that those activities are "well supported and attended in Long Beach. . . . The widespread community interest in music was demonstrated during the summer of 1962 when the season's first Starlight Serenade drew an estimated crowd of over 10,000 to Bixby Park. The unusual extent of Long Beach city appropriations for music is an additional evidence of interest and support.

* * * *

"COMMUNITY support exists for three regularly performing dramatic groups. The oldest of these, the Long Beach Community Players, started in 1929 and have prospered to such a degree that they now own their own 200-seat theater. Another group, the Lakewood Players, have maintained regular, continuing performances in the Off-Broadway Theater for more than five years; and the Magnolia Theater, honored for its professional quality by the Ford Foundation, is entering its 10th year of continuing operation. These three dramatic groups are each privately operated as non-profit corporations and do not receive support from public funds."

Regionally, too, says the report "there can be illtle question of a massive support" for the performing arts.

* * * *

THE REPORT notes that the facilities requirements vary greatly with the nature of the basic program planned for the performing arts at the Fair. The ERA proposals are based on the assumption that the Fair Corporation will present a "basic creative program, embellished by some big-name performers and top spectatulars."

Polaris Plan Hit by Soviet

MOSCOW (AP)—The Soviet government organ Izvestia Saturday called President Kennedy's offer of Polaris missiles to England and France a pretext for turning the North Atlantic Treaty Alliance into the fourth atomic power.

The newspaper also disputed the President's "pessimistic forecast" Monday of continued Soviet-American tensions despite understandings reached in the Cuban crisis.

* * * *

THE ARTICLE by Izvestia's diplomatic observer, Nikolai Polyanov, criticized the Polaris-missile agreement reached by Kennedy and British Prime Minister Macmillan in their Bahama meeting this week.

"It turns out that they want to drag atomic weapons into NATO in the form of Polaris rockets," he wrote. "Thus, the result is that Washington's words and deeds again are at variance."

Polyanov said that if the United States were to put an end to attempts to turn the North Atlantic alliance into an atomic force, "the political atmosphere in Europe would really improve."

Hhe said this would clear the way for settlement of the Berlin crisis and other issues. But news of the Polaris deal "forces one to be on guard," he added.

* * * *

POLYANOV also discussed President Kennedy's TV chat, in which he said Soviet-American understanding still is a long way off. He quoted the President as warning Americans they probably would not be able to lay down their cold-war burdens in this century and added that remarks about the necessity of maintaining American defenses against communism "smell of" the philosophy of the late Secretary of State John Foster Dulles.

Earlier, Tass said the Kennedy-Macmillan talks at Nassau resulted in a heavy blow to Britain's prestige.

L.B. Woman One of 34 Hurt in Bus

LOVELOCK, Nev. (AP) — A Greyhound bus rammed into a stalled car on foggy U. S. Highway 40 Saturday, rolled over and careened into a concrete wall. Thirty-four persons were taken to hospitals.

Among those injured was Alta Woodworth, 76, of 2223 Linden Ave., Long Beach. She was taken to Pershing Hospital in Lovelock.

Pershing County sheriff's officers said the accident occurred on a slick section of the highway about 14 miles east of here in early morning darkness.

Officers said the bus apparently struck the car, then overturned. It began a second roll, but hit a concrete abutment and settled back on its wheels in a divider strip.

* * * *

GREYHOUND officials in Salt Lake City, Utah, said the bus, en route from Salt Lake City to San Francisco, had picked up a group of persons from Idaho at Wells, Nev. They had reached Wells via a connecting line, the Twin Falls-Wells stage line.

Officers said the bus hit a car driven by Larry Stachler, 21, of Lindsay, Calif. His injuries were described as minor.

Baddies Jailed

MEXICO CITY (UPI)—Police said Saturday that more than 2,000 known criminals, including pickpockets and petty thieves, have been jailed until after New Year's Day to protect Christmas shoppers and vacationers.

W. F. Prisk Rites to Be Wednesday

Hosking Prisk, were natives of England.

When he was 10 years old, he went to work as a newspaperboy for the Grass Valley, Tidings. Soon afterward, while still attending school, he served as a printer's apprentice.

Subsequently, while working for the same newspaper, he became a reporter and performed general duties.

Prisk graduated from Grass Valley High School when he was 17 years old and, within about a year, became publisher of his first newspaper in partnership with Rufus Shoemaker, who had served as editor of the Tidings. Each partner invested $250 and Mr. Prisk had to borrow his share from a friend.

* * * *

THE NEW PAPER, the Evening Telegraph, made its first appearance in Grass Valley on Feb. 23, 1859. Mr. Prisk was typesetter, reporter and business manager.

After selling his interest in the paper about two years later, Mr. Prisk went to San Francisco and worked as a market reporter. He next acquired a half interest in the Fresno Review, subsequently disposing of his share and accepting notes in payment for the undercapitalized publication.

He was next employed as a reporter for the Sacramento Union and covered the State Assembly.

* * * *

ON JUNE 13, 1893, he became editor and publisher of the Grass Valley Union, after borrowing most of the money for the purchase. Two years earlier, he had wed Alice Othet, daughter of a pioneer Nevada County family.

Under Mr. Prisk's guidance, the publication became the first "country" newspaper in the state to receive Associated Press wire service. It gave the paper a great lead in competition with four other dailies.

In 1897, Mr. Prisk was elected to the State Senate and, at the age of 27, was the youngest member of the legislature. He declined to stand for re-election.

* * * *

IN 1906, feeling that the southern part of the state had a great future, Mr. Prisk and his younger brother, Charles, purchased the Pasadena Star. In 1916, it merged with the News to become the Star-News.

The Long Beach Press, a daily with fewer than 3,000 subscribers, was purchased by Mr. Prisk in December 1910. He and his wife moved to Long Beach to take up permanent residence here.

The late William H. Hosking, associated with Mr. Prisk in Grass Valley, joined the Long Beach enterprise and, in 1924, the Press merged with the Daily Telegram to become the Long Beach Press-Telegram.

* * * *

MR. PRISK served as editor-publisher of The Press and The Press-Telegram for 42 years until the Ridder family purchased the newspaper in 1952, subsequently also acquiring the Pasadena newspaper.

At the time of the sale, The Press-Telegram's circulation had climbed to 100,000 from the 3,000 The Press had when Mr. Prisk acquired it.

Although he retired from the newspaper business, Mr. Prisk continued to be an active civic leader and headed several community drives. A Long Beach elementary school was named after him.

* * * *

ON MARCH 21, 1960, the State Legislature unanimously passed a resolution commending Mr. Prisk, "one of California's most distinguished and best-loved citizens."

In addition to citing his service in the newspaper field, the resolution noted his leadership in such community projects as the Boy Scouts, Red Cross and Community Chest.

Mr. Prisk was a member of Rotary Club, Native Sons of the Golden West, Elks Club, Masonic Blue Lodge, All Year Club of Southern California and the Newspaper Publishers Association.

Test Fails to Revive Skybolt

uled prior to the Nassau agreement reached Friday by Kennedy and Prime Minister Macmillan to substitute Polaris missiles for the Skybolt as a British nuclear weapon.

Gilpatrick commented:

"This flight test was one of an extensive series planned for the research phase of the project. It is always expected that some tests of this sort should succeed and that others will fail. Many additional tests had been planned and would be required during the research phase to prove out and perfect this complex weapons system."

* * * *

ALTHOUGH Gilpatric did not explicitly declare that no more tests would be conducted, he significantly used the phrases "had been planned" and "would be required" to indicate that future experiments were no longer contemplated.

"Program decisions cannot be based simply upon the success or failure of early tests," the defense official said.

He added: "doubts as to the prospects of the success of the Skybolt system in its entirety and its reliability when operational were among the factors responsible for the recommendation of the secretary of defense against further funding of the program. The results of today's tests have not caused any change in that program."

* * * *

GILPATRIC said that higher defense spending in the new budget to be sent Congress by Kennedy next month would more than compensate for cancellation of Skybolt.

Season's Fleeting

THIS STERN BANNER, flying over a struggling sea of humanity in London's famed Petticoat Lane, provides an almost surrealist commentary on the human condition. But the throng of Christmas shoppers, patronizing the pushcart merchants, were too busy worrying about the end of the line to be overly preoccupied with grim warnings of the coming end of their days.

Cuban Captives Expected Today

position from one man who was arrested after trying to throw a Cuba-bound medicine package into Port Everglades harbor.

At Port Everglades, north of Miami, the 460-ton freighter African Pilot sailed at 9:41 p.m. (EST), for Havana with $11 million in medicine and food as a first installment on $53 million in goods sorely needed in Cuba.

• • • •

AT HOMESTEAD Air Force Base, south of Miami, facilities were readied to examine, feed, clothe and process the men.

In Havana, the prisoners were reported "mad with joy" behind walls of prisons where Prime Minister Castro has kept them penned.

Members of the Prisoners' Families Committee in Havana said the captives were expected to be released Monday—Christmas Eve.

No moves toward celebration in advance were apparent among the captives' 20,000 relatives living in Miami's Cuban exile colony of more than 100,000. Negotiations stalled twice before.

"After all this," said one exile, "we cannot be sure of anything." Others were tensely hopeful that this time, their boys really would come home.

Dr. Jose Miro Cardoona, head of the Cuban revolutionary council who has a son among the captives, said in Miami "thank God for the miracle he has done."

Former Cuban Prime Minister Antonio de Varona, also father of a captive, said, "Now I'll be able to embrace my son, my brother and many friends."

• • • •

SOME DELAY in the Port Everglades departure of the SS African Pilot was attributed to unfamiliarity of the crew with the vessel. The crew was mustered hastily in Baltimore just before the African Pilot was sent to Florida, by the Committee of American Steamship Lines.

Castro, who signed the ransom agreement with Prisoners' Families Committee negotiator James B. Donovan, went to Jose Marti Airport outside Havana to see off three Cuban officials who flew to Miami to inspect the ransom goods.

Russ Tell of U.S. Flights

MOSCOW (UPI)—The Soviet Union accused the United States Saturday of sending "dozens" of nuclear-armed bombers on "continuous flights toward the Soviet Union" during the Cuban crisis.

The accusation came in the government newspaper Izvestia from Sergei Vershinin, Soviet air force, commander in chief.

"In the latest events around Cuba all the (U.S.) strategic means of air attack were put into readiness while dozens of U.S. planes with nuclear weapons on board made continuous flights towards the Soviet Union," he wrote.

• • • •

VERSHININ went on to say, "In a future war the decisive role will belong to rocket-nuclear weapons."

But all services will be necessarily involved in any successful war campaign, he said.

He also said the basis of the Soviet air strike force was the missile-carrying plane whose armaments could hit moving as well as static targets on land and sea.

He said Soviet aircraft and missiles will soon operate in the stratosphere, above the atmosphere where planes now fly.

3.5 MILLION SQUARE MILES COMBED

Navy Hunt for Red Subs Realistic Test; 6 Spotted

U. S. NAVAL BASE, Guantanamo Bay, Cuba (AP)—The Cuban-crisis antisubmarine search by the U. S. Navy covered a 3.5-million-square-mile area and located about six Soviet submarines, Adm. George W. Anderson, Chief of Naval Operations, says.

Resulting directly from the biggest search since World War II and Korea were four deaths, occurring in two helicopter crashes from the antisubmarine carrier Essex. There were other casualties, however, not related to the antisubmarine warfare (ASW) operation, including the crash of an Air Force C135 transport plane at Guantanamo while bringing in supplies.

The Russian subs were observed visually and photographed when they surfaced to recharge batteries. Anderson said they were standard, diesel-powered submarines, not atomic-powered.

• • • •

THE NEAREST such observation was about 200 miles off Cuba, Anderson said in an interview. To a question, he said also he knew of no Russian submarine being found close to U. S. shores. The ASW operation extended from the U. S. coast eastward as far as the Azores and Canaries and southward off the northeastern coast of South America.

Anderson said the sightings came in a period of about three weeks midway of the Cuban crisis. He indicated that some of the vessels were sighted more than once, leading to earlier reports that substantially more than six had been discovered.

Anderson says "there is no doubt whatever that had there been hostile action we could have handled the situation without difficulty."

But the surface contacts between U. S. and Russian men-of-war brought only formal, indeed almost polite, interchange.

"When a submarine surfaced, we extended normal courtesy, asking him 'Are you in need of assistance?'" Anderson said.

The admiral added, with a grin, that the U. S. Navy appreciates the assistance the Russian submarines gave in providing realistic ASW training.

Ships and aircraft carried the newest equipment for submarine detection, location and classification. Even better equipment is on the way. Anderson commented that some sonar sets, still in the development stage, promise to have ten times the range of World War II sonar. Effective range for World War II sonar generally was about 2,000 yards.

• • • •

ANDERSON believes that as nuclear strategic power grows on each side, Russia at some future time might find reason to attempt her own naval blackade somewhere in the world, using submarines to enforce it. He doesn't attempt to predict exactly where, mentioning only as possibilities such regions as Indonesia, the Baltic area, the Egyptian area.

He took cognizance, in this connection, of Russian gifts of submarines to some Soviet-bloc and currently neutral countries. Anderson estimated that Egypt has about 10, Red China about 25 and that Indonesia has some. All are nonnuclear.

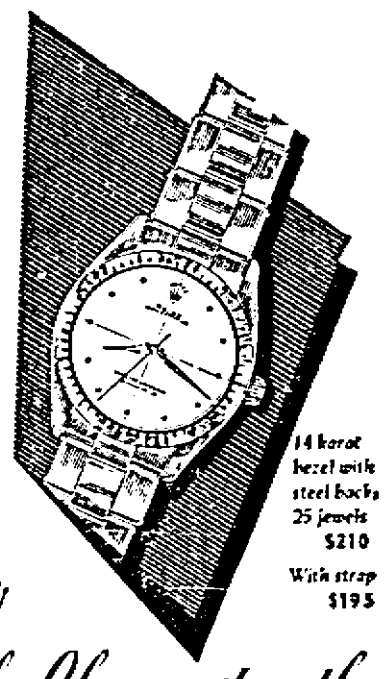

Russia, according to the authoritative publication, Jane's Fighting Ships, now has about 20 atomic-powered submarines. Of these about a dozen are believed to be operating with the fleet.

Of the Russian atomic-propulsion program, Anderson said:

"We believe they are considerably behind us and that they have had troubles."

WORLD NEWS BRIEFS

Jury Deadlocks in Hoffa Trial

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—The jury trying James R. Hoffa on conspiracy charges reported Saturday night—for the third time—it was deadlocked but agreed to return to deliberate the Teamster president's case today.

Foreman Walter Harper told Federal Judge William E. Miller when the jury came in after more than 14 hours of deliberation at 9:35 p.m. CST that the jurors felt they had done everything they could to reach agreement.

For the past nine weeks, the president of the nation's largest single union has been on trial, charged with violating the Taft-Hartley Act by taking money from a company while representing its employes. The government claims that a Michigan transport firm gave Hoffa concealed payoffs as insurance for labor peace.

Ex-Teacher Held in Abduction

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A whisky-drinking former school teacher, accused of abducting two teen-aged girls at gunpoint Friday night, was easily captured 10 hours later after he drove by the scene of the crime.

KERRY

The girls, freed minutes earlier, were not injured but said they had been molested, police reported.

Officers identified the man as Gale Homer Anderson, 30, Salt Lake City, a former school teacher in Idaho and Utah. He lived only three blocks from the home of one of the girls.

The girls, both 13 years old, were Karen Ann Garner and Kerry Warner. They appeared upset and excited, but didn't display a great deal of distress following their ordeal.

Nike Zeus Hits ICBM Target

WASHINGTON (AP)—A Nike Zeus antimissile missile successfully intercepted the first ICBM target using decoys in a Pacific test Saturday, the Army announced.

A salvo of two Zeus missiles was fired against the target and its decoys, but one of the Zeus missiles developed trouble after launching and was destroyed, the announcement said.

The Army announcement did not say how many decoys were in the Atlas missile which was lofted from Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif. It was sent about 5,000 miles to the area of Kwajelein Island, where the Zeus weapons were launched. Nor did it say how far away or how high that target was when the intercept occurred.

Shipowners Reject Dockers' Plan

NEW YORK (AP)—Shipowners rejected Saturday night a new union proposal in a dispute that threatens to tie up Atlantic and Gulf Coast ports today. They called the union offer "injurious" and an "irresponsible insult to the industry."

Alexander P. Chopin, chairman of the New York Shipping Association, declared, "We are further on the road to a strike than ever before."

The International Longshoremen's Association is threatening to call its members off docks from Searsport, Maine, to Brownsville, Tex., unless agreement on a new contract is reached by 5 p.m. today.

U.S. Congo Mission Upsets Thant

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—Diplomatic sources said Saturday that U.N. Secretary-General U Thant was "quite upset and very unhappy" when he learned that the United States was sending a military mission to the Congo.

They said the United States informed Thant privately last Sunday, without advance consultation, that it would send the mission. The U.S. government disclosed the plan publicly two days later in the Bahamas, where President Kennedy and Prime Minister Macmillan were meeting.

Friendless Convict Gains Freedom

McALESTER, Okla. (AP)—Kansas City Fat, who never had a visitor and never got a letter in his 28 years in the Oklahoma State Penitentiary, was a free man Saturday.

FAT

As the 58-year-old Negro walked from the prison, he bore a broad grin and clutched 113 letters sent him by well-wishers since The Tulsa Tribune and the Associated Press carried his story Thursday.

Kansas City Fat—whose real name is George O. Jones—was serving a life term for a 1934 armed robbery that netted him only 15 cents.

"It's just not true," the man said unbelievingly as he waited for the guard to turn the key.

"When I told Kansas City Fat he was going to go free he just looked at me, then he sort of gulped, then he started holding back the tears," Warden Robert Raines said.

Blizzard Kills Mother, Two Children

HELENA, Mont. (AP)—The bodies of a woman and her two children were found in a snowbound car Saturday in the wake of Friday's arctic blizzard in Montana.

The bodies of Mrs. Mary Ann Coleman, about 30, her children Cal, 6, and Connie, 9, were found in their car about a mile from their farmhouse near the Canadian border town of Sunburst.

A Reporter's Memories

A LIFETIME OF CHRISTMASES IS NOT ENOUGH

By GEORGE FLOWERS

In each lifetime there are many Christmases . . . the happy . . . the sad . . . the rich . . . the poor . . .

* * * *

ONE YEAR when the boy was young there were many candles on the tree.

Each twisted bit of wax teetered on a clamp pinned to a dying branch of a great fir tree in the living room. To light the candles, mother used a long taper, and the process took half an hour. Fragments of the cold Canadian breeze wormed through the great windows of the house on the hill.

The candle flames twinkled and danced in this wind.

Memories of a five-year-old's Christmas seem confined to recollections of cutting and pasting drafting paper into joined bracelets, until they became great strings to loop over the branches.

And of popcorn, sewn together into strings.

But mostly of creeping down the stairs after proper bedtime, to peer through the railings at the dancing, flickering lights of Christmas.

* * * *

FOR THE Dutch, Christmas was always a time of warmth and family. When they colonized, they brought that spirit with them. But all of their jolly kinship had been driven from Hollandia, in far-off New Guinea, in 1944, by the hatred of man for himself.

The line of mess-kitted men wound slowly around a clapboard messhall. If this were, indeed, Christmas, there was no sign of it in the hot and humid air. Nor was there a sign of it upon the men, whose feet itched in the sweat, whose begrimed t-shirts were soiled forever in the indifference of their owners (and launderers.)

Like a slothful python uncoiling itself for an annual meal, the line finally disappeared into the hall, without smile or song.

It was a Christmas without home, without family. But most of all it was a Christmas without Christ.

* * * *

MINNEAPOLIS, in the late 1920s, was a city as forlorn in its joblessness as any other in the nation. The boy, now in the first part of his teens, had learned that a quarter for the gas meter could create a family crisis . . . that one did not look at bright red apples in a bin and ask for them.

One looked in silence, quickly, then looked away lest a parent detect longing . . . too often confused those days with avarice or greed.

One remembers kicking along a sidewalk, buttoned and galoshed against the wind and snow, and kicking into a dollar bill, pinned to the concrete by a thin layer of ice.

In the 1920s a dollar bill was much bigger than it is today, but this was the biggest one of all.

* * * *

ALONG the cold shoreline of eastern Wisconsin nestles the city of Two Rivers, and on its shoreline, here and there, rise fine homes with breath-taking command of an angry great lake in an angry season.

Men build houses with care there, no chinks to accept the cold. Great fireplaces whose very sight warms a home. Huge basements to accommodate great heating plants. Vast living rooms where a tree could be 12 feet tall, and was in 1932.

Rooms full of family and friends, arms about each other in the fine glow of a great and prosperous Christmas time. And now, long strings of electric lights to decorate the massive tree.

Outside, the storm-whipped waves pounded the beach. Huge icicles hung from the eaves. Green wreaths in great red bows for each door and each window. A telephone constantly jingling with messages from people who remembered.

AND A Christmas in St. Paul, where a family was struggling back to economic stability. A father struggling with a new occupation, a sister dropping from school to become a telephone operator and a son with two newspaper routes.

In the living room on Christmas morning, the greatest present of a lifetime . . . a bicycle!

* * * *

ONE REMEMBERS a Christmas season at the police station in Long Beach, and a reporter whiling away a dull night with small talk in the detective bureau. One remembers a detective entering and beckoning.

"I think you might be interested in this," he said, handing over a memorandum.

Charles Beatty, the best-known Santa Claus of Long Beach in a generation, was alone, broke and dying in a modest downtown hotel room. One remembers the story.

Most of all, though, one remembers the next morning, when hundreds of people crowded American Avenue to see the Santa Clause they had known as a child. Grown women were in tears. The children clutching them carried little gifts.

A whole city played Santa Claus to Charles Beatty. He was taken to a hospital, operated upon and given five more years of life.

Santa Claus could not die on Christmas Eve!

* * * *

A lifetime of Christmases is hardly enough.

Expert on China Succeeds Zorin

NIKOLAI T. FEODORENKO
New Delegate to U. N.

VALERIAN A. ZORIN
Kremlin Tripped Him

cheslav M. Molotov, both foreign ministers under Stalin. Zorin is a specialist in European affairs, was ambassador to Czechoslovakia in 1945-48 and engineered the Communist coup there in February, 1948.

Zorin then spent seven years in the Soviet Foreign Office as a deputy foreign minister before going to West Germany as ambassador. In 1956 he resumed the status of deputy foreign minister.

In 1960 he became permanent Soviet representative on the U.N. Security Council. Occasionally he represented the Soviet Union at the U.N. Disarmament Commission.

* * * *

FEDORENKO has been in the Soviet diplomatic service since 1939. He served as counsellor in the Soviet Embassy in Communist China in 1950.

A Chinese linguist, he was head of the Foreign Ministry Far Eastern department 1952-55. In 1955-56 he served as a deputy foreign minister and was head of the Academy of Sciences' Institute of Chinese Studies until his assignment to Japan in 1958.

Fedorenko was a member of the Soviet negotiating team during the first Soviet-Japanese negotiations in 1956 on fishing in Far Eastern waters. The same year, he attended talks on normalization of relations with Japan.

He also was involved in negotiations with the Chinese and Indian governments in 1957.

Fedorenko is the author of two books on Chinese literature.

'VEXATIOUS LITIGANT'

British Court Orders Man Stop Filing Foolish Suits

LONDON (UPI)—The high court has branded Michael R. MacCarthy, a deaf mute who lives in a Salvation Army hotel, a "vexatious litigant" and ordered him to stop filing foolish lawsuits.

The court ruled that in the future MacCarthy will have to get a judge's permission before he files suit against anyone.

In the past 2½ years, MacCarthy has filed lawsuits seeking more than $150 million in damages. He's never won a penny.

* * * *

MOST OF the suits involved MacCarthy's registration as a physically handicapped person. The sums he has sought included:

—About 11 million from the London County Council.

—More than $3 million from the Hampstead Council.

—$14 million from the National Assistance Board.

—More than $10 million from the British attorney general.

* * * *

WHEN MacCarthy heard that the government planned to stop his suits, he promptly sued the attorney general for another $126 million for infringing his rights.

Attached to this writ was a note, "Here is another. May the best horse win."

Falling Pole Kills Youth, 21

Elmer Burrell, 21, died Saturday in Community Hospital from head injuries suffered when a light standard fell at 251 Marina Dr.

Burrell, who resided at 496 Louise St., was an electrician's helper and was fixing a sling to the standard when it fell. The youth toppled backwards, striking the pavement with his head.

Iowa Family of 7 Dies in Sunken Car

CLARKS, Neb. (UPI)—The bodies of a Des Moines, Iowa, family of seven were found Saturday in a capsized car almost completely submerged in mud and water beside a sweeping highway curve three miles south of here.

The victims were Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Randall Dewey, Des Moines, and their five sons.

Polk County (Neb.) Atty. William Norton said the victims, besides Dewey, 28, and his wife, Patricia, 26, were their five sons: Randy, 9; Steven, 7; Richard, 5; Kevin, 4, and Dennis, 2.

* * * *

NORTON SAID the Dewey family was en route to visit a brother, Allen Dewey, at Broken Bow, Neb., for the holidays.

The family was swallowed up, soon after midnight by the thick mud and icy water of the Platte River, whose backwash at the accident scene leaves a wide, swampy area.

The car apparently went off the highway near the approach to a long two-lane bridge over the river and swamp. The highway swings south in a wide curve from a junction with U.S. 30 near the scene of the accident.

The car was removed from the icy water 11 to 12 hours after it plunged into the swamp, authorities said.

* * * *

GARAGEMAN Art Schlondorf, 37, Clarks, who pulled the car out of the swamp about noon Saturday, said all seven bodies were inside the vehicle. He said one window was rolled down about a third of the way on the right side, but no doors were open.

Schlondorf said the car was submerged as much in mud as water. While only four inches of the tires protruded above the water, he and a helper, Glenn Colby, were able to walk to the car in overshoes which were not quite knee high. The top of the car was imbeded in the soft mud.

Soviet Satellite Possible Astronaut Trail-Blazer

MOSCOW (UPI)—The Soviet Union Saturday sent up the 12th scientific satellite in its "Cosmos" series, touching off speculation that another manned flight might follow in the near future.

Radio Moscow said Cosmos XII's equipment was functioning normally. The satellite is recording information in space and transmitting the data to earth.

Informed observers here said the new launching might herald an impeding new Soviet manned shot into space.

There was no Soviet comment available on the speculation.

Piglet Beauties Tails Are Pulled

BUDAPEST, Hungary (UPI)—State farms are currently holding beauty contests to select the best-looking Hungarian piglets.

The piglets will be carried through restaurants and night clubs New Year's Eve, when the customers will pull their tails — a traditional gesture that is said to bring good luck.

Aleutian Quake

HONOLULU (UPI) — Another strong earthquake was recorded in Alaska's Aleutian islands Saturday, but unlike Friday's series of shocks there was no tidal wave alert to alarm Hawaii residents.

Testimonial for Simpson Jan. 5

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Roy E. Simpson, 69, retiring next month after 17 years as California's superintendent of public instruction, will be honored by his staff and friends at a testimonial dinner in Sacramento Jan. 6.

THE WEEK IN REVIEW

After 2 Years, JFK Found the Presidency a Tough Job

By HARRY SHARPE
United Press International

President Kennedy last week gave the United States an uncommonly candid report on his first two years in office.

He frankly admitted at the outset of an unprecedented, nationwide radio and television interview that as an eager-beaver campaigner he had underestimated the problems and responsibilities of being President.

• • • •

THEN HE ticked off most of those problems, topped by the fateful struggle with communism and the frightening decisions which he alone, as President, has had to make.

He did not believe, for example, that his world-shaking solution of the Cuban crisis had opened the door to early accords with Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev. There was no doubt, he said, that Khrushchev got the full import of his message that the United States would fight even a nuclear war when its interests are jeopardized.

But while Khrushchev might now be more amenable on Berlin and other cold war issues, the President said "Mr. Khrushchev does not wish us well, unfortunately. His goal of a communized world remains unchanged."

• • • •

IN ADDITION, Mr. Kennedy said, Red China, which has split ideologically with Russia, remains a major danger because it would impose communism through war, rather than on Khrushchev's peaceful coexistence terms.

The President warned that at all times the United States and the free world must remain acutely aware of the communist danger.

To that end, he and British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan met in Nassau, the Bahamas, for three days and hammered out a tough new nuclear deterrent policy which France, a budding nuclear power, was invited to join.

• • • •

IF FULFILLED, the policy could end the nightmare of too many atomic powers within the NATO defense alliance and also give Khrushchev more qualms about Allied retaliatory strength.

Under the agreement, the United States and Britain will assign nuclear bombers now and Polaris missile submarines later to a combined nuclear force within NATO. France could do likewise if President Charles De Gaulle abandoned his boycott of NATO which is based on his determination to have an independent nuclear defense.

The President and Prime Minister also discussed The Congo crisis in which rich Katanga province insists on remaining independent from the Central Congo government. The President sent a military mission to the turbulent area to support the United Nations' peace efforts and keep a sharp eye on Russian maneuvering.

• • • •

IN HIS radio-TV interview the President touched only briefly on domestic issues. He foresaw troubles with the new Congress, and particularly the conservative-dominated House Rules Committee, over New Frontier programs such as tax cuts and reforms, aid to education, spending, and medical care for the aged.

As to press attacks on his administration, he said it was not pleasant to read disagreeable things but that the newspapers were an invaluable arm of the presidency.

He said they gave him a way to check things going on, and finally, that there was a big advantage—not available in Russia—in having "the abrasive quality of the press applied to you daily."

• • • •

HE ADDED that "there isn't any doubt that we could not do the job at all in a free society without a very, very active press."

Late Friday, an agreement was reached to release from Cuban prisons the 1,113 men taken as prisoners in the abortive Bay of Pigs invasion of April 1961. The prisoners were expected to begin arriving in this country today. They will be freed in exchange for food and medical supplies as ransom to go to Cuban Premier Castro.

In other news a federal court jury in Washington, D.C., found the Communist Party of the United States guilty of a criminal charge of failing to register as an agent of the Soviet Union. A $120,000 fine was stayed pending an appeal. Party leaders will be tried soon on similar charges.

Jane's of London said the U. S., despite a late start in the space race, was overwhelming Russia in the number and variety of satellites being orbited for peaceful or military purposes.

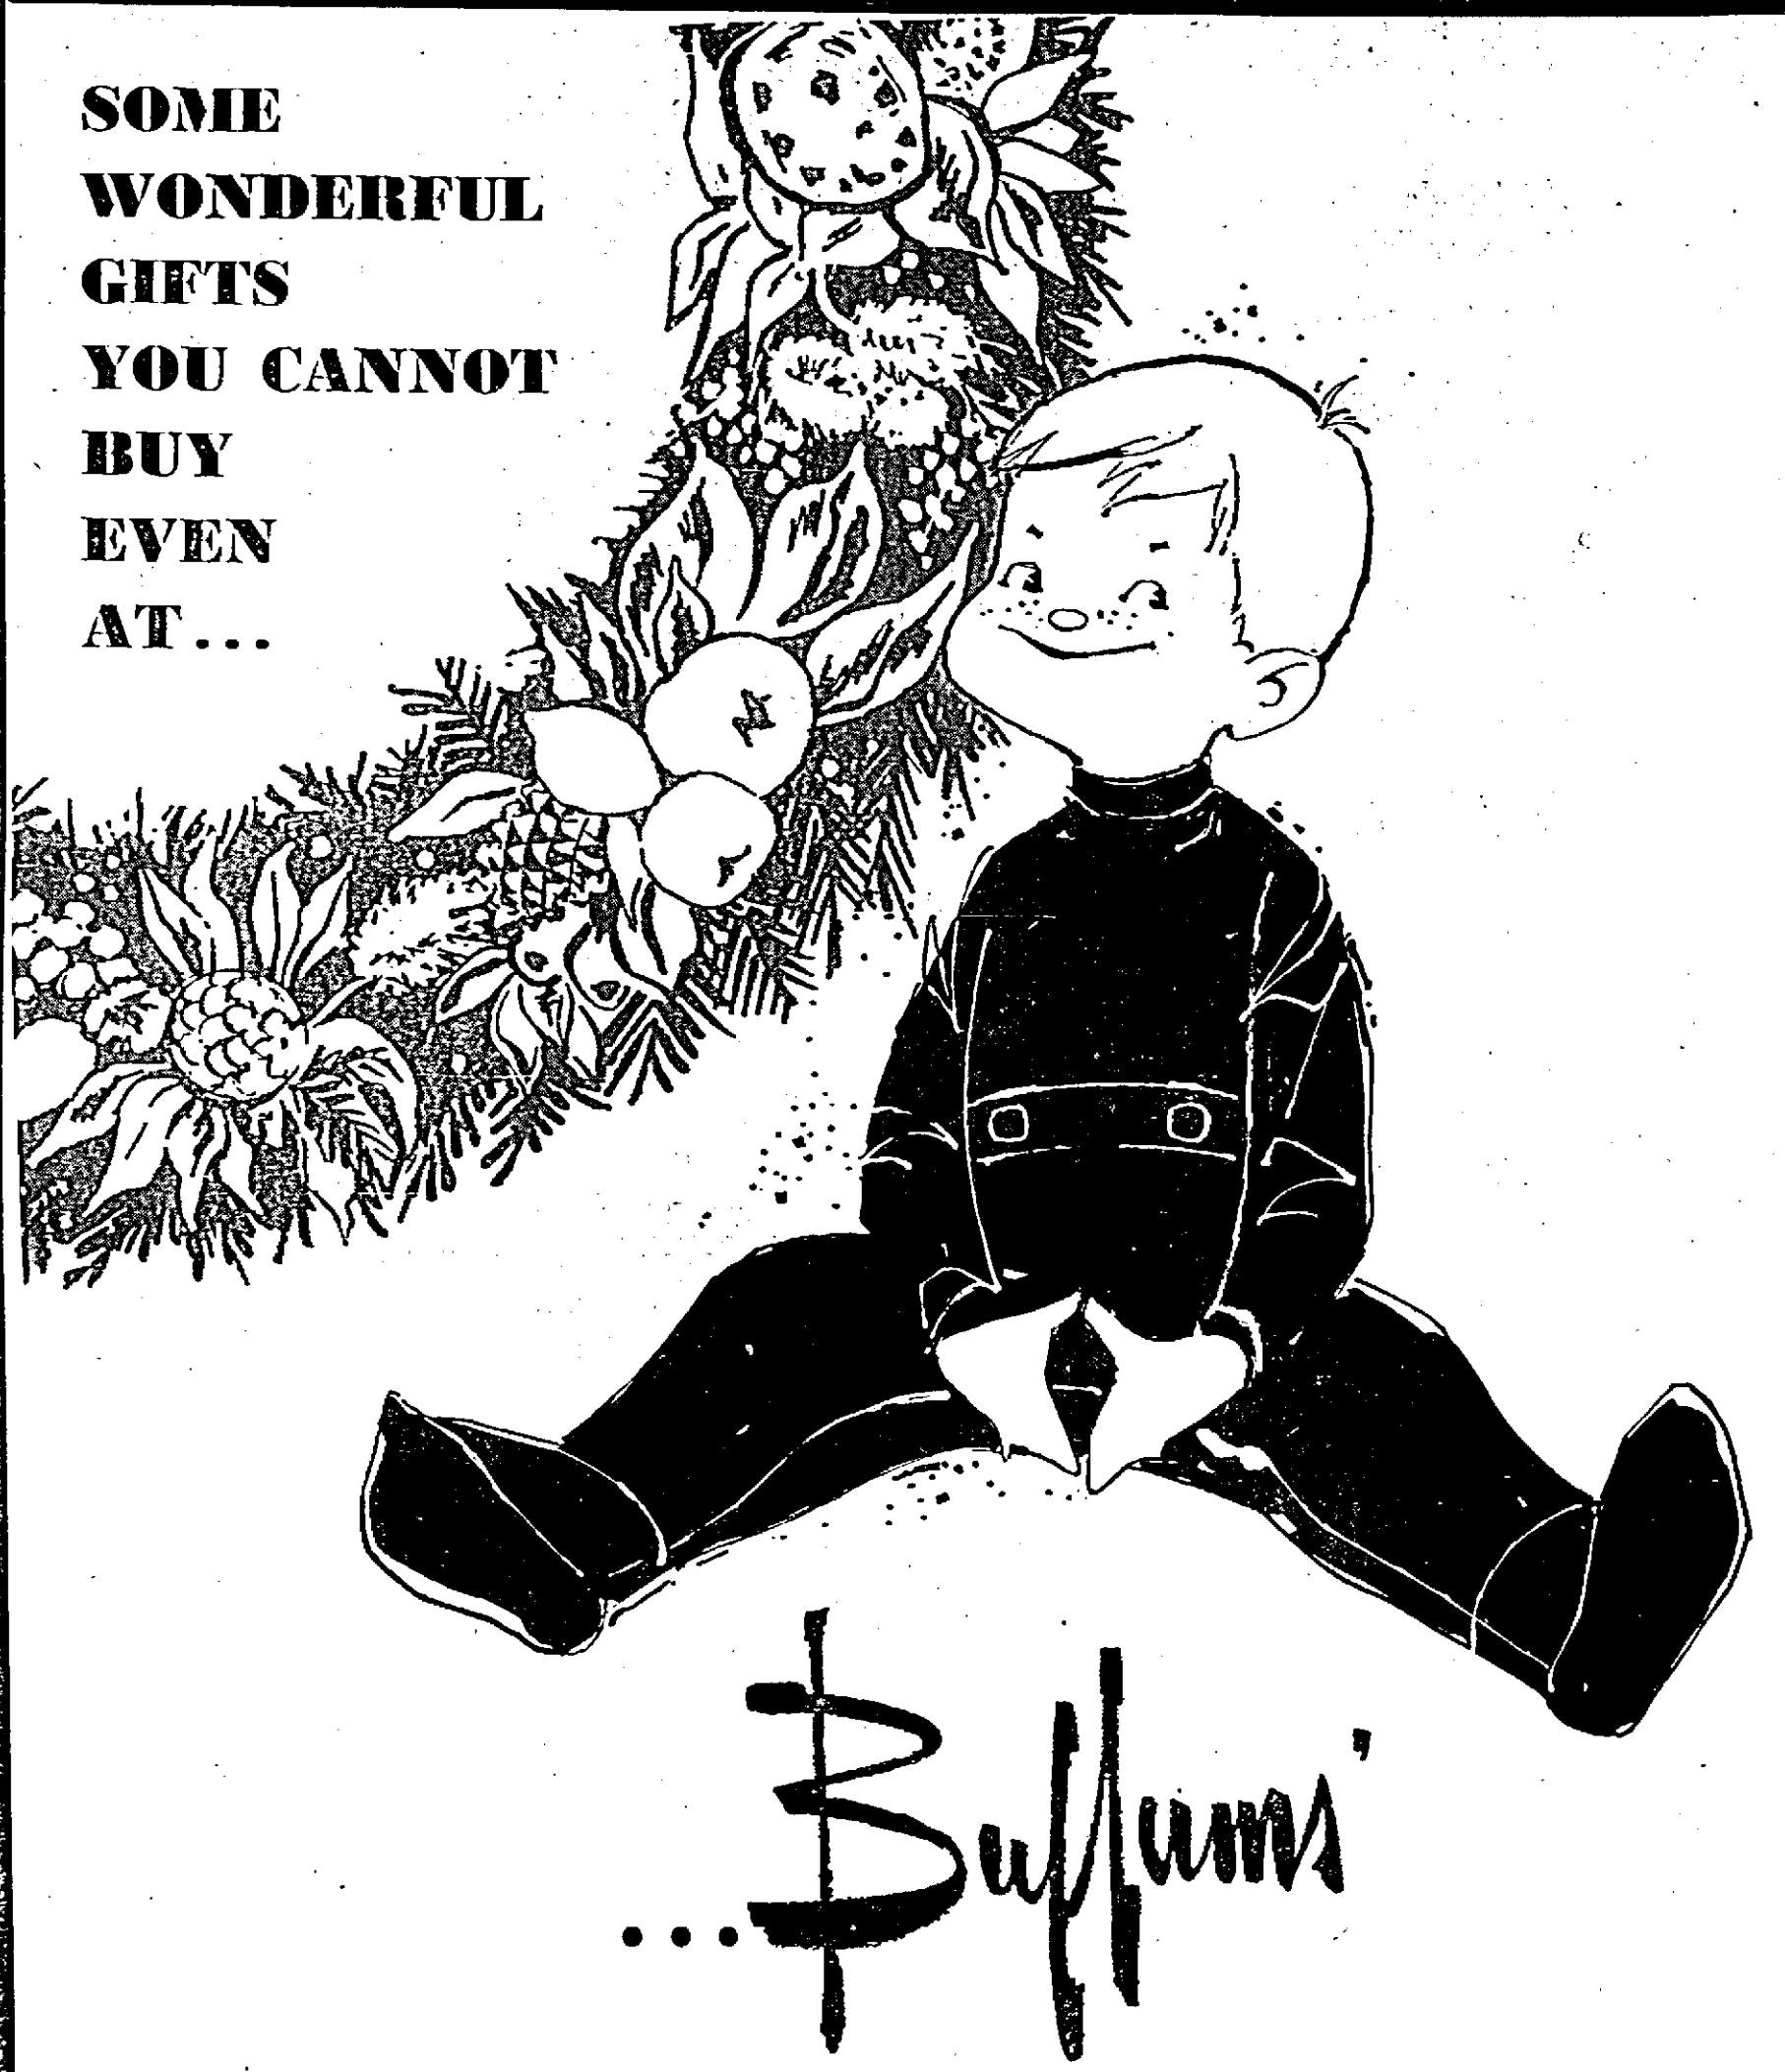

The United States recognized Yemen's revolutionary government which last September ousted King Mohammed al-Badr a week after he succeeded his father on the throne.

The Mona Lisa, one of the world's most famous paintings, arrived in Washington from France for public display starting Jan. 8. U. S. Secret Service agents were detailed to guard the priceless masterpiece around the clock.

LONG BEACH, PINE AT BROADWAY — SANTA ANA, MAIN AT TENTH — TOP OF THE MALL, POMONA — LONG BEACH, MARINA SPORTSWEAR

THE MOST unseasonable allergy imaginable is reluctantly owned by Kathy Hodgson, 10-year-old daughter of the Bryan Hodgsons.

Kathy is allergic to Christmas trees.

Her dad proudly brought home a nice one, quickly removed it to the back yard when the little gal began sneezing and weeping.

An aluminum tree now graces the Hodgson fireside and Kathy, happily, is not allergic to that.

---

THE PLAINTIVE cry of a little boy rings through this Christmas story, told to this dept. by a Long Beach teacher.

She asked the pupils in the third grade of a school in an area of modest homes to write their Christmas thoughts for themselves, their family and the world in general.

One little boy wrote:

For himself, enough to eat.

For his family, happiness.

On the larger issue: "The world is so big and God is so far away."

---

IF YOU feel you should do something else that is big and worthy for Christmas, how about giving some blood.

Because accidents, unfortunately, are commonplace in the holiday season, the drain on the Red Cross blood bank is unusually heavy.

The bank is short now, and special blood donation periods have been set up. One is for today, Sunday, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Others: Monday, Dec. 24, 1 to 5 p.m., and Dec. 31, 1 to 5 p.m.

The Red Cross is located at 319 W. Broadway, Long Beach.

SOME time ago I moaned in this pillar about a home problem—the invasion of my ivy patch by grass—vigorous, long-rooted, tall-stemmed, determined, stubborn grass.

I thought that the comment might provoke some suggestions and some people really tried, one way or another. A chemical expert came out at my invitation. I wasn't there and he simply looked things over and left his card.

Meanwhile, the neighbors are getting more restless and my wife has been pointing out that holiday visitors might look aghast at the condition of our front yard.

A couple of neighbor boys came by and, on the offer of a little Christmas money, agreed to do some pulling just to make it look a little better.

From an open window, I heard them conversing. Said one:

"I've been pulling a lot of grass and weeds around this neighborhood. I think I'll retire at 15."

MISSING from the local scene this Christmas is a personality who came to represent the very spirit of Christmas to hundreds of people of the area.

Jimmie McGarrigle, the town's unofficial (or maybe I should say official) Santa Claus for a quarter of a century or so, is gone. Jim died between Christmases, and his chubby figure in a red suit, his rollicking Irish tenor, his rolling ho-ho-ho must be helping make it a jolly season Over There as he did for us here for so long a time.

Jimmie was not only a good Santa Claus at the Yuletide, but he acted in the true Christmas spirit throughout the year. His memory is an inspiration.

BODY TEMPERATURE OF 41 F. CALLED IDEAL

Hibernation for Space Crews Probed

By BEN ZINSER
Medical-Science Editor

After the moon, man plans to reach for the stars—and medical scientists already are planning how to cope with the hazards of outer space.

At North American Aviation's Torrance facility, Dr. Gerald S. Linder, consultant in life sciences and aerospace medicine, says researchers there are studying two major problems: radiation protection and fatigue.

Scientists already have determined that, in animals, lowering the body temperature and administering certain drugs give protection against radiation.

Researchers would like to find ways to "deep-freeze" space crews. Not only would this artificial hibernation protect against cosmic radiation but it also would "effect great economy," Dr. Linder points out.

Since "frozen sleep" reduces metabolism, space crews would require little food, water and oxygen. Waste-disposal problems would be reduced.

There also would be a psychological advantage. A state of suspended animation would eliminate anxiety and depression.

Another plus would be the body's ability to tolerate greater G (gravity) forces.

Scientists think 41 degrees F.—only nine degrees above freezing—would be an ideal temperature for artificial hibernation in space. This is much colder than the whole-body cooling temperatures used in present-day heart and brain surgery. Today's surgeons ordinarily use temperatures ranging from 86 to 82 degrees F.

Dr. Linder says a drawback to the deep-freeze technique is that blood tends to sludge when it is cooled. If sludging occurs, blood vessels can be plugged to deny oxygen to tissue. Oxygen-starved tissue dies.

Researchers are hoping that sludging can be prevented by administering certain chemicals.

Sludging studies now are in progress at North American Aviation. Surgical equipment is being used to perfuse cooled blood through rabbits.

The Southland researchers also are taking a new look at actual hibernation — that of animals such as hamsters and woodchucks.

These animals, Dr. Linder says, no longer hibernate when their "hibernation glands" are removed. The glands are technically known as brown fat bodies. Main area for these bodies is the limb pits.

Dr. Linder estimates that a crew for long-duration flights to planets will consist of six to 10 persons. Since it may not be possible for all to be in deep-freeze at the same time, there will be the problem of fatigue for those manning the spaceship.

Scientists are hoping that special drugs can prevent fatigue. Antifatigue drugs now are being tested.

Seal Beach Becomes Art Center

By KEN KNIGHT

SEAL BEACH—Once famed only for a poker palace that made headlines, this city is now rapidly becoming a mecca for artists.

Instead of trying to draw to a straight or a royal flush, members of the Artists' League of Seal Beach are busy producing art works that are drawing national attention to the community and the group.

First organized in 1957 with 15 members, the Artists' League now has a membership of more than 200 persons from as far north as Carpenteria and as far south as San Diego.

* * * *

INSTEAD OF MEETING in the Seal Beach Youth Center as it first did, the organization now has its own Art Center, at Ocean Avenue and Main Street, where the works of the members are displayed.

The group now sponsors 12 classes a week with instruction in many different art medias.

"Some of our classes have an enrollment of more than 30 persons and seem to be growing all the time," said Pat Jones, organizer of the group and now managing director of the Artists' League.

"You know a group like this doesn't just happen. You have to work, and that's what we've been doing.

* * * *

"WE HAVE NINE art shows a year displaying the works of our members. This (Mrs. Jones pointed to paintings on the walls) is our pre-Christmas show."

In addition the league annually produces the largest mosaic show held in the United States.

This year, the fourth annual mosaic show will be held for a month beginning Jan. 12.

* * * *

"WE SHOULD HAVE some truly outstanding exhibits since last year our members took the first three awards at the famous mosaic show at Wichita, Kan.," Mrs. Jones said.

The Artists' League also has been the subject of an article in the nationally circulated American Artists' magazine.

"Our members represent almost every occupation and some of them travel a long way to get the professional instruction that can be obtained here," Mrs. Jones continued.

"The members, who range in age from six to 92 years, realize one thing: art is a challenge and an exciting thing."

SERIOUS STUDENTS, Mrs. Charles Koller (left) and Maxine Frazier, both of Long Beach, work in art class in Seal Beach.

INSTRUCTOR Glenn Jones gives critique of work of Dawn McGill, 12102 Volunteer Ave., Norwalk, at Artist League session.

DIRECTOR Pat Jones has keen eye for art progress.

CAREFUL worker is Virginia Beebout, Norwalk.

CD Gets Six Water Purifiers

By GEORGE WEEKS

Six portable water-distillation units for use in emergency have been added to Long Beach civil defense resources.

The Municipal Water Department received the self-powered distilling plants, formerly used by the Navy, through arrangements with federal, state and city CD officials.

Brennan S. Thomas, general manager of the department, said city personnel will be trained to operate the units shortly after the first of the year. The Board of Water Commissioners appropriated $3,000 to pay delivery costs.

* * * *

THE DISTILLERIES are designed to convert salt water or brackish water into water safe for drinking.

The six units have a total capacity of about 12,000 gallons daily. Although this is a trifle compared with normal water consumption, CD officials noted it is enough to sustain life for almost 50,000 persons under emergency rations of one quart a day.

In another move toward civilian preparedness, the City Civil Defense Department announced that 10 new classes in the medical self-help training program will be formed next month.

The 16-hour course is given in two-hour periods, one each week. Enrollees are trained to care for their own health needs in time of disaster when professional medical aid may not be available for periods ranging from hours to weeks. All lessons are illustrated with color film strips.

Since the program was initiated here more than 2,500 persons have enrolled, according to Evar Peterson, assistant city CD director.

* * * *

REGISTRATIONS for the new classes are being accepted at the civil defense office in the city hall and the training center at 5373 E. Second St. Each class is limited to 25 persons.

Starting dates, schedules and meeting places for the new classes are:

Jan. 7, 1:30 p.m. Mondays, CD Training Center on Second Street.

Jan. 9, 7:30 p.m., Wednesdays, Lindbergh School.

Jan. 14, 7:30 p.m. Mondays, Pan American Park Recreation Hall.

Jan. 16, 7:30 p.m. Wednesdays, CD Training Center.

Jan. 16, 7:30 p.m. Wednesdays, Wilson High School.

Jan. 21, 7:30 p.m. Mondays, Wilson High School.

Jan. 21, 1:30 p.m. Mondays, Alamitos Branch Library.

Jan. 22, 7:30 p.m. Tuesdays, Municipal Health Center.

Jan. 25, 1:30 p.m. Fridays, Pan American Park Recreation Hall.

Jan. 29, 7:30 p.m. Tuesdays, Marshall School.

2nd Well in Park UnderWay

It will be impossible to estimate the extent of oil production in Recreation Park until several more wells are drilled, City Manager John R. Mansell has told city councilmen.

Drilling of a second well is under way and is scheduled for completion within a month.

Meanwhile the first well has been curtailed to 200 barrels per day "until additional information can be obtained on the reservoir," Mansell reported.

The second well will be bottomed 1,400 feet southeast of the first, which was completed Dec. 11 at a depth of 8,300 feet almost directly under the 18-hole golf course clubhouse.

Oil technicians believe the newly tapped pool is separated from the Seal Beach field by a fault or some other pressure barrier. Production appears to be separated from both the Richfield well to the northwest and the Alamitos Heights area to the east.

High gravities reported from the first well are regarded as encouraging, while the high ratio of gas to oil, unusual in the area, is "somewhat disappointing," Mansell said.

Post Office to Give Full Service Monday

Windows of the Long Beach Post Office and its branches are closed today, but regular deliveries of mail will be made today and Monday, according to Postmaster David Selcer.

Windows at the Post Offices will be open Monday from 8:30 a.m. until 5:30 p.m.

LBSC Will Offer Challenging Honors Program for 'Talented'

An honors program designed "to challenge the academically talented" will start next fall at Long Beach State College.

Limited to 5 per cent of the college's entering freshmen next September, the program will be extended to other classes as the first group advances.

Dean of the College Raymond E. Lindgren described the program as "a broad pattern of general education which stresses the relationship among the humanities, social sciences and natural sciences."

The courses will cut across departmental boundaries with the honor students doing more independent work than their classmates, Lindgren said.

The program was developed by a committee headed by Dr. Suzanne M. Wilson, associate professor of English.

Sixty students will be admitted in 1963. Qualified freshmen will be invited to enter but will not be required to do so.

The 1963 honors freshmen will enroll in a seminar called "The Changing Image of Western Man." Honors sophomores will take a similar course on Eastern culture.

By the junior year, the honors students will study such problems as motivation, conformity and automation. They also will be given research experience under close faculty supervision.

The honors seniors will complete a thesis based on original research and take comprehensive examinations.

Science courses will cover a broader range of subject matter than traditional courses.

Committee members say the honors program is expected to attract a greater number of top students to Long Beach State and to "stimulate intellectual life" at the campus.

His Home City Was a Career for William F. Prisk

WILLIAM FREDERICK PRISK was appropriately called "Mr. Long Beach," for in the career which ended with his death Friday at 92 he did more than any other one man to promote the welfare and development of this community.

He could as appropriately be called "Mr. Christmas" because Christmas, with all of its true meaning in terms of warmth and generosity and good will was the highlight of each year for him. And these things, indeed, were his own basic characteristics.

In the last days, as he clung to the frail thread of life, he determinedly carried out his personal and traditional Christmas program — scores of letters to friends and long-time associates, contributions to the needy, a wide distribution of gifts. To those who knew him, it is significant that this was his final labor, and that he completed it before the end came.

FROM HUMBLE beginnings in the Mother Lode town of Grass Valley — he was 10 when he began carrying a local paper, 19 when he became a full-fledged publisher there—Mr. Prisk went on to a career that made him one of California's outstanding citizens as a successful publisher and editor and community builder. His was an inspiring success story.

He came to Long Beach in 1910 upon acquiring the Long Beach Press and from that time on was recognized leader in the business, educational, cultural and religious life of this community. Many of the city's finest facilities, now benefitting tens of thousands who came here after his retirement in 1952 and knew him only as a name, are directly attributable to his foresight and leadership.

In the early years, for example, he became a vigorous champion of harbor development. The local port was then little more than a tide flat. He was one of two men sent to Washington about 1912 to enlist federal support. For nearly 40 years he used the columns of his newspaper to build support for the harbor and he lived to see the one-time tide flat transformed into one of the world's most active ports and a base for the United States Navy.

Public schools received the strong support of Mr. W. F. throughout his entire active life. As the seaside village of 1910 grew into a metropolitan city it became difficult to provide adequate facilities for growing needs of the schools. He fought for years for modern schools and sound educational programs and it was fitting that a school here was named in his honor while he still lived.

He was an ardent supporter of religious life here, regardless of creed. He recognized the need of spiritual life in this fast-growing community and used his newspaper to further it.

MR. W. F. was a man of rare vision. Carson Taylor, publisher of the Manila Times, has told how he and Mr. Prisk stood atop Signal Hill in 1920 and the Long Beach publisher, with a sweeping arm gesture in the general direction of Lakewood, remarked: "Some day you will see one million persons living within the range of our vision." Mr. Prisk lived to see this prophecy fulfilled.

Because he was so sure of this great growth, he fought hard for the things a great population would need. For instance, he was one of the strongest supporters of the Metropolitan Water District plan when it became an issue of heated controversy. It was largely because of his efforts that Long Beach was one of the original 13 cities in the great project which has provided the life blood for Southern California's fabulous development.

H. F. (HANK) Burmester, long associated with Mr. W. F. in the newspaper business and for many years his executive editor, has given us this vignette:

"Perhaps the outstanding characteristic of Mr. Prisk was his unswerving loyalty to his friends or to any cause he felt to be right. It mattered not to him if a good public servant had temporarily lost popularity. W. F. would back him more vigorously than ever, saying, 'He has been an honest, capable public servant and deserves our support.' W. F. didn't play for likely winners but always sought capable men for public office.

"His charities were many and his contributions were given without ostentation. Only W. F. knew the extent of the broad field of his help for the needy, the sick, the unfortunate and the long list of welfare organizations.

"To sum it up: He was a man of high intelligence, intense loyalty, and the courage to champion the right as he saw it. He had a tear of sympathy for the unfortunate and open purse for projects he deemed worth while. He was devoted to his family, loyal to his friends, and had an abiding faith and affection for his home city. He was molded in the Master's finest pattern. He was a real man."

Manipulation of TV Joins Weapons in JFK'S Arsenal

WASHINGTON — Republicans and Democrats have begun to quarrel over whether "equal time" should be granted for a rebuttal to President Kennedy's interview on radio and television last Monday night.

The Republican National Committee is planning to ask for similar privileges on the air, but hasn't quite made up its mind who the actors in the show would be. Rep. E. Celler of New York, Democrat, has urged the networks to refuse "categorically" any requests for "equal time," as he says it would "set a most dangerous precedent." Besides, he argues, Mr. Kennedy is not a political candidate.

LAWRENCE

Technically, of course, the 1964 political campaign has not started and there are no formal candidates, but actually the campaign is already under way.

President Kennedy really has begun to campaign actively for reelection. Almost every move he makes nowadays is based on its possible impact on the voters during the next 22 months. Every opportunity for publicity is sought. The latest example is the unprecedented interview on radio and television over all three major networks for a full hour last Monday night. The President could have given every bit of this information at a regular news conference, but it wouldn't have been dramatic enough nor subject to previous editing.

Mr. Kennedy evidently felt sure that the newspapers would use the interview rather fully, anyway, so it would also get wide publication in the press.

• • • •

THE BIGGEST advantage of all to Mr. Kennedy, however, is that he manages by this method to prevent any rebuttal on the same night that he gets full coverage of his views over the television networks. It it not like the "great debates" of the last presidential campaign, when the opposite candidate was at least given a chance to answer point by point.

All the provisions of federal law about "equal time" with reference to television and radio programs that concern speeches by major candidates in politics seem to have become meaningless under the new procedure. The President can always argue that his speeches are not political, though almost everything he said in the broadcast on Monday, for example, had to do with major political subjects which are current issues before the country.

The arrangements made by the three networks for the President's interview precluded any opposition speaker following closely on the President's remarks. It is said they did try to invite national personalities to talk but there was no way by which the latter would prepare themselves for rebuttal the same evening, though the President himself had 24 hours in which he could change the transcript in whatever way he pleased.

The manipulation of news now is an administration policy, and the manipulation of network facilities has become a valuable instrument in the "arsenal of weapons" on the political battlefront. Almost everyone who knows anything about politics is aware that what is said during a campaign is only half the battle, and that a substantial number of votes have already been won or lost by what is said or done prior to the actual beginning of a campaign.

• • • •

A ONE-SIDED presentation of what the government is doing appeals to some politicians as fair, but the people resent the obvious use of public office for political purposes. The newspapers have a circulation of nearly 60 million copies, and these reach an even larger number of individuals in the homes. The number of homes with television sets is around 47 million, but not everybody stays home for every program. Yet those who miss a President's utterances on the air can generally get a copy of a newspaper and read about them there.

So the President is certainly an astute press agent in his own behalf in giving the television network a special program which they can advertise in advance.

What's more important is whether this sort of thing can become a "brainwashing" operation through which the people are led to form impressions based on incomplete and inadequate presentation of controversial subjects. Opponents have virtually no chance to refute presidential statements.

• • • •

IN THE SOVIET Union such things are handled by forbidding all counter-comment or criticism of the top executive. If there is criticism at all, it's usually at a later date, long after the initial speech. Maybe that's going to be the net effect in America, where the networks are under direct government supervision and control. The broadcasters usually try to maintain independence, but many nevertheless find it desirable to play ball with the administration in power. That's why the newspapers become the last available source for the prompt and continuous presentation of both sides of controversial questions in a comprehensive manner in their news pages.

Kern County's Quick Results Prove Value of Vote Device

PROBABLY ASSEMBLYMAN Bill Grant's last official chore as a Long Beach legislator was the chairing of a hearing by the Assembly Elections and Reapportionment Committee Friday in Los Angeles. Bill retires with the start of the new legislative session Jan. 7.

HOUSER

This duty involved a symbolic passing of the baton in one of California's critical marathon relays—voting procedure. For the first time in many years there is a happy conjunction of both the means and the temper to get something done about our slow count elections. It is almost inconceivable that meaningful remedies will not be legislated in the new session.

Among the bright prospects in terms of speed is the Coleman electronic vote tally machine, an $800,000 smartie which wrought a California phenomenon last Nov. 6 in Kern County.

I called on Kern officials last week in Bakersfield to collect their appraisals and afterthoughts. Carlyle D. Millar, county executive officer, and Vera K. Gibson, county clerk, were enthusiastic and impressed by the machine's test. So were editors and reporters at the newspaper, the Bakersfield Californian.

KERN VOTERS had a dramatic comparison. Their June 5 primary vote, counted under traditional manual method, took 24 hours. The Coleman counter did the Nov. 6 job in less than nine hours.

Millar and Miss Gibson noted that arrangements for the test in Kern County were made on a last minute basis. For example, there was not time enough to consolidate the county's 619 precincts as would be done in regular use of the machine. They say that proper preparation could have lopped three more hours off the tally time.

Coleman provided the machine installation free for the test. Kern saved $20,000 in the one exercise. With precinct consolidation and other refinements, annual savings would approach $50,000. Kern, needing only one $500,000 system, could pay for it in 15 years out of savings. The county has an option, to April 15, to decide on purchase. Only deterrent is the question of a 12 to 13-cent increase in the tax levy which county supervisors must weigh.

LOS ANGELES COUNTY Registrar of Voters Benjamin S. Hite is also impressed with the tally device. In fact, this county pioneered and paid for first-phase development of the counter and has a prototype installed. But we would need 10 of the systems for the county's big vote.

How would communities such as Long Beach or its 32nd Congressional District and two Assembly districts, 39th and 44th, be able to get results for publication the morning after election day?

The Independent, Press-Telegram does its own count now using special crews and adding machines at the county building here before shipping the ballots to the registrar. Otherwise, news of local performance by our voters would have to wait a day or two for word.

HITE AND COLEMAN officials say the problem of providing newspapers with their area results is a fairly simple one. The big counting brain would merely be fed a programmed tape instructing it to spit out results for our 865 precincts. Officials calculate this procedure could do at least as well as our manual count which gives us perhaps a 30 per cent reading at the midnight or 1 a.m. deadline time. The machine reading would be much more accurate and the complete results would thereafter be only a matter of hours in coming instead of the days' wait we now suffer.

Man Should Be Free to Join or Not Join

EDITOR:

Re: Bill Webster's letter: Bill, I worked for a non-union shop at one time. The company was wonderful to its workers because they wanted to be and not because they were forced to by some union. Then, like a bad dream, it happened. The unions forced themselves in shops all over the country. I joined the union because I had to in order to work and feed my family.

When I was first married I made eleven dollars a week and we lived good.

It reminds me of Hitler when he told his people to do something, or else. I say let those join the union who want to. But let the people that want to feel like free Americans work on any job they wish to without being forced to join a union.

Breakwater Freeway Proposed

EDITOR:

Since the California Highway Department and our City Commissioners are deadlocked with reference to the proposed freeway cutting up our fair city, I have the following suggestions to make to break this deadlock:

Extend the Long Beach Freeway to Pier J and then connect it with the mainland in the vicinity of Seal Beach by having the freeway follow the Long Beach breakwater.

This would give the cities to the south of us real rapid transit and it would also be an asset to the Long Beach Harbor as well as the coming World's Fair. If the Highway Department claims that it would cost too much, perhaps tideland oil would throw in a few bucks.

Answers Letter on Socialized Medicine

EDITOR:

Mr. H. Walters' defense of socialized medicine and plug for the variety forced on people in England and New Zealand is familiar propaganda spouted by Socialists all over the world. No doubt if Mr. Walter had visited Russia instead of England and New Zealand he would also have had nothing but the finest to say of their system of medicine.

If Mr. Walter truly believes socialized medicine to be better than the free market kind, then why doesn't he go into a voluntary system where only those that believe in this sort of thing are charged for it. In this way he and his political supporters can prove beyond all reasonable doubt their system is better than free market medicine and we would all be anxious to join him.

On the other hand if Mr. Walter wants socialized medicine and is unwilling to pay for the free market medicine, he may use the facilities provided by the counties in California. I realize most Socialists I have talked to concerning this matter always bring up the point that the county hospital is "charity" and they will not accept charity. Well, perhaps not just now, but I suspect what the Socialists really want is to force all of us to accept the same kind of charity they do piously abstain from using as long as its users are in a minority. However, I should like to point out that any socialized scheme of medicine will be financed from the same source of money the county hospital now derives its operating expenses.

How about it, America: do you wish to be forced into accepting a type of charity for your medical needs, similar to those provided by county hospitals now, or would you rather pay for the first rate, efficient medicine we are all capable of paying for, at least most of the time?

Lumber Bloc Seeks Bigger Forest Cuts

SEATTLE—As I traveled between Seattle and Portland the other day, I saw trucks laden with huge piles of evergreen carrying Christmas trees to the firesides of the nation. And alongside the highway I could see scars in the hillsides where the latest batch of trees had been cut from the forests.

This annual Christmas-tree harvest does not materially affect the forest reserves of the nation. It's a drop in the bucket compared with our annual timber cut. But in Chicago last summer there was held a secret meeting at which was launched a campaign to get a much heavier cut from the national forests for the private lumbermen.

PEARSON

The meeting, held at the Water Tower Inn, was attended by the representatives of the biggest lumber companies of the nation, ranging from R. L. Orell, vice president of the giant Weyerhauser firm in Washington State, to E. C. Rettig of Potlach Lumber in Idaho, and Walter W. Black of Austin Lumber in South Dakota. Even some of the southern lumbermen — J. F. Muller of Willis, Tex., Ralph S. Taggart of Mississippi, and Warren Biggs of the Alger Sullivan Company in Florida — were there.

At this meeting it was officially decided to put up $145,000 to start a publicity campaign to win a public demand that the 900 billion board feet now preserved by the Department of Agriculture be opened up to further exploitation.

Behind this is the fact that trees grow slowly, and, although the big timber barons have come around to careful reforestation methods, their own timber reserve is not what it used to be. So they have been trying to persuade Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman to further open up the national forests.

HE ALREADY PERMITS a certain amount of careful cutting by private companies. But when it comes to increasing this cut, he has told the Western Pine Association that his obligation is to see that the national forests are managed to "best meet the needs of all the American people."

Those needs require the protection of watersheds which supply water to approximately 2,000 communities, the preservation of grazing land, and the use of the national forests for recreational purposes.

The minutes of the Chicago meeting provide that an organization called "FACTS" shall be set up in county seats in timber areas "so as to identify with the public interest, win the support of elected county officials, as well as doctors, lawyers, teachers, and other professional people with the mill operators participating as interested local citizens with special knowledge of the problem."

The county seat was chosen for this campaign because 80 per cent of the present members of the U.S. Senate reside in county seats; and the drive is to influence Congress to force Secretary of Agriculture Freeman to relax national forest cutting restrictions.

ACCORDING TO THE STRATEGY issued after the Chicago meeting, FACTS will put across its propaganda in "patterned speeches" before "captive" luncheon and dinner audiences. These meetings are to be made to appear nonpartisan by inviting local Democratic and Republican leaders.

So goes the backstage drive to pressure Secretary of Agriculture Freeman into permitting a larger annual cut of the national forests.

Police Warning on 'Missionaries'

Long Beach police have warned citizens about renewed activity of collectors for so-called "missionary armies" and asked all residents to call the Police Department immediately about all such solicitations.

There have been reports of door-to-door collectors of the Western Missionary Army, Inc., in the northern part of the city during the pre-Christmas period.

The operations of this group were reported in a three-part expose by Independent reporter Vint Mader earlier this year.

Insp. C. O. Bennett, head of the police bunco detail, reminded prospective donors that at least 60 per cent of all the money goes directly into the pocket of the collector.

"This does not constitute a legitimate religious function," said Bennett.

The inspector said anyone who is solicited by this group should notify the bunco squad immediately.

The practice of paying collectors a 60-per-cent commission was reported in The Independent's series. It was also covered in testimony before a subsequent hearing by a state legislative committee.

Manager Chosen

Carl W. Chambers, assistant chief engineer of Douglas Aircraft's Skybolt program, has been named administrative manager of the firm's new Corporate Advanced Research Laboratory to be built next year in Huntington Beach.

CARL W. CHAMBERS

Chambers, of Pacific Palisades, will be responsible for establishing technical requirements and physical layout for the $2-million center.

More than 100 scientists, engineers and technicians are expected to be employed at the center in programs of advanced research basic to the development of aircraft, missile and space systems.

Suicide Plunge

Mrs. Pernell Van Dercar, 58, a resident of the Cooper Arms, 455 E. Ocean Blvd., plunged to her death from her seventh-floor apartment about 7:30 Friday morning.

Sgt. W. T. Robertson said no note was found, but evidence pointed to suicide.

Mrs. Norma Rudolph, manager of a beauty salon operated by Mrs. Van Dercar, said the victim feared she had cancer.

Milton Basham, 66, of 59 Atlantic Ave., who was walking past the building, said he saw Mrs. Van Dercar on a window ledge and telephoned police, but moments later she fell.

Hail City Drivers

Eighty-six operators of Long Beach rubbish and garbage trucks were honored Saturday for driving the cumbersome vehicles the whole year without a traffic accident.

They received laminated cards and congratulations from the Long Beach Safety Council and City Manager John R. Mansell at a 5:30 a.m. breakfast in the sanitation division yard.

In addition, Mansell presented to the division a plaque awarded by the Greater Los Angeles Chapter of the Safety Council for winning first place in the annual regional contest for safe operation of rubbish fleets.

The Long Beach record was 1,245,000 miles driven with only 74 accidents including trivial fender scrapings.

Singled out for special mention were Gerald Melendy, Menether Mitchell and Jack Roehrich, each of whom has driven rubbish trucks more than 15 years without an accident.

$8,778 in Grants

Seven charitable organizations in Long Beach are being awarded more than $8,778 in grants by the California Community Foundation, the foundation announced Saturday.

Recipients are Long Beach Area Boy Scouts Council, Exceptional Children's Foundation, Goodwill Industries, Long Beach Day Nursery, YMCA, YWCA, and Adelaide Christian Home for Children.

CCF, founded in 1915 and one of the first community foundations organized in the U. S., is distributing more than $4.5 million this year to California charitable institutions.

Grand Jury Advises Eased Abortion Law

By DON BRACKENBURY
L. P-T Los Angeles Bureau

More lenient state laws on abortions, prompt improvement of county juvenile facilities and a crackdown on chiselers in veterans' tax exemptions and medical care to the needy are recommended by the 1962 Los Angeles County Grand Jury.

Chairman Verne Orr submitted the jury's final report Friday to Superior Judge Evelle J. Younger.

Noting that California's abortion law has not been updated since 1850, the jury said "many responsible and sincere people" in recent years have reached the conclusion that the existing law is "obsolete, harsh and indifferent to the human sufferings and heartache that are commonly encountered in the great number of cases involving abortions."

• • • •

STATE LAW makes it a felony for a doctor to abort a pregnant woman unless the abortion is necessary to preserve her life.

Jurors pointed to problems arising when pregnancy results from incest or rape and where "sound medical judgment" indicates the child may be born with a serious congenital defect.

The report recommended that an interim joint committee study the need for possible revision. Such a committee has, in fact, just concluded hearings in San Diego.

• • • •

INADEQUATE juvenile facilities were described by the report as "one of the gravest problems facing Los Angeles County." Facilities for girls in the 18 to 21 age group are "woefully inadequate," the report said. Classrooms in the boys' area at Juvenile Hall were labeled "substandard."

Jury investigators checked claims for veterans' tax exemptions and found about 50 per cent were not entitled to exemption and said "in some cases the fraud was flagrant."

The jury recommended that all information relative to veterans' exemptions be included on one sheet and that all the data be filled in by the veteran himself, not the deputy assessor.

• • • •

ON ANOTHER fraud matter, the jury said "some doctors and dentists" have filed fraudulent claims under the medical care program. It asked the county counsel to file and prosecute claims for triple damages against any such violators.

Dangerous fire conditions still exist at Rancho Los Amigos Hospital, Downey, and Olive View Sanitarium and "should be dealt with promptly," the report said.

Hahn Warns on Costs of Health Dept.

L. P-T Los Angeles Bureau

If the City of Los Angeles turns its health services over to the county Health Department, it should also turn over its $14-million health building, according to Supervisor Kenneth Hahn.

Otherwise, Hahn asserted, county taxpayers will be forced to build some $15 million worth of new facilities—which would mean a 15-cent increase in the tax rate.

Los Angeles councilmen are pondering transfer of the health functions to the county. Only four Los Angeles County cities — Los Angeles, Long Beach, Pasadena and Vernon—maintain their own health departments.

• • • •

UNDER STATE law, the county must provide health services to any city which asks for them.

Hahn said the proposed Los Angeles transfer will save the city $3.5 million, or 6.8 cents on its tax rate, but will boost the overall county rate by five cents.

Unless the city also turns over its health-department building, the merger will cost money, not save money, Hahn said.

If the "true desire" of the proposed merger is to save the taxpayers money, Hahn said, it can be done best through cooperative city and county efforts in making best use of city health buildings by the county Health Department.

BB Gunners Damage Autos

BB gunners took advantage of Saturday morning fog to make sneak attacks on automobiles parked in North Long Beach.

Virginia G. McCarthy of 300 E. Louise St., Walter Smith of 152 E. Louise St., Dortha S. Prior of 5543 Chestnut Ave. and Frances R. Lowe of 5495 Atlantic Ave. reported damages to police.

In each instance, police said, pellets were fired through car windows.

COSTUME, 'SLEIGH' LIKE FIREMAN'S

Santa Assured 62 Families

Santa Claus will wear a hard hat, a raincoat, and drive a red "sleigh" when he visits 62 Long Beach needy families on Monday.

And every Long Beach fireman and fire-department employe will be riding with him.

Santa's visit climaxes a year-long program sponsored by the Long Beach Firemen's Association to provide toys and food to needy families in this area.

The program, started 12 years ago, is the brainchild of Murray Cohn, the 1962 Long Beach Father of the Year.

Cohn, who is program chairman, said it was obvious that something should be done for the needy children and the suggestion was raised at a firemen's association meeting.

"The idea caught on," he said, "and the first year we raised enough money within the association to care for 23 families. Since then we have provided food and toys for an average of 65 families each year."

This year, to guarantee a certain amount of capital, the more than 400 firemen and civilian employes have donated 25 cents a month each to help pay the expense of buying food. Additional funds are received from the Firemen's Auxiliary and from proceeds of the department's annual July 4 circus and fireworks show.

"During the year," Cohn says, "We receive donations of toys and some canned goods."

Many toys require repairs which are done by off-duty firemen. Cohn says that all items purchased, and donated, are kept at Station 22, 6340 Atherton St., where everything eventually is prepared for delivery.

"It's very heartwarming to see the fellows and the women of the auxiliary pitch in and help on this project," Cohn said. "I think they all have a personal satisfaction knowing they are helping someone less fortunate than themselves."

On Monday, more than 50 off-duty firemen will load the toys and baskets of groceries containing everything for a great Christmas dinner into cars and trucks for delivery.

"We don't expect thanks for our work," Cohn said. "We do it because we want to help where we can. We hope our efforts will give a few more people a very Merry Christmas."

Pre-Holiday Accidents in L.B. Average One Every 36 Minutes

By BILL HUNTER

As the weekend rolled toward Christmas, the preholiday traffic toll in Long Beach rolled upward to an average of one traffic accident every 36 minutes within the city limits.

A 8 p.m. tally turned up these figures:

A total of 14 people were injured in 10 accidents in Long Beach since midnight Friday, and another 36 accidents in the same period caused damage to vehicles, but no injuries. On Friday, there were 14 injury accidents hurting 23 persons.

• • • •

THE TOLL since 1 a.m. Friday: Seventy collisions, causing injuries to 37 persons.

But police pointed out Saturday night that there have been no fatal accidents in the city since the preholiday weekend began—none, in fact, since Dec. 16.

In a freakish accident on the Long Beach Freeway north of Willow Street Saturday afternoon, two women and a man were injured when a driverless car began circling in three northbound lanes—backwards.

• • • •

POLICE SAID Mrs. Patricia Frickey, 37, of 4809 E. Compton Blvd., Compton, pulled to the shoulder of the freeway with car trouble, got out and left the engine running. The auto "jumped" into reverse gear and began running in tight circles through all three lanes.

Mrs. Dora Chatterton, 43, of 4895 Oregon Ave., slowed her car to avoid the circling car, and was hit from behind by a car driven by Albert C. Hoy, 56, of 2792 Southern Ave., South Gate. His wife, Mary, 57, suffered face cuts when her head went through the windshield. Hoy suffered minor injuries.

Before other motorists could stop the still-circling car, it bumped Mrs. Frickey as she stood on the shoulder of the freeway, knocking her to the ground.

• • • •

IN CITIES in the surrounding area, law enforcement officials reported a notable lack of traffic accidents and drunk drivers. Even minor fender scrapes were scarce, they said.

This was in marked contrast to Friday night and early Saturday when four persons died in traffic in San Pedro, Torrance, Redondo Beach and La Habra.

Prison Term for Violator of Probation

A young man on probation following an armed robbery conviction has been sent to state prison after being found guilty of cashing four bad checks.

Frank Andre Reed, 21, of 813 New York St., was convicted of the robbery charge last March 18 and began two years' probation June 22 after spending 60 days in the county jail.

Arrested Nov. 10 on the bed-check charge, Reed Friday was ruled to be in violation of his probation by Superior Court Judge Maurice C. Sparling and sentenced to state prison for a minimum of one year.

Citizens Protest Use of 'Plastic Pipe' for Gas

Ralph P. McKinley, 3324 Los Coyotes Diagonal, and his neighbors Saturday said they were getting up a petition to the city complaining about the "plastic pipes" used for gas lines in their residential area.

For almost three hours Saturday afternoon, the gas line leading to McKinley's house spewed gas into the neighborhood after a fence contractor struck the line with a shovel.

McKinley said it made a noise "like an old-fashioned steam locomotive" and forced his family out of the house. A fire truck and patrol car hurried to the scene, and a city gas crew repaired the line.

South Africa Terrorist Acts Charged

By HENRI JONKER

PAARL, South Africa (AP)—A terrorist organization dedicated to "killing the whites" has established itself in South Africa, according to testimony presented at an inquiry into recent race riots here.

The underground movement calls itself "Poqo" — which means "we stand alone." It operates in secret in the segregated African townships which lie outside South Africa's cities and towns. It is carrying on the work of the militant Pan-Africanist Congress, banned in 1960.

These details about Poqo were related to the Supreme Court justice conducting the inquiry into the violence of Nov. 22 when a band of between 100 and 200 Africans stormed into Paarl. The Africans hacked to death two young whites and attempted to storm the police station. Five Africans were killed by police fire and more than 300 arrested.

• • • •

SOME OF the Africans who testified at the inquiry were brought into a cleared courtroom wearing masks to safeguard them from Poqo revenge. They said Poqo terrorists had killed several Africans in the Paarl location who wouldn't join them or do their bidding. Police said Poqo men who tried to storm the Paarl jail Nov. 22 wanted to liberate comrades arrested after "peaceable Africans" had informed on them.

Poqo's all-male membership has instructions to arm itself with home-made weapons, and their chief plan is to honor African nationalist pledge that South Africa shall be taken over by a Black Government in 1963, the inquiry was told.

• • • •

A SECURITY Police officer testified that Poqo began to show its head in 1961.

Poqo meetings are held under cover of darkness, frequently in the bush, and women are not admitted.

Poqo reportedly resorted to assault and mured to intimidate Africans in the crowded townships to join or contribute funds to the movement.

A police sergeant described cases of Poqo intimidation. A White shopkeeper was murdered. Three mulatto women —obstructing Poqo activities by occupying African men with less serious matters— were dragged from the rooms of their African friends, and hacked to death. Another mulatto woman, the sergeant stated, was for the same reason dragged from a man's room, stabbed 17 times, drenched in kerosene and set alight. She survived but was crippled for life.

• • • •

BALTHAZAR VORSTER, justice minister, declared "White inciters" with communist and liberal views are behind the African attackers.

President Charles R. Swart has called upon all White citizens to fight off enemies who "desire to drive the White man and his culture out of South Africa."

The possibility of tightening regulation of nursing homes will also be considered.

Italy Bans Marriage as Firing Cause

ROME (AP) — The Italian Parliament has forbidden employers to fire workers because they marry. Many Italian firms have made it a practice to hire only single women. The new law, voids all labor contract clauses providing for marriage discharges.

Foreign Car Love Cools, but Continues

EDITOR'S NOTE—The shake-out period for imported cars, which followed the introduction of compact American makes, apparently is over. Sales will run around 350,000 cars this year with prospects good for 1963.

By BEN PHLEGAR

DETROIT (AP)—The American motorists' romance with foreign cars isn't as hot and heavy as it once was, but it is far from over.

Despite the vast array of domestic offerings on the market, enough buyers want something different that about one of every 20 cars sold in the United States this year was imported.

Admittedly, this is quite a comedown from the peak import year of 1959 when the ratio of foreign to domestic sales was better than 1 to 10. Total volume will run between 340,000 and 350,000 this year, against 614,131 then.

• • • •

BUT FOR THE imports which survived the shake-out, five per cent of an annual seven million car market looks sufficiently inviting and challenging to stay in the race.

Domestic manufacturers agree five per cent is worth fighting for. In the pre-compact days of the mid-1950s, the Americans kept saying they would seriously consider smaller cars only if the imports ever reached five per cent of the total sales.

It also is no secret that many of the Detroit executives who were saying this honestly doubted such a situation would occur. Smaller cars were offered by American Motors and Studebaker as a matter of economic necessity. But General Motors, Chrysler and to a much lesser extent Ford introduced compacts with considerable reluctance.

The foreigners had forced their hand and they didn't like it but the public did. Buyers welcomed the smaller cars with open pocketbooks and the rush was on.

• • • •

THE IMPORTERS who had failed to establish a firm base here were trampled in the compact stampede, then deserted. Their snob appeal vanished. Customers no longer were willing to put up with slow service and even slower replacement of parts.

The retrenchment period was painful to many. Cars rusted at the docks. Where possible, shipments were turned back intact. Dealers quit in droves and distribution staffs were in the constant turmoil of reorganization.

The worst apparently is over. Automotive news, a respected trade paper, surveyed importers early this month and found them solidly optimistic about the coming year —no great surge, but no more lost ground.

• • • •

THE MAKES which remain universally emphasize the need for high quality dealers providing decent service and readily available parts.

Most American companies concede the imports caught on in this country because they found a price area not covered by domestic makes—under $2,000. And it was into this economy range that the Big Three aimed their original small cars.

The domestic trend in the last year and a half, however, has been away from the drab utility models which commended the lowest prices into more luxury and bigger engines which bested the stickers well above $2,000.

• • • •

AUTOMOTIVE News found 57 of the 206 imported models now on sale in this country are priced under $2,000 while only nine American models are that low—four Rambler Americans, two Valiants, and one each from Dodge Dart, Corvair and Falcon.

Specialized areas, such as sports cars, have proved profitable for importers, especially the British. Seventy-two of the imports now sold here are sports cars. Triumph, Austin-Healy and MG, all sports models, stand third, sixth and eighth in total import sales through the first 10 months.

Pope Optimistic for Peace, Unity

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope John called for prayer and dedication on behalf of peace and Christian unity in a Christmas message to the world Saturday night.

It was perhaps the most dramatic of the five Christmas messages he has now delivered as pontiff of the Roman Catholic Church. It was more than an appeal. Pope John said attainment of peace and Christian unity is a duty.

His other Christmas messages have emphasized world peace too. But this year's had a strong tone of optimism. He spoke of "happy developments . . . as the beginning of a new chapter in the history of the modern world."

• • • •

HE SAID there were clear signs of deep understanding in international affairs to show his Cuban crisis peace appeal of Oct. 25 was "not wasted on the air."

This Christmas, he added, is particularly joyous because of the new contacts between Catholics and non-Catholics as a result of the Vatican Ecumenical Council.

The 81-year-old pope read his 20-minute speech in a strong voice. His step was firm as he walked to his library desk. Both voice and manner showed his come-back from a stomach disorder and anemia that made him seriously ill 3½ weeks ago.

• • • •

HE LOOKED a bit thinner and there were shadows under his eyes. But he smiled as he adjusted his spectacles, then read his message in Italian.

The Vatican Radio and Italian television, which recorded the speech Friday, broadcast the message. Many national radio networks also carried the message. The Vatican Radio is broadcasting it around the world in many languages.

The Pope said it was his wish that this "be a Christmas of prayer and reflection" in the interest of Christian unity and "social and international relations."

"Of all the earth's treasures," he said, "the most precious and most noteworthy is that of peace." He added that peace is the most important of all blessings for individuals, families and nations.

"Let peace then be our objective at all times," the Pope said. "Let us aim at creating peace around us. . . . Let us shield it from all that could harm it."

Funeral Set for Veteran of 3 Wars

Last rites on Monday were set for Lt. Col. Harold M. Warne, retired veteran of both World Wars and the Korean conflict.

He belonged to Al Malaikah Temple, Royal Arch No. 54, Knights Templar No. 26, Alliance Consistory, Dalhart Council No. 190, R.&S.M., and Camp Knox Lodge No. 919, F.&A.M., in Radcliffe, Ky.

Surviving are his wife, Elizabeth B.; son, William D.; sisters, Mrs. Irma Lemieux and Mrs. Margaret Carl, and three grandchildren.

The Monday service will be held at 10 a.m. in Dilday Family Funeral Directors Chapel, with interment following at Forest Lawn-Memorial Park, Cypress.

N.Y. Paper Strike Bargaining Recessed

NEW YORK (UPI)—Negotiations aimed at settling New York City's 15-day-old newspaper strike were adjourned Saturday until after Christmas—a move that will make this the longest such shutdown in the city's history.

Federal mediators, after meeting with representatives of the New York Publishers Association and the International Typographical Union, scheduled the next negotiating session for 2 p.m. Wednesday.

Hollywood's Gifts Flown to Kentucky

HAZARD, Ky. (AP)—A U.S. Air Force plane Saturday brought in 8,500 pounds of toys, food and clothing — a gift from the citizens of Hollywood, Calif.—to help brighten the Christmas of needy families in eastern Kentucky.

Four National Guard trucks met the C119 Flying Boxcar at the London airport and hauled the gifts to Hazard, from where they will be distributed among seven counties affected by unemployment in the coal mines.

Meanwhile, money, food and clothing continued to pour in from other parts of the nation. A committee of Hazard citizens, which is receiving the contributions, announced that cash donations now approximated $14,000.

Another committee, composed of public officials, civic leaders and coal-mine pickets, is determining the neediest families and arranging for distribution of the gifts in the seven counties.

IN THE BUSINESS WEEK

Pre-Christmas Business Bolsters 1963 Outlook

By JACK LEFLER
AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Favorable business signs added glitter to the pre-Christmas week.

They weren't sparkling enough to indicate that 1962 is going to end on anything near a boom note but they did bolster feelings that moderate improvement will carry into 1963.

Statistics which showed a gain or a steady tone covered the gamut of retail sales, automobile sales, the gross national product, durable goods orders, housing starts and industrial production.

• • • •

AND IT was a week in which keen attention was focused on labor-management with newspaper strikes hanging on in New York City and Cleveland, a longshoremen's strike threatened on the East and Gulf Coasts, and Kaiser Steel Corp. and the Steelworkers Union signing a unique agreement intended to ease the impact of automation.

After a rather dreary start because of weather too warm and then weather too stormy, Christmas buying pepped up in the closing stretch. The National Retail Merchants Association reported that storekeepers were encouraged in their hopes that record 1961 volume would be exceeded by a narrow margin.

Automobile sales for the first 10 days of December hit a record for the period. Dealers delivered 171,500 domestic passenger cars against 148,600 a year earlier.

• • • •

SECRETARY OF Commerce Luther H. Hodges reported the gross national product — total of all goods and services—is expected to exceed in the current quarter an annual rate of $560 billion. This would bring the year's total to $554 billion, up seven per cent over 1961.

But he said the pace is not satisfactory and a tax reduction is needed for stimulation of business over the long range.

Manufacturers' new orders for durable goods inched up to a new record but failed to come anywhere near the good gain of three per cent registered in October.

• • • •

HOUSING STARTS in November remained about steady with the October rate. The Census Bureau said private starts for the year are expected to be near 1,425,000 units, a gain of nine per cent over last year.

Production of the country's factories, mines and utilities in November held at a record level for the fourth consecutive month.

A survey of 1,000 industrial buyers indicated expectations that business will be slightly better in 1963 than in 1962 but that the rate of growth will not match this year.

• • • •

THERE WERE no signs of progress toward settling the New York City newspaper strike, which began Dec. 8. With the city's nine major dailies closed, business was feeling the absence of advertising columns. Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz said the strike could last six or eight weeks or more.

Wirtz also stepped in to attempt to head off a strike of 60,000 longshoremen which could begin at midnight today. That is the expiration time of an 80-day cooling off period which held off a strike order earlier.

Keen interest of both management and labor was centered on the agreement between Kaiser Steel and the Steelworkers Union covering 7,000 workers at the company's Fontana, Calif., plant.

The agreement was intended to reward workers along with management for production success; guarantees employes against losing jobs to automation; eliminate the main cause of strikes.

Possibly it could become a pattern for negotiations on a broad scale of labor-management relationships.

AUTOMOBILE production last week totaled an estimated 165,000 passenger cars, compared with 176,244 the previous week—highest since January 1960—and 149,285 a year ago. The cutback resulted mainly from a sharp reduction in Saturday overtime due to the approach of Christmas.

Output for this year was estimated by the Automobile Manufacturers Association at 6.9 million passenger cars and 1.2 million trucks and buses with a factory wholesale value of $15.3 billion. Last year the output was 5,522,019 cars and 1,130,919 trucks and buses.

ANOTHER DECLINE in steel production was registered the week of Dec. 13 when output amounted to 1,832,000 tons, off 1.4 per cent from the previous week. Industry executives attributed the setback in part to heavy snows in the east and midwest and the approaching holidays.

For the first 50 weeks of this year, production totaled 94,555,000 tons, ahead of the comparable period of 1961 by 1.3 per cent.

Pan American World Airways and Trans World Airlines proposed to merge, creating the biggest domestic airline with 80,000 system miles.

IN AN unexpected development, Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co., third largest U.S. producer of heavy electrical generating units, announced its withdrawal from the steam turbine generator business. It said prices broke in 1958 when foreign producers entered the U.S. market with lower prices.

BRIEFLY around the business scene: Twelve New England utilities will build an $80 million atomic power plant at Haddam Neck, Conn. Dividends totaling $412 million were paid in November by corporations issuing public reports—up $11 million from a year earlier. . . . Santa Fe Railroad ordered 24 high-level chair cars at a cost of $8 million.

Shrimp Come Early in East

PORTLAND, Maine (UPI)—Shrimp are invading Maine coastal waters almost two months ahead of schedule.

Fishing boats unloaded about 1,600 pounds of shrimp earlier this week in Portland. Similar catches are reported elsewhere along the coast, officials said.

CHRISTMAS TREE LAND, U.S.A.

Bunyan Never Dreamed of This Kind of Logging Bonanza

By ELDON BARRETT

SHELTON, Wash. (UPI)—When Paul Bunyan hitched up Babe, his big blue ox, and scooped out Puget Sound to build the Olympic Mountains, he didn't leave much room for growing potatoes.

In fact, about the only money crop that flourishes on the Olympic Peninsula is trees. Of course that was all right with Big Paul because logging was his game. But the mythical lumberjack probably would dull the teeth of his misery whip and hang up his corks if he saw the size of the trees they're hauling out of this neck of the woods by the carload this season of the year.

Hardly a one is more than eight feet tall and those with the most branches are the most valuable. And by the 25th of December they will be wearing more gewgaws and trappings than a logger's queen in a skidroad honky-tonk.

• • • •

ALTHOUGH IT doesn't compare with the saw timber operations in the northwest, the Christmas tree business in the Shelton area is big business. By the time Santa Claus starts loading up his sleigh, nearly 2 million yule trees will have been shipped out Mason, Thurston and Kitsap Counties in the foothills of the southern Olympics. And for these trees, $10 million will have changed hands.

About 100,000 acres are under cultivation for yule tree growing in the tri-county area, which likes to call itself "Christmas Tree Land, U.S.A." Eight of the 15 major suppliers in western Washington operate in the three counties and numerous conventional farmers and "stump ranchers" pick up side money raising trees for these suppliers.

Outside of local retail markets, most of the trees shipped out of this area go to California, Arizona, Nevada and Hawaii.

• • • •

DOUGLAS FIR makes up the bulk of the seasonal cut, but some companies have introduced the more exotic Scotch Pine and Noble and White Fir which bring higher prices.

Like all good farmers, the tree grower constantly searches for new methods to better his crop. Fertilizer is the latest discovery. Until about three years ago, the best trees seemed to come from the poorest land because they grew more slowly there and the sets of branches, called "whorls," were most uniform and not scraggly. But someone tried fertilizing and now almost every grower is using it.

Some companies use helicopters to scatter seed and almost all have nurseries growing seedlings to supplement natural regeneration. It takes from six to 14 years to produce a Christmas tree, and the tree farmers can't take a chance on old Mother Nature.

• • • •

BEARS AND mountain beaver, which feed on the bark of young trees, are a hazard. The Mason County Sheriff's office has a Christmas tree posse patrolling tree farms to keep off the poachers at this time of year.

Most of the farms are situated on land where once stood giant saw trees—the kind Paul Bunyan used for toothpicks. It was through these stands that the timber barons sliced their monstrous swaths, leaving only stumps, snags and slash. Fire usually took over to complete the carnage.

But even deep wounds heal. And today, these once-scarred acres again are dotted forest green.

This year about 30 million trees will be trimmed in the United States alone. And that makes for good business.

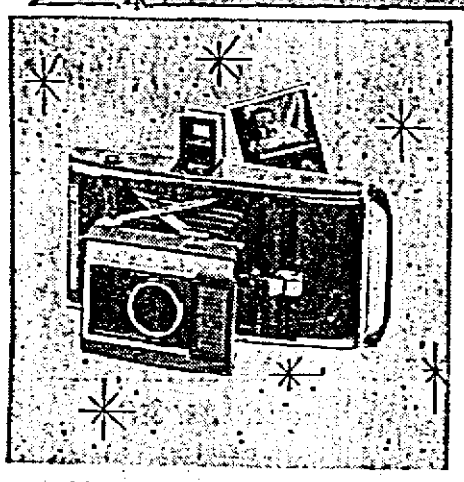

As one grower put it in explaining why he grows Christmas trees:

"I wanted to get into business and I figured as long as people produce children, we'd be able to produce Christmas trees."

8,486 SEE ROUT

Blades Rip Totems 6-1

By JEROME HALL

What started on a riotous note ended calmly, almost timidly for ice hockey, when the L.A. Blades blitzed the Seattle Totems 6-1 Saturday night.

A festive crowd of 8,486 in the L.A. Sports Arena watched the Blades make a skate-away of it with three goals in the final period.

It was the fifth consecutive defeat for the Totems, who came to town leading the WHL's Northern Division and left trailing Vancouver. The Blades are the No. 2 team in the Southern Division.

Saturday night's affair started as the previous contest in the series ended—ungentlemanly. There were two fist fights in the first period. The opening face-off squirted into the air, over the sideboards and struck Seattle coach Keith Allen. He wasn't injured.

But there was no unseemly conduct after the first intermission.

• • • •

THE NIGHT'S first fist fight broke out three minutes before the end of the first period when Blades' forward Ed Stankiewicz tangled with goalie Al Millar. They doffed their gloves to go at it barefisted, but the Totems' goalie wouldn't take off his wire mask so the officials stopped it. Both drew two-minute penalties.

Three minutes later Stankiewicz got into a rhubarb with Totems' wingman George Konik, who in the previous contest in this series cracked a Blades' player over the head. Konik had been in Saturday night's game only 30 seconds when he got into the brawl. Both combatants were docked five minutes in the penalty box.

Leo LaBine got the Blades' first goal 6:52 into the second period on an assist from Stan Maxwell and O'Ree.

• • • •

THE BLADES broke the game open midway through the second period with two goals in the space of 80 seconds. The first of the pair was registered on a power smash by Lloyd Haddon from 25 feet out.

The second was by Hoagy Carmichael at the 14:15 mark in the period and between the two scores the Blades gave the Totems' goalie a fearful going-over. The rush toward the Totems' goalie was climaxed by Carmichael when, on his scoring surge, he crashed into the iron net support and knocked it from its mooring.

Adolph Tambelline put Seattle on the scoreboard at 18:17 of the second period.

There were no penalties called in the second period.

Two goals by Marc Boileau and one by Ed Diachuk in the final period made it a rout. Boileau, coach Red Bowness and goalie Jack McCartan were named the game's stars.

Gulls Battle on TV Today

The Long Beach Gulls go before the television cameras for the third time today when they battle the Los Angeles Canadians in a California Hockey League match at the Culver City Rink.

KTLA, channel 5, will carry the telecast beginning at 2:30.

Long Beach is the only unbeaten team in the CHL with a 3-0-3 record, but still the Gulls are fighting to regain first place. Burbank, with a 4-1-2 mark has 10 points to nine for Long Beach.

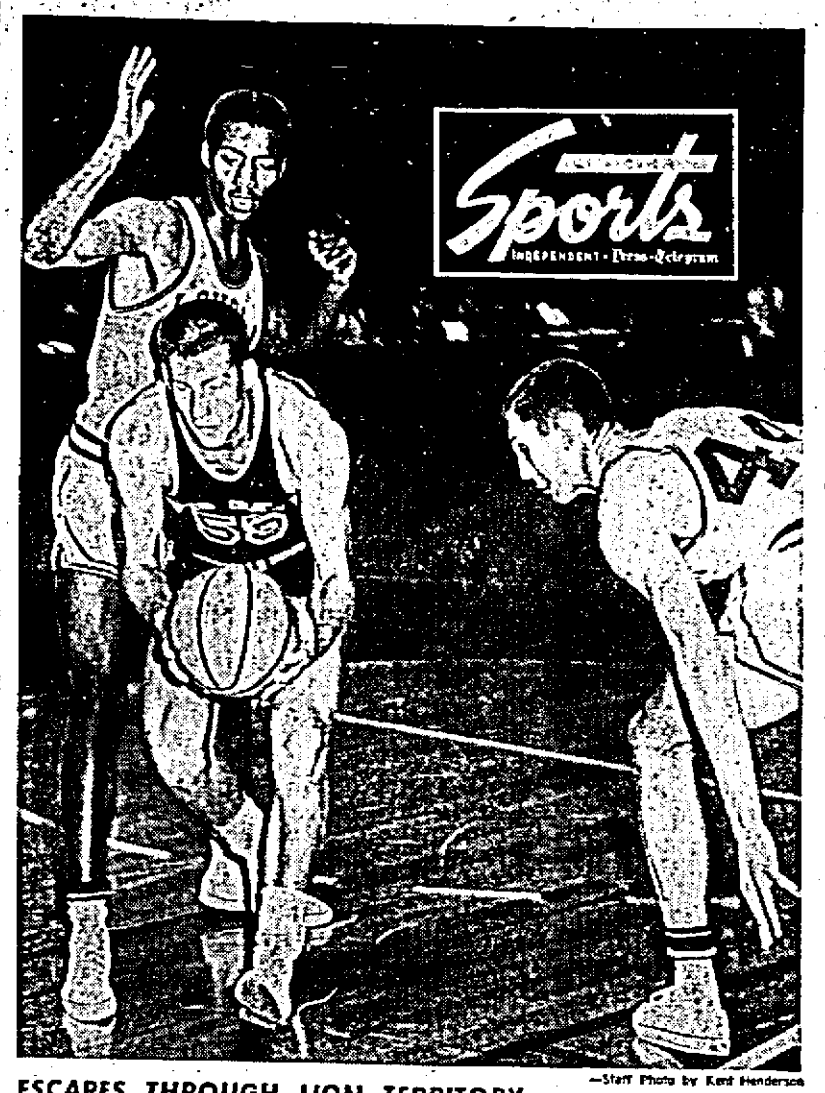

• • • •

LOS ANGELES, led by center Buddy McDonald, is currently in last place with only one victory. This will mark the Canadians first meeting with Long Beach.

Center Don Makow surged ahead in Gulls' scoring last week by adding four points to run his total to 14. He and Ernie Rucks lead Long Beach in goals scored with seven.

Left wing Vern Wildeman ranks second in scoring with 12 points, followed by Joe Morneau and Rucks with 10 each.

State's Late Rally Stuns Lions, 68-61

By AL LARSON

Oklahoma State scored a stunning 61-59 victory over Drake University to win the first Long Beach Invitational basketball festival Saturday before 1,192 onlookers at the L.B. Arena.

Long Beach rallied the second half to tumble Loyola, 68-61, in the consolation finals.

Coach Hank Iba's lads from Stillwater, who had beaten Drake in 30 of 35 previous meetings over the years, displayed awesome outside shooting in the first half as they stormed to a 37-24 lead.

But the second half was a different story as the Cowboys grimly held on at the finish to thwart Drake's comeback.

The Cowboys sank 14 of 28 field shots and 9 of 12 foul attempts to gain their commanding halftime advantage.

• • • •

DRAKE, which blazed at a remarkable 68 percent Friday night in routing Loyola, 92-69, couldn't find the bucket the first 20 minutes and wound up sinking only 11 of 30 from the floor and 4 of 9 charity throws.

Oklahoma State shot from a 20-17 deficit into a resounding 35-20 advantage when it outscored Drake 18-0 during a wild six-minute spree late in the first half.

Drake finally cut into the Cowboys' lead midway in the final half behind the hot hands of guard Billy Hahn and forward McCoy McLemore.

The Bulldogs shifted from a man-to-man defense to a zone press the final 4½ minutes and this nearly turned the tide.

• • • •

OKLAHOMA still enjoyed an eight-point lead, 59-51, with 1:59 to go. The Cowboys' lead dwindled to six with one minute left.

McLemore converted two foul attempts and now it was only 61-57 for Oklahoma State. When Ray Quinn scored with seven seconds remaining it looked like the sophomore-studded Oklahoma club might blow its championship, but they managed to hang onto the ball the rest of the way.

Officials Mel Ross and Jim Tunney had their hands full as both coaches carried on a verbal barrage throughout the contest. Drake was socked with three technical fouls.

• • • •

THE INABILITY to hit at the foul line was the biggest thorn for coach Maurice Johns' club to absorb. Drake sank only 13 of 24 attempts for a cold 54 percent effort. The Cowboys cashed in 19 of 25.

Oklahoma's Larry Hawk was the game's leading point-maker with 18. Drake's top scorer was Hahn with 15.

Trailing by nine points at intermission, the 49ers erupted with a 43-point barrage to lock up their second victory in nine starts this season.

Stan Andersen poured in 22 points to spark the 49ers, who broke slowly, but who came to life the second half.

Al Windfeldt's short jumper with 7:08 left in the game put Long Beach ahead for good. The 49ers then outscored Loyola, 10-2, as they pulled ahead 52-44, and when the Lions lost rebounding star Detroit Flanagan, they were never a serious threat again.

• • • •

DICK Schiendler was Loyola's leading scorer for the second night with 14 points. Lyn Hodge also popped in 14 and did a good job on the boards for the winners before fouling out with 7:21 remaining. Four players were whistled out as a total of 46 fouls were detected.

Long Beach jumped off to a 2-0 lead when Andersen

AGGIE SOPH CAPTURES MVP AWARD

Oklahoma State's sophomore flash James King was selected as the most valuable player following his team's harrowing 61-59 win in the finals of the Long Beach Invitational basketball tourney Saturday night.

King, a 6-5½ forward who scored 13 points in the title game (12 in the first half) headed a six-man team which included teammates Gene Johnson and Larry Hawk.

Drake landed two players, center Ray Quinn and guard Billy Foster. Long Beach's Stan Andersen was the other choice.

N.H.L. HEADED WEST . . . TO L.B.?

By JEROME HALL

The National Hockey League—the major league—is headed West and Long Beach probably will become part of it.

That appears to be the final result of franchise manipulations that include, as the Independent, Press-Telegram disclosed in recent days, the switch of a Western Hockey League franchise to this city next year.

In five to seven years the National League will incorporate the WHL into its fold, making the WHL the western division of the major league and making the National Hockey League truly national for the first time.

George A. Leader, president of the Western League, which currently encompasses the L.A. Blades, San Francisco, Portland, Spokane, Seattle, Vancouver, Edmonton and Calgary, has been campaigning the NHL owners toward this goal and has made much progress.

But before the WHL can gain major league ranking, it must drop at least one and probably more light-drawing franchises. First to go will be Spokane, which will be transferred to Long Beach next season, it is believed.

L.A. Blades' general manager Jack Geyer told the I. P-T that the Blades "will not voice protest" to a team in Long Beach, which is within the territory control of owner Dan Reeves. The Blades blocked the entry of Long Beach several months ago. Other league owners want Long Beach in.

When the National League emerges the Western League (and hockey men consider the right word to be "when," not if) it is problematical that both Los Angeles and Long Beach would hold franchises, though entirely possible.

At the time of the WHL inclusion into the major league, Long Beach will have had several years of successful operation in the WHL, according to current league opinion, so it is considered likely that Los Angeles and Long Beach would share one major league franchise. Home games would be divided between the L.A. Sports Arena and the Long Beach Arena.

Here are the three steps WHL president Leader believes will lead to nation-wide major league hockey:

1. End the draft, which siphons off top talent of the WHL. (the first step already has been accomplished. The draft ends next year.)

2. All WHL teams must operate extensive farm systems to develop major-caliber talent. (The Blades already operate an amateur league in Saskatoon, Canada, which has 2,200 young players. The California league, of which the Long Beach Gulls are members now, probably would provide farm teams in WHL expansion plans.)

3. Convince the National League that it would be to its advantage to become a truly national league. (This would be by dangling big-money television opportunities. But major league hockey has to spread out of its small confines to do this.)

The third point is the key. Television money is the wedge. Most NHL teams are playing to capacity or near-capacity audiences, so they see no reason to incur travel expense to the West Coast unless income is increased. Toronto and Montreal have not had an unsold seat in nearly 20 years. The Boston Bruins, a losing team, outdraw the basketball champion Boston Celtics.

When the L.A. Blades vetoed Long Beach, owner Reeves asked for time to assure financial stability of his franchise. That stability seems assured now. The Blades have doubled their average attendance over a similar period last season and consistently outdraw the NBA-leading L.A. Lakers.

"We think we've just scratched the surface," said Blades boss Geyer.

To say that ice hockey is the fastest-growing spectator sport in Southern California would be as accurate as saying it is the fastest-played sport.

Barron Hilton Signs Rufus Guthrie to Chargers Contract

RAMS LOSE NO. 1 CHOICE GUTHRIE TO SAN DIEGO PALS

By JERRY WYNN

Yes, Crazylegs, there is a Santa Claus.

His name is Barron Hilton and he owns the San Diego Chargers as a sideline to sharing the wealth of the world's foremost hotel chain.

As Charger chief (and Santa Claus) he had a hearty "ho, ho, ho" on the Rams Saturday.

For he gave a Christmas present to a young man by the name of Rufus Guthrie Saturday that must have been one of the most generous ever bestowed on a graduating senior from college.

Guthrie, incidentally, is a football player and a good one. He is a 6-1, 231-pound guard and linebacker from Georgia Tech who was drafted by the Chargers as their No. 2 pick, and by the Rams, as their second No. 1 round choice.

But it was Hilton and the Chargers who plucked the plum away from the Rams and signed him to a San Diego contract after the Bluebonnet Bowl game between Missouri and Georgia Tech at Houston, Texas Saturday.

No terms were disclosed, but, according to a Ram official, Guthrie must have dollar signs in his eyes today.

"We offered him a contract as good as the one we gave Merlin Olsen last year," said the official. "They must have wanted

Jet Deck Sets Mark as Alamitos Closes

By ERNIE MASON

Already the richest 2-year-old in quarter horse history, J. B. Chambers' Jet Deck Saturday became the fastest at 400 yards when he won the $15,000 Kindergarten Stakes as Los Alamitos race course closed its season before 10,294 fans.

In the companion feature, Western Stables' Alamitos Bar won the $15,000 Autumn Championship when he first collared the flying mare No Butt and then beat back her closing drive in the 440-yard classic.

Jet Deck, who won the $207,750 Los Alamitos Futurity last week, zipped the 400 yards in 19.9 seconds to break the old world record for 2-year-olds of 20.1 set in September, 1961, by Pokey Bar.

• • • •

THE TIME also equalled the world record for horses of any age, set here in the 1961 spring meeting by Breeze Bar.

The $8,250 winner's share of the purse upped the earnings by the bay son of Moon Deck to $138,342. The stable earned $124,220 in this 30-day meeting—$116,115 of it by Jet Deck.

The victory was also his seventh straight, making him the winningest as well as the richest 2-year-old. It was also his fifth of the meeting, tieing another track record.

The 2-5 public choice paid $2.80, $2.60 and $2.20.

• • • •

BELSBY and Schumacher's Top Moon was second, a length and a half in arrears, and returned $5.60 and $3.60. Western Stables' Tiny Charger was third for $3.40.

In the Autumn Championship, Alamitos Bar was the public choice and paid $4.20, $3.00 and $2.80. Mickle's Valley View Ranch's No Butt paid $9.40 and $7.60 and C. J. Burnum's Fly Straw returned $7.80.

Alamitos Bar, away from the track for a month, broke behind No Butt. The 7-year-old mare zipped to the front and held her lead for about 350 yards. Then Alamitos Bar overtook her and got a head in front.

No Butt rallied for another assault but Alamitos Bar kept his nose barely in front.

• • • •

TOTAL Los Alamitos attendance was 203,713 for a daily average of 6,790 which was up 11.1 per cent over last year and also topped the previous high, the fall of 1960 by 1.8 per cent.

The pari-mutuel handle was $16,012,162 for a daily average of $533,739 and this was up 20.1 per cent over last year and also topped the previous high in the fall of 1960 by 15.8 per cent.

It was the highest daily average handle in the history of the track.

CHILLED BADGERS ARRIVE

Wisconsin's Rose Bowl football team outran a snowstorm and bucked 100-knot headwinds but arrived in Southern California Saturday night for its engagement New Year's Day with USC.

The Badgers landed at Lockheed Air Terminal in Burbank after a seven-hour flight from Madison, Wis., which almost never got started.

The takeoff was delayed nearly three hours and the arrival was three hours late with the chartered plane landing shortly before 6 p.m. in the dark.

But Pasadena's Tournament of Roses Association gave the Wisconsin team the traditional welcome for the Eastern representative in the Rose Bowl.

The Wisconsin team left Madison in 27-degree weather and just barely got into the air before a snowstorm engulfed the city. But coach Milt Bruhn said the trip was a smooth one despite the headwinds once they got under way.

L.A. Cage Classic Wide-Open

By JEROME HALL

Stanford is the team to beat in the L.A. Basketball Classic this week, but for the first time this can be considered a wide-open tournament.

There are no Ohio States or West Virginias in the field this year. There are no big-name teams at all, unless you hail from Missouri Valley territory and have followed St. Louis University.

This might be the chance for one of the two Southland universities—USC or UCLA.

And it might be the year for little Colorado State University, which is supposed to be a powerhouse. Then, too, there's the threat from the Washington Huskies, who have beaten Colorado State U. already this season.

The Big Ten will be represented by Northwestern. It's not without a chance. Neither is Utah State.

That's the full field for the four-day Classic which begins Wednesday at the L.A. Sports Arena.

Stanford, unbeaten after six games going into Saturday night's game with Texas, was the selection of 12 of 15 sports scribes to come out on top. UCLA was the solid second choice, receiving three first place votes and tabbed No. 2 on seven other ballots.

"The fact that six of the eight teams were mentioned by the experts polled indicates that this is the most evenly balanced and wide open Classic in its four-year history," Wilbur Johns, tournament chairman, said.

Only Washington and Northwestern didn't receive any pre-tourney backing but they can't be completely thrown out of contention.

Wednesday's opening pairings pit four of the favorites against each other in crucial contests. Colorado State-USC at 1:30 p.m. and Utah State-UCLA at 7 p.m. both rate as toss-up games. Rounding out the first round are St. Louis-Washington at 3:30 p.m. and Northwestern-Stanford at 9 p.m.

Sports Merry-Go-Round

By HANK HOLLINGWORTH
Executive Sports Editor

What Is Basketball's Future Here?

The disappointing crowds at the Long Beach Invitational Tournament and at Chiefs' games causes one to wonder about the future of upper echelon basketball in this city.

We've written often enough on the professional Chiefs' problems, but at the moment we're concerned about the high-class college tourney which concluded Saturday night. Unlike the Chiefs, the Long Beach Invitational had plenty of time for preparation.

HANK HOLLINGWORTH

Certainly no two people ever worked longer and harder on any one sports project in this area than Bob Pestolesi and Dick Perry of Long Beach State College. Their groundwork began a year ago and they spent thousands of hours' time in planning every detail.

Artistically, Pestolesi and Perry produced an overwhelming success. The financial aspect is another matter.

Christmas shopping, Yule parties and the fog scare were reasons advanced for the lack of attendance during the past two nights. Probably all are valid enough, yet would the crowds have been any larger if the tournament was held in October or February?

Two gentlemen who advised Long Beach officials not to be disappointed over any aspect of their first tournament were visiting coaches Hank Iba of Oklahoma State and Maurice John of Drake, two of the finest people in sports this writer has met.

The night before the tourney began, Iba declared:

"It takes three years to build a successful tournament. Nobody ever produces a successful tournament like this in one year's time. People have to be educated to such a thing, especially in an area like the West Coast where basketball is only now starting to enjoy the popularity of sports like football and baseball. Look ahead to three years of building . . . and don't worry about what happens now."

JOHN'S SENTIMENTS were the same. Maurice also bestowed bouquets to Long Beach State College and the Century Club for the manner in which the tourney was handled.

"Our treatment in Long Beach was exceptional," said John. "Everywhere we went, somebody was there to help us. It has been a pleasure for Drake University to play in Long Beach."

The visiting coaches expressed pleasure also at the Century Club idea of assigning one man to be responsible for the needs of each team while in Long Beach. The men who shared the headaches were Steve Kral (Drake), Wayne Bryson (Oklahoma State) and George Flowers (Loyola). Long Beach State had to go it alone!

TOURNAMENT WRAPUPS:

. . . A particular disappointment of the tourney was the response of Long Beach State College students themselves. A halfway decent reaction from the "Mausoleum" student body would have put over the tournament attendance-wise. Once again, the "Mausoleum" inhabitants lived up to their tag . . . and FAILED!

. . . The Cowboys' Iba, the world's No. 1 exponent of slowed-down basketball, was asked if he'd ever resort to the fast break even with a team averaging 6-10 and able to sprint the century in 10 flat. "Sir," replied Iba, "the fast break and high scores do not constitute the game of basketball for me. I take pride in teaching defense and play-making. THAT'S basketball!" (Take one look at Hank's record and you have no room for argument.)

. . . Both Iba and John disagreed upon their choice of the best basketball player in the nation today. If they had to select one man to form the nucleus of their clubs, Iba would grab the Celtics' Bill Russell and John the Royals' Oscar Robertson.

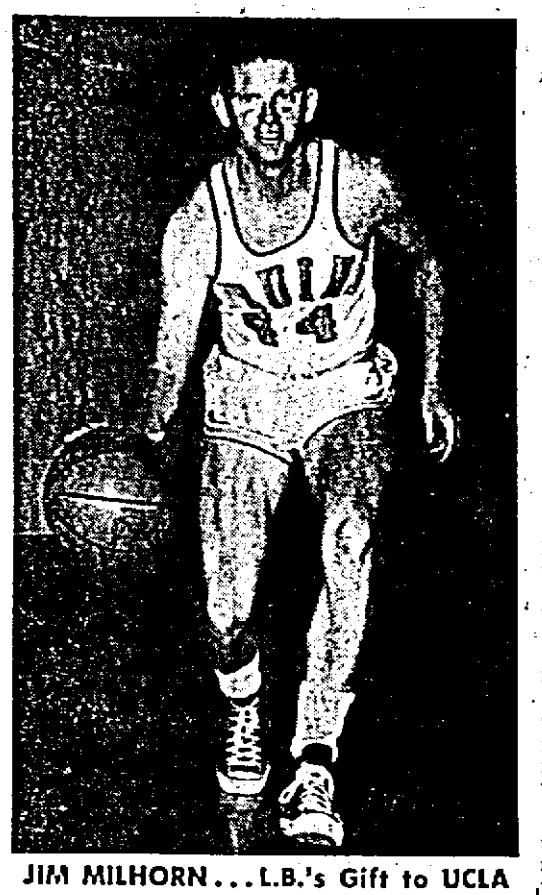

. . . What about my man, Elgin Baylor, I inquired? "Oh, he'd be on our first team," they both echoed in reply, but neither left any doubts that Russell and Robertson came first in their minds.

GRABBING THE BRASS RINGS:

. . . Making fools of the opposition in pro basketball apparently isn't the way to (1) either make friends or (2) win succeeding games. The Lakers learned this lesson Friday night when the irate Hawks snapped their winning streak after Hot Rod Hundley had acted like a Harlem Globetrotter against St. Louis one game earlier. The ABL's Rens also learned the same lesson this season when Pittsburgh's Connie Hawkins infuriated Long Beach's Bill Spivey in the same manner. When the Rens came to Long Beach, Hawkins was spilled so hard that he missed the next half-dozen Pittsburgh games . . . and the Rens haven't found the victory column yet.

. . . Thanks to the Carmelite Nuns on E. Ocean Blvd. for their kind Christmas note. The promised prayers, sorely needed, should put this column one-up on the ulcerated Bob Wells going into the new year!

JIM MILHORN . . . L.B.'s Gift to UCLA

Milhorn's Hustle Pays Dividends

After two seasons as a reserve, Long Beach's diminutive James Erlin Milhorn appears to be coming into his own as a regular starting guard for UCLA's basketball Bruins.

Milhorn scored a high of 12 points in the Bruins 77-63 win over Wisconsin Saturday and thereby earned a starting berth for UCLA's opening game of the L.A. Classic this week.

Little Jim, who stands 5-9 and weighs 155, earned the opening call several weeks ago and has since done a solid job in teaming with the Bruins' flashy Walt Hazzard in the opening minutes of play.

Milhorn, until Saturday, had been giving way to sophs Gail Goodrich and Fred Goss after that, but coach John Wooden indicated he'll keep Milhorn in as long as he continues to hit from the outside.

* * * *

WOODEN labeled the former Jordan and Long Beach City College star "an excellent outside shooter" who needs only more playing time to build up his confidence.

The veteran Bruin coach lauded Milhorn for making up with intelligence and hustle what he lacked from being so small.

Milhorn was only a last-quarter replacement the past two seasons.

He is a physical education major who plans a coaching career following graduation.

Wisconsin Drubbed by Bruins

MADISON, Wis. (Special)—UCLA received some hot outside shooting from guards Jim Milhorn and Gail Goodrich to hand Wisconsin one of its worst defeats of the year, 77-63, here Saturday.

It was the fifth win in a row for UCLA and boosted the Bruins' record to 7-2. Wisconsin's log is 4-3.

UCLA had five players hit in double figures, but it was Milhorn and Goodrich who prevented Wisconsin's zone defense from being effective by shooting over it with accuracy.

* * * *

MILHORN hit six field goals for 12 points and Goodrich also had six fielders plus a free throw for 13 points. Fred Slaughter and Keith Erickson also had 13 and Walt Hazzard 11.

UCLA, after trailing 6-0, built up a 34-26 lead at halftime and had only one anxious moment after that midway in the final half when the Badgers pulled to within five points.

The Bruins hit 41 percent of their shots to 40 for Wisconsin.

CHICAGO (AP) — Fourth-ranked Loyola of Chicago failed to reach 100 points for the first time this season but had more than enough to topple Seattle from the ranks of the unbeaten 93-83 at the Chicago Stadium Saturday night.

Loyola, in winning its seventh consecutive game, swept into a commanding 66-44 lead early in the second half.

Wisconsin's Mike O'Melia appears to be punching UCLA's Walt Hazzard in the jaw, but he's merely making unsuccessful attempt to block jump shot. Bruins scored 77-63 victory.

Vikes Capture Consolation Title

MT. VIEW — Long Beach City College overcame an early deficit to defeat Santa Ana, 78-73, and capture the consolation title of the North-South Classic here Saturday night.

City College of San Francisco, defending state champion, captured the tournament by downing College of San Mateo 75-62.

The Vikings trailed by 14 points after 10 minutes, jumped into a 46-40 halftime advantage and maintained that margin throughout the second half. The victory avenged a 10-point defeat at the hands of Santa Ana earlier this season.

Football star Frank Roy scored 26 points to pace the Vikings' attack. John Rambo contributed 22 points.

In the battle for third place, Foothill whipped Bakersfield 50-40 and San Jose nipped Cerritos, 58-57, for seventh place.

CHIEFS GET GIFT, OFF CHRISTMAS DAY

Due to the Christmas holiday transportation problem and the dense fog that has plagued the San Francisco Bay area for three days, the Long Beach Chiefs basketball game at Oakland Tuesday night has been postponed.

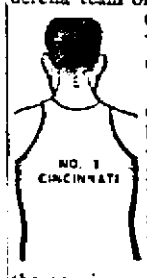

Airports have been closed for an indefinite period and the weather bureau has promised more fog for next week. The game will be rescheduled for a later date. Long Beach will return to action Dec. 27 in a game at Oakland.

The Chiefs will return home to host the Oaks for a two-game series Dec. 29-30. The non-reserved seat price has been reduced to $1.00 for this series and children with adults will enter free. Each adult buying a reserved ticket can bring in one child free in the adjacent seat.

The Chiefs' L.B. Arena box office is open daily from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Telephone reservations are available at HE 7-7027.

Cincy Rolls Along, 72-46

CINCINNATI (UPI) — National champion Cincinnati put on one of its patented second-half drives to defeat Davidson University, the Cinderella team of the Southern Conference, 72-46 here Saturday night.

The Bearcats, bedeviled by the team that upset No. 2 ranked Duke last Tuesday, scored 16 points to Davidson's six in the opening seven minutes of the second half to pull away.

Buckeyes Romp to Sixth Victory

DETROIT (UPI) — Fourth-ranked and unbeaten Ohio State took to the road for the first time this season and overwhelmed the University of Detroit, 101-66, for its sixth straight and most lopsided basketball triumph.

Pacing the Buckeye attack were Dick Reasbeck and Gary Bradds with 28 and 19 points, respectively. Reasbeck got 19 of his points in the first half and was pulled with 12 minutes to go in the second half.

Tribe Rips Texas for 7th Win in Row

STANFORD (UPI) — The undefeated Stanford Indians routed the University of Texas basketball team 72-46 Saturday night for their seventh straight win of the season.

Junior center Tom Dose led the Indians' scoring with 19 points, although he played slightly more than half the game.

California Holds Off Wyoming Rally

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — California's Golden Bears led all the way but had to stave off a rally in the final minutes to defeat Wyoming 60-55 in a basketball contest here Saturday night.

Illinois Wins, 93-90

Jerry West and Elgin Baylor were the centers of attention Saturday morning as a big crowd turned out at St. Anthony High to watch a basketball clinic featuring coach Fred Schaus and the Lakers.

NAME McKAY YEAR'S BEST

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Washington Touchdown Club announced Sunday the selection of John McKay, pilot of Southern California's unbeaten Trojans, as its 1962 Coach of the Year.

McKay, who guided Southern Cal to a 10-0 record and Rose Bowl bid, will be presented the club's trophy at the annual awards dinner Jan. 12.

1 Second Left When Troy Wins

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI)—Southern Cal's unbeaten Trojans made it nine basketball wins in a row Saturday night, beating Nebraska with one second to go on a "rim-up-and-in" shot by sophomore center Allen Young.

Nebraska, stung at becoming Trojan victim No. 8 Friday night, scrapped through the game and seemed set for a win in the late stages.

Bill Vincent hooked twice for baskets to make the score 53-51. Young, who paced Southern Cal with 15 points, scored on two free throws, setting up a Husker stall for the one basket.

* * * *

NEBRASKA'S leading team scorer, Darrell Petsch, missed a 10-foot jump shot, AT 2:13 left, the Trojans played for their one good shot, called time with 21 seconds to play and the score still 53-51, and fed to Young for his first-stopper just as the horn was ready to be sounded.

Knicks Stun Celts; S.F. Pistons Win

(Compiled from Wire Reports)

The New York Knick's stunned Boston and the only perfect home court record in the NBA vanished to highlight National Basketball Assn. action Saturday night.

The Knicks grabbed a 21-point halftime advantage and went on to humiliate Boston, 120-105; the San Francisco Warriors ended a seven-game Syracuse victory streak at home, 123-118, and the Detroit Pistons rallied in the final period to whip Chicago, 122-110.

The Celtics hit only 17 of 46 shots from the floor and were unable to contain Richie Guerin, who scored 37 points.

Man to Man

SANTA

By JERRY WYNN

He never could be considered as a subject for a shaving commercial and his stomach is a bit out of athletic proportions. But who cares!

Santa Claus today is the world's greatest sportsman. His escapades on Christmas Eve combine the lightning of Herb Elliott, the audacity of Maury Wills and the thrust of Jim Taylor. And his live audience is in the billions.

Obtaining an interview with Santa was almost as tough as speaking to Vince Lombardi. It seems the old fellow nearly exhausted himself this year trying to line up presents for the Kennedy family.

What is your favorite sport, Santa?

"I call it smiling . . . to visualize the smiles of the little boys and girls when they open their presents."

Who are your favorite athletes?

"The fathers who do-it-themselves trying to put the toys together; the mothers who have to clean up the debris."

Which is your favorite team?

"The teams of volunteers who contribute their time to worthy causes such as the one which manned the Christmas tree lot at Bellflower Blvd. near Atherton St. I hear they sold more than $13,000 worth of trees for the building fund of the Los Altos YMCA."

Do you have a secret for climbing through narrow chimneys?

"Does Ed Pauley tell Dan Reeves?"

What has been the greatest thrill of your career?

"It hasn't come yet. It will come when people learn to live in peace and the Christmas spirit of good fellowship extends throughout the year."

---

Now, Santa, here is a special list of persons deserving presents. They were courageous enough to talk "Man to Man" with me in 1962 and make the first year of this column a pleasurable experience.

*Arnold Palmer . . . Norm Larker . . . Rudy LaRusso . . . Freddie Blassie . . . Dee Andrews . . . Ralph Keller . . . Bob Lemon . . . Pokey Bar . . . Walter O'Malley . . . Jim Brosnan . . . ## P-T AWARD TO MASTERS CHAMPION

Clover 'Golfer of Year'

By JERRY WYNN

There's no looking over Dick Clover.

He is Long Beach "golfer of the year" for 1962.

A name that has appeared in headlines in a barrage of championship amateur events the past five years, Clover was named Saturday as recipient of the ninth annual Independent, Press-Telegram award for golfing achievement.

The 29-year-old Recreation Park standard-bearer compiled a magnificent record in 1962. It included victories in the Long Beach Masters Championship, the Santa Ana, Huntington Beach and San Clemente City championships, the El Rivino CC Invitational and a second-place finish in the classic Southern California Amateur Championship.

Ironically, it was a defeat for Clover rather than a victory which was one of the major golf stories of the year. For after becoming only the second player ever to win the Long Beach City Championship in consecutive years (1960-61), Dick was beaten in semi-finals this year by young Roger Cleveland.

The husky, blond advocate of Arnold Palmer's "attacking" philosophy also captured the Recreation Park Club Championship for a second successive year as well as retaining his Gilman Hot Springs club title.

The victory at Recreation Park qualifies Clover to defend his Long Beach Masters crown early next year. In the 1962 Masters, he showed the courage as well as the class of a champion by overcoming a near-disastrous third round blowup of 81 to capture the title by three strokes with a final round of 72.

If that 81 was a low point of the year, a brilliant seven-under par 64 at Willowick during the Santa Ana City Championship was a topper. His 54-hole total of 200 was a tournament record.

And if there was a single shot to be extracted from the host of 1962 gems, it would be the wedge that Clover holed out for an eagle-deuce on the 351-yard 17th at Virginia CC during the So-Cal Amateur Championship.

The former USC golf captain is married, resides in LaMirada and is employed by E. K. Williams and Co. as a minerals salesman. He will be honored at Long Beach Century Club Sports Night at the Lafayette Hotel, Jan. 24.

Houston 6½ Point Favorite Over Dallas for AFL Crown

HOUSTON (AP)—The well-balanced Dallas Texans challenge the pass-minded Houston Oilers in a Texas showdown Sunday for the American Football League championship.

Dallas will be trying to wrestle from the defending champions the title Houston has held since the AFL was organized in 1960.

The Oilers are favored by 6½ points in the Texas feud that will be televised nationally. An overflow crowd of 37,000 is expected at Jeppesen Public Schools Stadium.

Records leave little choice between the two teams. Both won division titles with 11-3 records. They rank one-two in the AFL in both total offense and total defense. Neither gained a wide statistical edge while splitting two regular season games.

Houston's attack, as in 1960 and 1961, centers on the explosive passes of George Blanda. The old pro of 13 years is backed by such top runners as Charlie Tolar and Billy Cannon, but about two out of every three yards the Oilers gained this season resulted from passes.

Dallas blends the brilliant passing of Len Dawson, the AFL's player of the year, with the power and speed of Curtis McClinton, the rookie of the year, and Abner Haynes, the league's leading ground gainer in 1960. The Texan formula has resulted in near-perfect balance in that Dallas gained 2,456 yards in 14 games on passes and 2,407 yards rushing.

Blanda set a league record this year by having 42 passes intercepted but he rallied the Oilers from behind six times and Houston moves into its third title game seeking an eighth straight victory. Blanda had only 22 interceptions last season, when he preceded Dawson as the league's player of the year.

Dawson threw three touchdown passes as the Texans ran over Houston, 31-3, in late November while intercepting six passes and recovering three fumbles. A week later Blanda bombed Dallas for a 14-6 victory as the Houston defense prevented the Texans from crossing the Oiler 34-yard line the first 55 minutes.

77-Yard Run, Pass Thefts Wreck Tech

HOUSTON (UPI)—Bill Tobin's 77-yard third-quarter touchdown run and two fourth-quarter interceptions by linebacker Andy Russell propelled Missouri to a 14-10 victory over Georgia Tech in the fourth annual Bluebonnet Bowl game Saturday.

Tobin, a 5-10 senior from Burlington Junction, Mo., broke through the left side of the heavier Georgia Tech line, twisted out for about 10 yards, then got a key block by Russell to spring him loose on his winning sortie.

The Tigers from the Big Eight had scored first on a 21-yard option sweep by quarterback Jim Johnson in the first quarter and were never headed.

Tech and its talented Billy Lothridge drove 61 yards for a second-period touchdown with Joe Auer circling right end for the final six yards and Lothridge tacked on a 26-yard field goal in the third period.

Auer, a junior halfback who seems to save his heroics for post-season games, almost pulled the game out for the Rambling Wrecks with a 35-yard run in the fading moments.

• • • •

BUT AFTER Auer had taken the ball to the Missouri 32, Russell came up with his second interception of the quarter on the goal line with 1:22 left to play and the game was over as far as Tech was concerned.

Russell also had stopped another Georgia Tech threat in the opening minutes of the final quarter when he hauled in a Lothridge pass on his own 11-yard line, after Tech had driven to the Missouri 25.

Russell's interceptions were among four that kept Lothridge's aerial threats minimized. Roger Phillips, a stocky guard, also intercepted a pass.

• • • •

LOTHRIDGE managed to complete only five of 15 passes for 68 yards and was under continual harrassment by a Missouri line headed by end Conrad Hitchler.

CALGARY SIGNS MISSOURI STAR

HOUSTON (AP)—Conrad Hitchler, Missouri end voted the outstanding lineman in Saturday's Bluebonnet Bowl game between Tigers and Georgia Tech, has signed a pro football contract with Calgary of the Canadian League.

CATCHES TD PASS IN LAST MINUTE

First Negro on South Team Hero in Dixie Victory, 15-14

MIAMI (UPI)—Randy Kerbow of Rice hurled an 80-yard touchdown pass to Jackson State's Willie Richardson — first Negro to play for the South in the North-South game—with 37 seconds left Saturday to lead the dandies from Dixie to a 15-14 upset victory.

Kentucky's Jerry Woolum then heaved a two-point conversion pass to his own teammate, Dave Gash, in the shadows of the poorly lighted Orange Bowl to defeat the eight-point favorites from north of the Mason and Dixon line.

It was a mish-mash, in a game which started in 80-degree heat and bright sunshine and ended in darkness—even for the official scorer. For Woolum was credited with the whole heroic bit and only later was it announced that Kerbow had hurled the desperation pass which paid off.

Richardson stood high among the South's heroes in this game put on by the Shrine for crippled children, gathering in two touchdown passes to win the South's most valuable player honors. And Bob Paremore of Florida A&M, who followed Richardson into the game in the last quarter to become the second Negro to compete for the Southerners, was voted the game's sportsmanship award.

Most valuable honors for the North went to Detroit's Jerry Gross, who passed to Lonny Sanders of Michigan State for the first touchdown and set up the second which Dave Francis of Ohio State banged over from the one.

L.A. IN AWARDS SWEEP

Top Sporting News Accolade to Bailey

Los Angeles made a clean sweep of the baseball men of the year awards for the major leagues Saturday in the 27th annual selections by the Sporting News.

Besides granting its highest accolades to Fred Haney and Bill Rigney of the Angels and Maury Wills and Don Drysdale of the Dodgers, the national baseball weekly named ex-Wilson High star Bob Bailey as the minor league player of the year.

BAILEY

Bailey, the 19-year-old bonus baby who is expected to become the regular Pittsburgh third baseman this season, batted .299, drove in 108 runs and slugged 28 home runs for Columbus of the International League.

The Sporting News named Haney, general manager of the Angels, executive of the year and Rigney manager of the year. Wills was named player of the year and Drysdale pitcher of the year.

The Angels also won another honor when Jack Quinn, general manager of their class C farm club at San Jose, was named executive of the year for the lower minors. # Miami Outclassed by Houston, 49-21

ORLANDO, Fla (UPI)— Hard-driving sophomore Joe Lopasky exploded for four touchdowns to lead the University of Houston to a 49-21 shocker over Miami of Ohio here Saturday in the 17th annual Tangerine Bowl.

A crowd of 7,500 saw Lopasky, a stocky 190-pound speedster from Lehman, Pa., score on a 70-yard punt return, a 13-yard pass from quarterback Billy Roland, and runs of three and four yards.

Directed by sophomore passing star Ernie Kellermann, Miami jumped to a 7-0 lead after five minutes of play on Kellerman's 9-yard pass to Gerald Myers.

Alternating his ground attack with Lopasky and fullback Bobby Brezina, Roland brought the Cougars back with a 52-yard drive climaxed by Lopasky's three-yard plunge.

Roland hit 11 of 17 passes for 199 yards as he mixed up his running and passing attack for an explosive second quarter scoring spurt of 28 points to put the game on ice for Houston.

ASTRONAUT? AILING BOY WANTS AFL STAR

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—An Alabama boy turned down a Texas Children's Hospital nurse when she told him she could arrange for an astronaut to visit him.

"I'd rather see Charlie Tolar," replied Gary Smith, 9, who is hospitalized with Hodgkins disease.

Tollar, fullback for the American Football League Houston Oilers, made Gary's wish come true Saturday.

Tolar visited the youngster and gave him two toys and a football autographed by the Oiler team that is to seek its third straight AFL championship Sunday in a game with the Dallas Texans.

Gary is a son of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Smith, Spring Hill, Ala.

"Gary's ambition is to be a quarterback," said Mrs. Smith.

CHAMP COACHES IN PRO BOWL

Vince Lombardi of the Green Bay Packers and Al Sherman of the New York Giants, pro football's winningest coaches, Saturday accepted positions as head coaches of the West and East respectively for the NFL's Pro Bowl game Jan. 13 in the Coliseum.

It'll be a rematch of their World championship meeting Dec. 30 at New York's Yankee Stadium, and for the title game loser, a chance for a measure of revenge.

This is the second time as head Pro Bowl coach for both Lombardi and Sherman.

The 49-year-old Packer coach directed the West to a 35-31 victory in 1961. Sherman coached the East last January and absorbed a 31-30 defeat.

The 39-year-old Sherman is bringing a Pro Bowl "Iron Man," Andy Robustelli, as one of his assistants. Sherman's other aide is Ken Kavanough, who directs end play and pass patterns.

Lombardi is bringing Bill Austin and Phil Bengston as his helpers.

Decidedly to Race at Santa Anita

HITTIN' THE HIGH SPOTS: Fate can indeed be strange. In horse racing, for instance, Broker's Tip captured the greatest prize of all—the 1933 Kentucky Derby, but never won another race . . .

Similarly, Stagehand came west as a 3-year-old for the 1938 winter meeting at Santa Anita, garnered the Santa Anita Derby and then nosed out the immortal Seabiscuit in the Santa Anita Handicap in one of the classic turf duels of all time . . .

It was his last trip to the winner's circle . . .

Another Kentucky Derby winner appeared headed for somewhat the same fate the past year . . .

Decidedly, a California-bred son of another Derby winner, Determine, showed great promise in racing to victory at Louisville, but failed in the Preakness and Belmont Stakes. In fact, he has won only one other race—a minor turf event at Saratoga late in the summer . . .

It looked for awhile as if Decidedly wouldn't be raced this winter, perhaps never again. But he's currently at Santa Anita ready to try and escape the fate of Broker's Tip and Stagehand . . .

Being prepped for the Strub Stakes (formerly the Maturity) and the Big 'Cap, Decidedly impressed clockers the past week with a fine workout!

NOTRE DAME DIDN'T THINK much of Wisconsin's Big Ten champions in comparison to other rivals and a vote of the Irish team strongly favors USC to beat the Badgers in the Rose Bowl . . .

The Trojans and Michigan State each polled 15 votes as the best clubs the Irish met this year. Wisconsin received only two votes . . .

Strangely enough, though, Troy put only one man on the Irish all-opponent team—fullback Ben Wilson. But even then, Wilson had only a tie with George Saimes of Michigan State . . .

Wisconsin placed two men—Pat Richter and center Ken Bowman.

IT IS REPORTED THAT Bobby Bell of Minnesota received one of the most fabulous contracts ever obtained by a lineman when he signed with the Dallas Texans of the AFL . . .

The word is that Lamar Hunt gave him a five-year, no-cut contract calling for nearly $150,000—plus fringe benefits . . .

Ollie Matson, who played out his option with the Rams, reportedly is asking $30,000 to play in Canada—and likely will get it . . .

When he was out here recently for a game with the Lakers he pointed out that Oscar Robinson of Cincinnati is the most perfect basketball player he's ever seen—but Boston's Bill Russell the most valuable . . .

He would then add Baylor and Wilt Chamberlain to make up the list of four super-stars in the game today . . .

Marine Stadium Today Will Be Site of This Kind of Blazing Boat Action

Stars in 'Red's Regatta'

Benefit for Wilson at Marine Stadium

By DAVE TAYLOR

Critically injured popular Southland speedboat driver Red Wilson will get a thundering vote of confidence from one of the fastest fields of powerboats ever assembled on the West Coast at Marine Stadium today. Action begins at 12:30 p.m.

"Red's Regatta", staged to provide financial assistance to the hospitalized Wilson and his family, will be packed with a full gamut of world record holders from Mickey Remund in the 45-inch hydro class to Berry McCown, holder of the world's quarter-mile drag record.

Included in the array of speedsters will be Jim Hurtubise, one of the brightest of Indianapolis stars and former Speedway rookie of the year who joined the benefit regatta competition Friday.

Hurtubise, far from a neophyte at motorboat racing, was second in the 1961 Salton Sea "500". He led the same race this year when his boat blew up under him and sank. He'll be running his speedy E-Runabout Daddy's Baby in Sunday's racing.

• • • •

FEATURED event in the nine class competition will be an attack on Berry McCown's 154 mph world drag mark. Running against McCown's Banazi will be 14 challengers headed by nationally rated champion Bob Ellis in Rudy Ramos' former world mark holder Golden Thing.

Others among the 80 contestants include Marion Beaver, Parker, Ariz., in his favorite 225 hydro Uncle Gummy, Leroy Penhall in Hot Cinders, Ed Olson with his Cream Puff VIII, Tony Maricich with Suddenly and SK champions Ton Towle and Carl Dethlefsen.

The regatta, sponsored by Southern California Speedboat Club and J. C. Agajanian, offers no trophies or prize money. Total proceeds will be donated to Wilson, seriously injured when his boat flipped at 92 mph in a recent Parker Dam, Ariz., race. Everyone involved in the race from drivers to gatemen are donating their services to the Wilson benefit.

scored 10 seconds after the tip. But then the 49ers went 11 minutes before they bagged their second field goal as Loyola assumed a 16-8 lead.

During the first nine minutes of play, Loyola's defense limited the 49ers to only six shots from the field. Brian Quinn led the Lions' attack with three field goals and three free throws.

• • • •

LONG BEACH came to life as Andersen, Dick Montgomery and Hodge scored and with 8:30 left in the half, the 49ers closed the gap to 16-13. Loyola shot ahead by 10, 30-20, as Flanagan and reserve guard Wayne Boehle found the range.

The Lions maintained this advantage and led 34-25 at the mid-point.

Coach Dick Perry's club caught fire at the outset of the second half and with 9:53 left pulled to within one point, 41-40. Hodge put LBSC ahead, 42-41, 20 seconds later, but the Lions regained the lead on Mike Lawler's eight-foot jumper.

• • • •

LOYOLA then lost two of its regulars, Dick McCloskey and Flanagan, on personals.

Bobby Holland, Johnny Johnson and Andersen hit four successive baskets with five minutes left on the clock and Loyola, weakened on the boards by the loss of Flanagan, in particular, never was a threat again.

Guthrie, in typical candor of today's football heroes, said he signed with the Chargers "because I like their coaching staff and the other men in the organization I met. I believe the American Football League has a great future, and my greatest opportunity is with San Diego."

Ram general manager Elroy (Crazylegs) Hirsch and scout Jim David had met with Guthrie this week, and David was in attendance at the Bluebonnet Bowl. Hirsch was at the Tangerine Bowl at Orlando, Fla., where tackle Tom Nomina of Miami of Ohio, the Rams No. 2 pick, was playing.

There was no word of Nomina signing, and thus far, the Rams have a perfect record. They have yet to sign a draftee while having lost their No. 1 (second), No. 3, No. 4, No. 6 and No. 16 choices.

Saturday, they were stung by a Yellow Jacket.

MANILA (UPI) — World junior lightweight champion Gabriel (Flash) Elorde unleashed power-punching Saturday night to score a unanimous decision over veteran Solomon Boysaw of Cleveland in a 10-round non-title bout before a capacity crowd of 35,000.

The 27-year-old champion caught fire in the eighth round when he knocked Boysaw down for a two-count. Elorde then slammed a powerful right to Boysaw's head that sent the American reeling and a follow-up left hook brought Boysaw down near the ropes.

Referee Federico Reyes scored it 49-41, while judges Alfredo Quiazon and Jamie Valencio had it 48-43, respectively, all for Elorde.

Palmer Joins LA Open Field

ARNOLD PALMER
Champ Heading West

Arnold Palmer, winner of almost every major tournament in golf, will make his eighth attempt to capture the $55,000 Los Angeles Open, president Ed Davis of the sponsoring Los Angeles Junior Chamber of Commerce announced Saturday.

PGA tournament manager Jim Gaquin informed the sponsors Palmer will be on hand for the Los Angeles Open when play starts Jan. 4 over the Rancho course and that he hoped to be in front Jan. 7 at the conclusion of the final round.

Palmer in 1962 had one of the best years in golfing history. His official winnings came to an all-time high of $81,448, and that was despite not engaging in tournament play during the final five months.

• • • •

BY THE time Palmer turned his attention to other activities including a television series and touring with Gary Player, he had won eight tournaments. His major victories were in the Masters for the third time, the British Open and the Las Vegas tournament of Champions. And it took a playoff for Jack Nicklaus to beat him for the top money in the U.S. Open.

But the best Palmer has been able to do in the Los Angeles Open was a tie for 10th in 1959. In fact, two years ago he got his greatest attention when he shot a 12 on the par-5 ninth hole, hitting four balls out of bounds.

Season tickets for the tourney, priced at $7.50 for all days, and now available at all golf courses and ranges.

Long Beach Nu-Pike, not given a ghost of a chance to represent the United States in water polo in the upcoming Pan-American Games, is within two victories of achieving the impossible.

The local poloists claimed two more wins Saturday in the Lynwood Natatorium and will try to eliminate once-beaten San Francisco in a match today at 11 a.m.

Commerce, the other unbeaten club, will try to oust El Segundo in the other match at 10 o'clock. A Long Beach and Commerce victory would set up a title game at 3 o'clock.

• • • •

SATURDAY, Nu-Pike ousted New York AC from the competition with a 13-3 win, and followed that up by handing El Segundo its first loss, 6-4.

Murdock Fraser and Chuck Bittick continued to carry the offensive load, combining for 14 goals in the two games. In each game, Long Beach pulled away in the second half.

Goalie Bill Russell's play has been superb, but so has that of the entire team, which also includes Ken and Mike Smith, Dave Coon, Ken Hamdorf, Tom Hermstead, Paul Zack, Dave Ballard, Charles Mackh and Dick Johnson.

HURRICANE RUINS HOLLY

LINDA'S BOOK

It Tells 10 Pct of Loves

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — When an actress writes her autobiography does she reveal everything? Does she tell the whole truth?

Linda Christian hedged.

"I was as honest as I could be without being plagued by lawyers for the rest of my life," she said.

Formerly married to the late Tyrone Power and currently the wife of English actor Edmond Purdom, the sloe-eyed beauty candidly writes about several affairs in her book, "Linda."

Among them was a fling with the late Errol Flynn. Did Linda report on all her romances?

"Goodness no," she said, as if goodness had little to do with it. "I mentioned only about 10 per cent of my love affairs. People wouldn't believe me if I told the whole truth!"

• • • •

STILL beautiful and provocative, Linda is a lusty woman with a voluptuous figure and a sense of humor. Asked about the men in her life, she said:

"Errol was a romantic figure in my life. My love for him was hero worship when I was just a girl. Tyrone, however, was the genuine love of my life."

Where does that leave Mr. Purdom, who is working in England now?

"That leaves Edmond in the doghouse I guess," she said, adding, "I fall in love with actors because I'm a glutton for punishment. Actors love themselves so much all you can do is join in the adoration."

THE SAME GIRL, but on the right Eva Six, blonde Hungarian actress is wearing a wig for her American film debut, "Bikini" in which she plays a Filipino guerilla.

Eva Six--She Looks Like Monroe, Talks Like Gabor

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Eva Six is a shapely Hungarian actress who looks like Marilyn Monroe and talks like Zsa Zsa Gabor.

It follows naturally that in her American movie debut she dons a dark wig and plays a Filipino guerrilla. That's the way things are done in Hollywood.

Title of the movie is "Bikini." Miss Six could fill a Bikini admirably, but the movie is about the World War II atoll, not swimwear.

• • • • •

IT WAS indirectly because of the late Miss Monroe that Eva got into American movies. She had acted in Hungary on screen and stage.

Then came the revolution. A Freedom Fighter, she escaped on a truck to Austria.

A family in San Diego sponsored her entry into this country.

"I was so happy to be free that I never even thought about acting again. I worked as a waitress, ran my own delicatessen, did all sorts of jobs and loved them all.

• • • •

"WHEN I first came here, people would stop me on the street and ask me for my autograph. I would ask them why. They would answer: 'Aren't you Marilyn Monroe?'

Soon after Marilyn's death, an agent persuaded her to take up acting again. She wanted to use her right name—Eva Kenedi.

But producer James Nicholson figured the Hungarian version of the first family's name would be too much. So he gave her the name Six and put her under contract.

What's New? Late Gossip From N.Y.

By EARL WILSON

NEW YORK — The gossip that will not down: Georgie Jessel's developed a passionate hatred for Comedian Lennie Bruce because of the latter's four-letter words before audiences and thinks something ought to be done. . . . Maximilian Schell had three dates with Susan Strasberg.

Peter Lawford brought out the props for Sammy Davis Jr. when the latter did a benefit in Westchester County. Lugging on table, chairs, etc., Peter said, "Can you imagine what he'd have me doing if you know who hadn't won the election?" . . .

Tony Curtis' lovely European gal Christine Kaufmann turns 18 Jan. 11 and it's the opinion of friends that thereupon she'll marry Tony—or cut off the romance entirely.

• • • •

FRANK SINATRA for Broadway? Producers of Ben Hecht's "Underworld" are hoping to get him interested, and will use the argument that the stage is the one place where he hasn't yet proved to be No. 1. . . . Actor Louis Quinn, of 77 Sunset Strip, is at Cedars of Lebanon, Los Angeles, his leg in traction after a TV show accident. . . . Connie Francis sure knows how to win friends and influence people. She agreed to go on Jack Benny's Feb. 19 TV show—only if he'd accompany her on the violin. Well, sir, he thought it over . . . and he'll do it!

TODAY'S BEST LAUGH: Impersonations are coming back in Show Biz, claimed Mark Russell, the Washington comic, appearing at the Blue Angel. "Right down there in Washington now," he says, "we have a guy who does a terrific Vaughn Meader."

Half-hour Show on Marilyn Set

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Soon after the first of the year, television and movies will be showing a number of documentary films on Marilyn Monroe.

Producer Arthur Lieberman has a half-hour TV documentary ready for the networks.

IT'S REAL RUGGED

That's Why Niven Like Actor's Life

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — People keep asking David Niven why he wants to be an actor. His answer:

"In my present movie, 'The Pink Panther,' in which I make love to Capucine and Claudia Cardinale, I work in a long masquerade party sequence in which I wear a gorilla suit.

"A typical day goes like this. I wake up in my sumptious hotel suite and ring for my breakfast in bed.

"The waiter says 'Good morning, Mr. Niven' and I have breakfast. The elevator boy smiles and greets me warmly as do the doorman, my chauffeur, the gatemen, my makeup man and the wardrobe man who puts me into my monkey suit.

"Everyone on the set dutifully greets me. I go before the cameras and utter my dialogue for day—the sound 'uggh.'

"Then I reverse the process and it's 'Good evening, Mr. Niven,' all the way back to the hotel where I have my dinner in bed, studying my 'uggh' for the next day's shooting.

"That's why I want to be an actor."

SINATRA RATES HIS SON

'More Actor Than Singer'

By DORIS KLEIN

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—In a corner of the recording studio, a slim boy who bore a striking resemblance to the singer was staring into space, bobbing to the rhythm.

When Count Basie's band bounced the last beat, 18-year-old Frank Sinatra Jr. walked over to his dad.

"How did I do last . . ." the boy started to ask. His father interrupted, "Just a minute, son."

• • • •

AS YOUNG Frank walked away, a press agent told senior, "He's anxious to know what you thought of his performance last night."

"I know," said Frank, "but he can wait. He's a little young."

What Junior didn't know then was that his father had cut short his recording rehearsal the night before to watch young Frank perform on Jack Benny's television show.

• • • •

IT WAS THE first time father had seen son perform and the first time young Frank had appeared on a coast-to-coast hookup.

"Frank laughed and roared through the whole show," a crony who was there said afterward. "He kept saying, 'the kid is really good.'"

• • • •

WHAT DOES Frank think of his boy as a performer?

"He's more of an actor than a singer. His tonal quality's pretty good. But he needs more training. He's studying music and I want him to finish college."

SINGER SINATRA . . . and Frank Jr.

Actor Plans Author Hunt

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Actor John Gavin is organizing a search in Mexico for famed phantom writer — B. Traven, author of "Treasure of the Sierra Madre" and other works.

Traven's books are world famous, but he apparently likes anonymity better than fame. Previous attempts to find him have been unsuccessful.

No Licenses for Boaters

The Assembly Interim Committee on Public Utilities and Corporations has decided after lengthy hearings throughout the state not to recommend that California boaters be licensed. That apparently should end the controversy and all boaters should be happy.

However, in ruling against the licenses, the committee's chairman, John C. Williamson, D-Bakersfield, dropped a bombshell on practically all local law enforcement authorities for what he said was extreme laxity in enforcing boating laws. He also said that the committee was not unanimous in its opinion about licenses.

"The committee feels," he said, "that licensing of operators of recreational boats would be a futile gesture because of what the committee considers to be wholly inadequate enforcement of existing boating laws by local governments.

"There is no question but that a drastic improvement in enforcement of existing boating laws would result in a very real increase in water safety and this would seem to be the first order of business."

The committee did approve of a plan to license operators of passenger-for-hire vessels who are not already covered by federal licenses. It seems rather ridiculous to this columnist that the state should have overlooked such licenses for so many years.

THE COMMITTEE REPORTED that 43 of California's 56 counties are vitally concerned with waterways, but that only 12 of those 43 are making a reasonable effort to enforce existing boating laws. "Thirty-one counties," said the report, "are making a bare minimum effort."

The committee refused to specify the counties, but consultant Ray King, who drafted the report, said that each county should examine its own program and reach its own conclusions.

The committee also recommended that:

The state maintain a file of persons convicted of violating boating laws and supply the information to the courts.

Gasoline taxes paid by boaters be used for building small-craft harbor facilities and coastal harbors of refuge.

Profits, if any, from numbering boats be used for improvement of recreational boating throughout the state.

Construction of coastal harbors of refuge be undertaken as soon as possible.

The committee did not mention the recent report by the Division of Small Craft Harbor that teen-age operators appear to be involved in twice as many accidents as their seniors.

THAT REPORT SHOOK UP the California Boating Council, Inc., and Mrs. Jan Mower, of Rodeo, manager of the CBC, disagreed with methods used by the state agency in arriving at such figures.

The division said that 160 boating accidents occurred in the first half of 1962 and 53 persons were killed.

Mrs. Mower said that the way division grouped ages resulted in some newspapers pushing the panic button and falsely accusing teen-age boat operators.

"Even if the state's figures were right, percentage-wise," said Mrs. Mower, "only .194 percent of the teen-age group were involved in boating accidents, which is nothing to get excited about. We most certainly challenge the division's figures."

Lachlan Richards, chief of the SCH division, in defending the figures, said that he didn't want to become involved in any argument with the CBC or any other organization.

"We feel our figures are completely accurate," he said. "We said in the report that it was only a trend. We have no purpose to show that any age group causes more accidents than others. However, it is not fair to be blaming persons 40 years of age and older for a higher percentage of accidents than they actually experience. People can shoot holes in any statistics."

IF YOU HAVE BEEN thinking that the waterfowl season is bad, you just don't realize how right you were. Last weekend, 418 hunters on the entire Imperial Waterfowl Management Area killed 336 birds, not even one bird per man. Broken down, the figures showed 202 ducks, 130 geese and four coots.

Among the geese were 10 fully protected Ross's geese. Eight were killed Saturday and two Sunday.

The Department of Fish and Game cited all those who killed the protected species. Wardens pointed out that while Ross's geese resemble snow geese in plumage, they are smaller. In fact, a Ross's goose is not much larger than a mallard duck.

Memo to Mrs. Richard C. Goodrich, of 2922 Radnor Avenue, who wrote, and to other parents who telephoned about the Hunter Safety course for youngsters.

There will be a class starting Jan. 3 in Millikan High School. Pertinent details about that class and others to follow will be printed in this column at a later date.

Because of the fact that the Hunter Safety Program is operated on a volunteer basis, openings for pupils are limited in each class. There are just not enough instructors to take care of the demand.

WINONLY HOPES TO WIN ONLY

Trainer J. E. (Cotton) Tinsley examines Fred W. Hooper's prize colt, Winonly, who will be one of the favorites in the Palos Verdes Handicap, Wednesday's opening day feature at Santa Anita.

'Anita Again Lures Turf United Nations

By ERNIE MASON

Ever since Santa Anita amazed the racing world by posting a $100,000 purse for the first running of the Santa Anita Handicap in 1938 and the Irish-bred Azucar won it, foreign horses have been attracted to the track and its big race.

Azucar was the first of seven foreigners to win the classic 1¼-mile race that highlights the Santa Anita meeting.

The meeting, which opens next Wednesday again has a representative band of foreign horses either on the grounds or headed here and 21 imported horses have been nominated for the Santa Anita Handicap which will be contested Feb. 23.

In addition to Azucar, Irish-bred winners emerged in two other renewals of the Santa Anita Handicap — Noor in 1950 and Poona II in 1955.

• • • •

ARGENTINA sent three winners of the race to Santa Anita — Kayak II in 1939, Talon in 1948 and Miche in 1952 — while Olhaverry, the white horse from Chile, won in 1947.

The invitational Washington D.C., International Stakes helped provide some of the foreign horses which were nominated for this winter's running of the Santa Anita Handicap.

Four of the horses who participated in the International on the grass are pointing for the Santa Anita Handicap. They are Zabeg from Russia, Lebon M L from France, Pardao from Ireland and Porfido from Argentina.

• • • •

DURING THE 25-year racing history of Santa Anita, 11 counties and five continents have sent thoroughbreds to Santa Anita where they scored stakes victories.

This year Santa Anita is offering eight stakes over the grass course, climaxing with the $100,000 San Juan Capistrano Handicap. These races range from 6½ furlongs to the full course distance of about 1¾ miles for the San Juan Capistrano.

The San Juan Capistrano, run on the main dirt track until 1954, also has had a goodly number of foreign winners including Miss Grillo, Noor, St. Vincent, Amerigo and Olden Times who was bred in England but foaled in California.

And just as the horses that have been a part of Santa Anita's history came from many lands, so have some of the top riders and trainers.

The most famous of the foreign-born riders is the all-time jockey champion, Johnny Longden, who was born in England, raised in Canada and won riding fame in the United States. In recent years, Latin-America has sent many of the top riders to the track like Manuel Ycaza and Braulio Baeza.

Of the foreign-born trainers perhaps the most notable is Horatio A. Luro who saddled Miss Grillo to win the San Juan Capistrano in 1949 and Talon to capture the Santa Anita Handicap in 1948.

"DRIVE FOR A SAFE HOLIDAY"

A Merry Christmas and Happy New Year
to you and your family!

In extending best wishes for happiness during Christmas and the New Year, may we take this opportunity to urge you to join with us in a "Drive for a Safe Holiday!" If each of us will observe the following holiday safe driving tips and bring them to the attention of members of the family and motoring friends, we will help assure a happier and safer season for all

☆ BE ALERT TO HOLIDAY HAZARDS ☆
☆ BE SURE YOUR CAR IS SAFE ☆
☆ USE SEAT BELTS ☆
☆ USE COURTESY ABUNDANTLY ☆
☆ WATCH OUT FOR OTHERS ☆
☆ PLAN A SAFE DRIVE ☆

Full enjoyment of the Holiday Season is something to which all of us look forward. With this enjoyment, however—and we know you agree—goes individual responsibility to protect your family, yourself and your community. Let's all DRIVE for a Safe Holiday!

Very truly yours,
Ridings Cadillac

the littlest gift . . .

. . . is not measured by its size, nor weighed on the world's scales.

Its very smallness brings it near the boundlessness of thought, and its weight
is love.

To give such a gift is to sound one true and gentle note in the melody of Christmas.

To receive one,
Joy.

The Wild Waves Say . . .

TONIGHT THE woods around Park Estates will be filled with music—or a reasonable facsimile—tuneful enough to delight residents of the of the area.

It's the night of the traditional caroling party which Joan and Don Stage have had for years. Cocktails and buffet at 6 p.m. will precede the strolling and caroling throughout the neighborhood of about 70 friends, including the children who join the adults at 8:30 for the singalong.

When they first started, the singers used to carry candles for the procession. Now they carry flashlights. Too many ruined cashmeres and furs.

When they've all warbled the final "Noel" they are invited to stop by Susie and Norm Meager's for steaming cups of hot cocoa as a nightcap.

NOBODY NEEDS to look in the yellow pages for playmates going at a party pace these days. Least of all not friends of Norma and George Trammell or of their sons' today.

This is the date of their annual cocktail and oyster party, a favorite with friends and friends' families through the years. An old fashioned oyster bar, loaded with crushed ice, bowls of sauce and enough oysters in the half shell to pave the floor of Alamitos Bay, is always the main attraction. When guests have had their fill of the seafood delicacy, there is yet another buffet to turn to for ham, cheese fondue, et al other good stuff like that there.

NEVER LET IT be said that John Richards isn't a brave man, that Nada is not an understanding wife, or that friends who attend their open house on Christmas day won't have a good time.

It seems that John has knowledge of an ancient and venerable champagne punch. He has never before made it, however, until this year. And he has been making it for three months. That's how long it takes to concoct.

The ingredients? Wow! For any Milquetoast types among their friends there will be liquids of lesser atomic power to sip.

WHAT THE weatherman doesn't provide in the way of warmth tonight, Wanda and Dr. John Sewak will for guests at their indoor-outdoor Christmas open house from 8 to 11 p.m.

The patio will be bright—and toasty—not only from the glow of lights, but from a roaring blaze in the fire pit, but from strategically placed charcoal braziers and electric heaters, to boot.

About 130 have been invited to warm themselves in another highly satisfactory way—with a good glass of holiday cheer around the wassail bowl!

COCKTAILS, a colorful boat ride, then dinner was order of the night when Dee and Don Horton "chauffered" Mayor Ed Wade, grand marshal of the Parade of Lights, wife, Mary Wade, and Diane Olson, "Miss Welcome," during the final night of the waterways spectacular.

Preceding the canals and bay trip, the Hortons entertained at cocktails in their home for their boating guests plus Margaret and Frank Mansuy, Aggie and Johnny Miller, Dottie and Bunnie O'Hare, Jean and Keith Brockett, Olga and Vic Le Blanc, Juanita and George Heinrich, Don's mother, Cecelia, and Dee's mother, Stella Czerniawski. Hmmm. Bet Dee was relieved when a nice guy with a plain name like Horton proposed. But I digress. After the parade they all remet at the Long Beach Yacht Club for dinner.

KNOW WHAT secret insurance man, Bill Wilson, managed to keep under his hat from most of his friends? The fact that he and Jacqueline Gaillard were going to be married and sail away on a honeymoon aboard the Monterey.

The two said their vows in a quiet ceremony in California Heights Methodist Church last Sunday; sailed for Australia, Tahiti, New Zealand and Hawaii Monday. They'll be home Jan. 15.

IT'LL BE mele Kalikimaka to a fare-thee-well at Florence and Ed Iliff's home Tuesday—not so much because of the happenings of the 25th, but because of their post Kilikimaka trip to Hawaii.

With friends from B'Hills they'll fly to Honolulu Thursday for a New Year's celebration and a lazy stay at a guest plantation on the Garden Island of Kauai. But there'll be crying in their pineapple juice Jan. 5, date for return from the short, shapely trip.

SUPPING AND SIPPING at an elegant holiday party at Eleanore and Judge Charlie Smith's the other night was definitely the thing to do for Eleanore's Las Hermanas gang. So they did. Munching on the famous "Eleanore hors d'oeuvres" were special guests of the evening, Ola and Don Murphy, "Ag" and Mark Kuffel, Marion and Bob Ritner, Jerry and Copeland Green and Audrey and Bob Ritner.

• • • •

A "BEVERAGES and snacks" party was Margaret and John Davis' salute to the season for their friends on Saturday night—an annual, and very happy, custom.

NO MUSS, no fuss at Thelma and Lee Denny's this long, lovely, yet traditionally hectic time. They're up at her sister and brother-in-law's, Esther and Ned Hathaway's, home in Los Angeles where they traditionally go for the holiday.

AS CLOSE to the merriest spot in town as any one place COULD be, under the circumstances of Dec. 22, was Ann and Dr. Gordon Aiken's home when they hosted a houseful of old college friends from SC and Long Beach City College. A few of their ex-campus caper mates on hand Saturday were Janet and Bob Lichtenhan, Donna and Jack Ratkey (now of Phoenix—here especially for the party and to stay over for Christmas), Beverly and Norm Haney, Carol and Gil Tyner, Sharon and Dick Chard and Carolee and Stan Carroll.

Beautiful Tree, Family Project

LOOKING CLOSELY to see if those boys are paying attention, Janie Williamson, granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Paap, reads a Christmas story. She is seated in the Paaps' annual Christmas interior display at their home, 238 Roycroft Ave.

For many years Mr. and Mrs. John Paap, 238 Roycroft Ave., have had a family project of elaborate interior Christmas lighting and home decoration. In the past 10 years, they have won two sweepstakes, two first-place and one second-place awards in city-wide contests.

Although the prizes are fun, the rewarding pleasure is in the thousands of people each year who drive up, stop their cars, walk across the lawn and admire the display, according to Mr. Paap.

The Paaps have had a living room full of electric trains with a track around the Christmas tree, a scene featuring Santa Claus and a festive village. A prize-winner two years ago was built around a manger scene for which three wheelbarrow loads of dirt were hauled into the living room.

THIS YEAR an 86-pound green silver fir tree, 8½ feet tall and 8½ feet wide at the bottom, has been flocked white and each branch heavily wired to hold 1,560 rare ornaments.

A six-foot-tall mechanical Santa Claus with a flowing spun glass beard, white velvet pants and a gold lame coat stands at one end of the tree, greeting two little boys in red sleepers.

The ornaments on the tree make the walk across the lawn for a close look more than worth while. There are tiny candelabra, 14-inch giant globes, hand-painted faces on tinsel balls, pearl bicycles, angels, a manger scene in a glass ball and other fascinating baubles that have been in the family for almost half a century. Many are imported from Germany, Czechoslovakia and Denmark.

THE TREE is on a revolving base and plays Christmas carols as it revolves.

The exterior of the home has been decorated with strings of colored lights and a lighted star of Bethlehem on the chimney.

Mr. and Mrs. Paap are assisted in their decorating tradition by their sons, Jay and Ricky, and their daughter, Mrs. Albert Williamson and her children, Johnny, Jay, Jennifer and Janie.

Harry S. Arrasmiths Being Honored Today

Family and friends are invited to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry S. Arrasmith, 2111 E. 64th St., this afternoon and evening to take part in a reception noting the couple's 50th wedding anniversary.

Hosting the celebration are their sons and daughters-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon D. Arrasmith of Torrance, and Mr. and Mrs. Glen H. Arrasmith of Long Beach.

The occasion has resulted in the first family reunion in many years for Mr. Arrasmith and his four sisters from Iowa, Mmes. Grace Paullin, Ethel Wolfe, Hobart Garwood and Charles Wilson, as well as brother-in-law, Hobart Garwood and Charles Wilson.

MR. AND MRS. Arrasmith were married Dec. 25, 1912, at Guthrie Center, Iowa, in a double wedding ceremony with Mrs. Arrasmith's sister. Coming to California in 1935, they have resided in Long Beach for 25 years. Mr. Arrasmith is a retired electrician.

In addition to the two sons, they have four grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Have Money in Bag, Santa; Local Femmes Want Everything From Horse Blankets to Cold Cash

By MARY ELLIS
L. P-T Fashion Editor

Dear Santa: You'd better have lots of green stuff in the bag this Christmas.

Because most every woman wants money, lots more money—but only, Santa, if you're a husband or close relative.

She also likes fine jewelry, elegant clothing, luxurious wool sweaters, good perfume, lingerie, books and magazines, gloves and candy.

The green stuff, she says, is good for taking advantage of after-Christmas sales, for paying off bills and for getting those things she wants that she didn't get for Christmas in the first place.

• • • •

THESE COLD CASH facts came to light in a national—also local—survey among wives, students and career girls on gifts they'd most like to find under the tree Christmas morning.

In the national survey, 36 per cent of the women questioned listed real fine jewelry and watches as their first choice. Books and sweaters ran a dead heat at 31 per cent.

Money and gift certificates were preferred by 28 per cent followed by clothing, furs, lingerie, handbags and good perfume, in that order.

• • • •

GOLF AND BOWLING enthusiast Mrs. Daniel W. Farnham is among the large group of local femmes who wants money (from the near-and-dear) in her Christmas nylon.

Other Santas please bring sports clothing for golfing or bowling, says she.

Housewife and clubwoman Mrs. Robert Barmeyer is dreaming of a pink Thunderbird—pink only, please. "But I don't think Santa will bring it in any color," moans she. "I put in the same order — unsuccessfully — last year."

Mrs. Willis S. Kerr wants a new house—and has it. The Kerrs will move into their just-finished, custom-built home in the La Mirina addition Christmas Eve or Christmas Day.

• • • •

MRS. BILL BOYD, wife of the local Chamber of Commerce public relations exec, has home; wants chairs. Two swivel type, please.

If they're too big for the chimney (or pocketbook), she'll settle for "some expensive perfume — because that's something I won't buy for myself."

Local model agency owner Elda Barry wants to be wrapped for Christmas in a full-length mink coat.

Newspaper gal Joyce Kent, who already has her two front teeth, wants an electric toothbrush . . . and to go with the resulting pearly gleam, a jeweled cashmere sweater.

Lu Duvall isn't laying down any laws for Christmas. She already has her present—she's just been admitted to the California Bar.

• • • •

IN A PHILOSOPHICAL mood, Rick Rackers chairman Mrs. C. Robert Langslet wants peace and goodwill, health and happiness for all.

"If we have all those," says she, "material things will take care of themselves."

Local realtor Gene Page, who's been head over heels in community projects the past several weeks (vice-president and membership drive chairman for the Naples Improvement Association, chairman of the Women's Chamber of Commerce float for the Naples Parade of Lights, also BPW, church work and you-name-it) asks the impossible—for her, anyway:

She wants peace and quiet!

Most unusual request of all comes from Mrs. Jack Haden, local clubwoman. She wants a horse blanket!

For her quarterhorse, Peteo, that is.

He's going to Bay Meadows next week for his first race," she explains. "And the last time he was up there for workouts, he caught cold."

• • • •

WHICH ALL goes to prove, fella Santas, you can't ever tell about a woman. She may want anything from horse blankets to cold cash.

Besides that, she's been known to look a gift horse in the mouth.

So if you want to keep smiling, better study your gal before buying her Christmas present—but don't ask her, she hates that. Ask a friend or drop a delicate hint.

Otherwise you'll find her returning such things as clothing (wrong size), lingerie and pajamas (wrong size or color), cheap perfume or jewelry (she hates those the most).

Besides, she'll need some extra cash after Christmas to buy what she wants.

Gift Wrap, Please!

Even the Pros Get Tied in Knots

By MARY NETH

If wrapping up Christmas has you in a tangle, pity the girl in the department store.

It's a safe bet that if she's behind the gift wrap counter, she's knee-deep in tissue paper and up-to-her-ears in rush orders.

Take, for example, the girls at The Broadway. Their job of turning out some 300 gift packages a day is a scramble with problems knottier than just tying on bows.

But, holiday onslaught or not, they stand firmly behind their motto "if you can buy it, we can wrap it."

Sometimes it's no small job.

Ever gift wrap a living room chair, or an ironing board, or, for that matter, a tether ball pole or a rocking horse?

They have and they've learned not to wilt (noticeably, at least) when a shopper-on-the-run deposits one and gasps out wrap it up fancy, I'll be back in five minutes."

BUT, THE BIGGEST HEADACHE is boxes. "We have every size of cardboard container imaginable, but sometimes the shape of a fashionable new handbag just can't be imagined," says Mrs. Kenneth Beaman, head of the department.

What then? "The girls make a corrugated one—quick," she says. "When it comes to sizing-up, they need a sort of second sight—there is no time for trial and error."

Also needed: an artistic flair, a streak of Scotch thrift and, of course, nimble fingers.

"One of those many-armed Hindu goddesses would be a surefire success around here," says Mrs. Beaman. "We need all the hands we can lay our hands on."

THE STORE, which doubles its staff for the stepped-up Santa season, hasn't as yet drawn any multi-armed applicants. But, it does have a top crew of extras (housewives and college girls) who return year after year.

"They're accustomed to working in an atmosphere that would make a riviter wilt. And, they all have real talent when it comes to prettying up a package."

And who asks for the fanciest wraps?

"The men," she says. "Women are more conservative, they usually take the free courtesy pack."

But, don't let this fool you. All that glitters is not necessarily gold, for according to Mrs. Beaman, it's the least expensive gift that often comes in the most elaborate package.

She sees it as a trend. "The idea is to make a $5 present look like a $10 one," she says.

Another trend—the rage for one-for-all gifts. "It's the painless way to shop. You pick out 100 coat hangers or 80 desk calendars and have them wrapped individually."

TO THE GIRLS in the service department, who'd cheerfully wrap an elephant (if you could buy one in the store), such big orders are all in a day's work

South Bids Five Hearts

When you make up problems in play you can't always create good bidding at the same time. Says Eddie Kantar, "If you don't like South's bidding, it's my fault. I had to figure some way of getting South to five hearts. Four hearts is too easy."

If South were in six hearts he would win the opening lead; play one trump, cash two high clubs, and try to ruff a club in dummy in order to discard losers on the ace and king of diamonds. Playing at five, South has a far better, but very complicated, play. He starts by letting West hold that first spade trick. Remember South is trying for five hearts—not six.

• • • •

SOUTH wins the second spade, cashes one trump as he would have done at six and goes after the clubs. West ruffs the third club and South throws the last spade from dummy. West has to lead a spade or a diamond. In either instance South wins in dummy and gets rid of his last losing club.

We also see why South ducked that first spade. Had he not done so West could put East in with a spade. East would lead the queen of trumps and dummy would be dead.

He's Impressed--Why Shouldn't She Be?

Dear Molly Mayfield

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

This is my first year at this college and I have pledged a fraternity. It's just great, but it's giving me an inferiority complex.

In one class, a classy girl has really taken my fancy. She didn't notice me though, until the night our fraternity had a function with the sorority she belongs to. Now she is friendly and acts like she's asking for a date.

I want to date her, but I wonder if she only likes me because of my fraternity. Are all girls this shallow and rate boys by what they belong to instead of what they are?—SOMEBODY

DEAR SOMEBODY:

Be a little more elastic, frat friend. The girl may be more impressed with your connections than with the real you—but, so what? If you really like her, second impressions can fix all that.

But why, thinking college man, come to the conclusion all girls may be this shallow? That's surely not thinking in depth. And I bet you'll stick with your shallow thinking no matter what I say.—M.M.

• • • •

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

I'm 29 and have never been kissed. I know I'm ugly and I have the personality of a mud fence. Besides which I'm uneducated. But I'm in love.

I fell for my attractive lady doctor and she is about ready to marry another doctor. I keep faking illness to get to see her and I'm running out of money to pay her. Isn't there something a woman of your experience could say to soothe me?—MR. Z.

DEAR MR. Z.:

You're not faking. You are sick. Sick to think I'd believe a word beyond your disclosure that you're almost 30 and still unkissed. My right eye!—M.M.

• • • •

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

How, oh tell me, how do I curb my husband's "giant" thinking? He insists on accompanying me to market. Once there he heads, like a magnet to filings, to the giant economy-size.

We do not need 100 pounds of flour, 100 pounds of sugar, 100 pounds of potatoes or even a 10-year supply of powdered milk. If markets sold food in box-car containers, he'd be first at the tracks. He doesn't want, you see, to "run out."

It does no good to reason with the man. It does no good to explain he will run out—of space. And though he's an outstanding mate in every other respect and I adore him, we are running out of space.

Please come to my rescue for I have become a

—SUPERMARKET OF MY OWN

DEAR SUPERMARKET OF MY OWN:

My gosh, I'd get a turnstile—and a checkstand to check the man. Then I'd interest the neighbors at least in the produce at hand.

But you may not have my checker inclinations. In which sad case, I guess, professional head shrinking is next. I don't like the term used, usually, but it does seem to fit your giant thinker, hmm?—M.M.

Top Bridge Teams Vie for Trophies Friday

It will be the battle of the century, say bridge fans—with all proceeds going to charity.

The two top teams from the 32 knockout units who participated in last summer's bridge tournament, will meet in a two-session, winners-take-all, including the Bixby trophy, Friday in the Lafayette Hotel Grand Ballroom. Sessions will begin at 2 and 8 p.m.

Featured will be Capt. Erick Paulsen's team—Alex Tschekaloff, Ralph Kempner, Harold Simon and Mike Shuman—and Capt. Richard Walsh's team—Helen Portugal, Morris Portugal, Duke Dartell and Art Baron.

The "battle of the century" will be followed by the Holiday Championships, the Long Beach fifth annual sectional tournament, Dec. 29-Jan. 1 in the Lafayette. The championships will be climaxed by a New Year's party, beginning at 11 p.m. Dec. 31 with dancing, champagne, fun and favors. Robert Sterett is chairman of the Long Beach sectional committee with Jim Chambers tournament director and Marshall Ketchum tournament manager.

'Carnival' Is Coming to Southland

"Carnival," the Broadway hit that won the New York Critics Award for the best musical of the year, will play in Santa Monica Civic Auditorium Jan. 9 and 10. Concerts, Inc. is presenting the attraction.

"Carnival" was written by Michael Stewart and is based on material from the Helen Deutsch screen play, "Lili." The score is by Bob Merrill, one of America's foremost composers of popular songs. Producers are Lee Guber, Frank Ford and Shelley Gross by arrangement with David Merrick.

• • • •

THE TENDER love story of a shy, young girl and a sullen, embittered puppeteer, "Carnival" co-stars Elaine Malbin of the San Francisco and NBC Opera companies, and David Daniels, recipient a few years ago of the Donalson and Theater World Awards for his performance on Broadway in "Plain and Fancy."

Currently on a 100-city tour of the country, "Carnival" carries with it a company of 50, including its own orchestra and stage technicians.

Two Operas to Debut on West Coast

During the coming season, the Conservatory of the California Institute of the Arts, formerly the Los Angeles Conservatory of Music, plans to present several works which never have been performed on the West Coast. Under the direction of conductor Isaac Van Grove, the works to be presented as a double bill in March are "Robin and Marion," a dramatic pastorale by the 13th century trouvere Adam de la Hale.

The first comic opera, said to be the oldest preserved French play with music on a secular theme, has been arranged for modern performance by Van Grove.

• • • •

THE SECOND work is a revival of "The Beautiful Galatea" by Franz von Suppe. "Galatea" was composed over 100 years ago and contains delightful and scintillating tunes. Both operas will be given in English. Costumes and settings will be created by the fashion and design departments of the Chouinard Art Institute.

Isaac Van Grove is remembered for his conducting at the Chicago Grand and Civic Opera Companies, and as accompanist and coach for Mary Garden, Grace Moore, Edward Johnson, Enrico Caruso, and many others.

Casting for both operas is now in process. For further information, phone or write Dean's office at the Conservatory, 607 S. Parkview St., Los Angeles.

IN SHAKESPEAREAN ROLES
Maurice Evans and Helen Hayes will appear in Southern California for the first time in many years when they bring "Program for Two Players" to Los Angeles Philharmonic Auditorium Jan. 18 and 19. The program is made up of adaptations from 17 of Shakespeare's comedies and tragedies.

Art From Thailand Is Intriguing, Tantalizing

By VIRGINIA LADDEY
Staff Writer

More than 50 paintings from Thailand are at Long Beach Museum of Art, 2300 East Ocean Blvd. until Jan. 13. Unfortunately, they are not accompanied by text to explain the provocative, tantalizing goings-on in each scene. Viewing them is rather like seeing a drive-in movie from afar without the benefit of sound.

A general statement hung with the show, circulated by the Smithsonian Institution, states that it is difficult to see these as the Thai, with their background of Buddhism, do. Each painting depicts an episode in the life of Buddha during his incarnation on this earth. The purpose of these is "to instruct, guide, and inspire the devout by holding before their eyes scenes of moral value and religious history."

• • • •

THIS INTENT is similar to that of the painstaking illuminations and altar pieces of Early Christian and medieval days. Similarly, the diety is highlighted in gold leaf, size and position relationships are not rational but accord with hieratic degree, color and pose are not naturalistic but are symbolic and conventional.

Evidence indicates a long tradition in Thai painting, but the damp climate combined with perishable materials (cloth and handmade papers) have left us only those from the 18th century onwards.

Despite conventional form, non-Western perspective, and inaccessible story-line, these works are most enjoyable. A little imagination will infuse the original splendor into the colors. The elaborate dress of the main actors, the arabesque forms, the ornamental patternings bring close the view of life of a far country in a far time.

BUDDHA WAS BORN, miraculously, as Siddhartha, to a queen in 563 (?) B.C., and at an early age began showing evidence of miraculous gifts. He was married to a princess at the age of 16, and was made king. However, upon the birth of his son 13 years later, he realized worldly ties were tightening and left home to find Enlightenment (Nirbanna or Nirvana) as a mendicant ascetic monk.

This way did not prove fruitful and gradually, he understood that a path midway between earthly indulgence and self-mortification was the one of wisdom. He began preaching and sharing the Enlightenment which incurred the wrath of the ascetic monks. These tempted him in many interesting ways and attacked him and his followers.

• • • •

IN HIS 80TH decade, Buddha knowingly ate spoiled food and passed on to the next life amid many miraculous manifestations.

Buddhist dogma has evidently catalogued the activities of each day in this sacred life, touched on lightly in the above explanation, and the present exhibit illustrates many of these episodes.

MAJOR & MINOR NOTES

William Primrose Is Superb Violinist

By RACHEL MORTON
L.A. F-P-T Music Critic

Remembering the superb concerts I heard at the Pilgrimage Play Theater when William Primrose, violist, cellist, and Jascha Heifetz, violinist, in string ensemble playing that was the ultimate in perfection, I could not believe it possible when Primrose said to me:

"How was I to earn a living when there were no solo engagements?"

William Primrose, the world's greatest viola player, was telling me about the difficult years during World War II.

"But then came the break of my life," he related. "I happened by chance to run into my good friend, Richard Crooks, the tenor, and he casually asked how I would like to go on tour with him and share the program."

• • • •

NEEDLESS TO SAY, he grasped out eagerly for the opportunity and for the next four years they concertized together all over the United States and Canada.

"Richard Crooks is a great guy," Primrose informed me. "He insisted that my name should be of equal size as his own in the program and in the lights over the theater. And he had it put in the contract."

I asked him how he happened to meet Jascha Heifetz.

"I'm not one to write fan mail," he said, "but after hearing one of Heifetz's records I wrote him a glowing letter. He sent for me, suggesting I might like to play string quartet music with Piatigorsky, Israel Baker and himself. We have been meeting in one another's homes, playing the music we love, for many years."

• • • •

THIS MARVELOUS ensemble was heard recently in three sold-out concerts in the San Francisco Opera House. The recordings of the Pilgrimage Play Theater concerts are just now available with Leonard Pennario, playing the piano part in the Cesar Franck Quintet.

The legend of Heifetz's aloofness was proven true when Primrose told me that he had known Heifetz and played in ensembles with him for ten years before he called him by his first name!

A little incident was amusing as Primrose told it.

• • • •

"ONE NIGHT I stayed up all night drinking beer and matching the Dempsey-Tunney fight. The next night I did not play so well at a concert. To my amazement the first person back stage to congratulate me was Gene Tunney himself. I apologized for my bad playing and told him why it was bad.

"Don't apologize to me!" Tunney exclaimed. "You are a champion and I am an EX-CHAMPION."

William Primrose has been twice married. His first wife was an English woman who studied with the famous lieder singer, Elena Gerhardt. His present, charming wife is a young American whose happiness comes in carefully watching over their three young children. They make their home in Brentwood. Primrose teaches viola at USC and privileged are the pupils who now study with the world's greatest viola player.

Van Gogh Museum Will Be Monument to a Mad Genius

AMSTERDAM, The Netherlands (UPI)—Seventy-two years ago, briefly before his death, Dutch artist Vincent Van Gogh wrote to his brother Theo, "You have certain canvases which even in the midst of ruin retain their serenity."

The ruin Van Gogh referred to was his own turbulent, tormented life. The canvases were his work, his genius.

Van Gogh, known in his time as "the crazy redhead of Arles," knew no peace or stability. But, by act of the Dutch Parliament nearly three quarters of a century later, his paintings will find a setting of serenity and permanence to give mute witness to his talent.

In about five years, the "Van Gogh State Museum" will open its doors in this cultural and business center of The Netherlands.

It will house 150 paintings and 400 drawings by Van Gogh and more than 150 works of such other famous artists as Corot, Daumier, Manet, Onticelli, Pissarro and Toulouse-Lautrec.

The Dutch Government bought the lot not long ago from 72-year-old Vincent William Van Gogh, the Dutch painter's only nephew, at the bargain price of $5,123,565. Nephew William could have got more, perhaps three times as much, by selling them abroad. But he wanted the paintings to stay in the country where his uncle was born and grew up.

• • • •

THE ART TREASURES will be property by the Van Gogh Foundation but will be under the control of the Dutch Government which paid for them.

The only condition to the sale was the museum itself. It was specified that the structure be a state museum named after the painter.

It will stand as a living memorial to the red-haired, freckled youth who grew up to become the eccentric but great painter all the world remembers today.

He was a clergyman's son who flopped as a lay preacher.

He failed as a lover and worked like a mad man, at one time spending a year in a mental hospital after despair and unhappiness closed in.

Yet the man who once, in a rage, cut off one of his own ears, painted supremely.

• • • •

ON THE WALLS of the Van Gogh State museum will hang much of the proof. "Pear Tree," "Cornfield," "The Bridge" and "Boats on the Beach," to name just a few.

One Sunday morning, in July, 1890, Van Gogh took a walk in Auvers, where he painted some of his most beautiful landscapes. He shot himself with a pistol and died two days later.

Just try to categorize him, OR his accent! It'll take some doing!

Today's Chef of the Week is Chaplain Robt. F. Gunter, director of pastoral care at Long Beach Memorial Hospital. He conducts the only accredited program of its kind on the West Coast.

Gunter is a sportsman, too—an interest he is instilling in his four children, Robert Jr., 12, David, 8, Karen, 5 and Dawn, 3. The star pitcher on the hospital's soft ball team, he also serves as official chaplain for the City College football squad.

Chef of the Week

A great camper, Gunter, is described as somewhat of a "desert rat." In fact, it's debatable whether the objects he gathers are just plain rocks or precious relics of Indian pottery.

• • • •

Chaplain Robert F. Gunter

BORN IN Whites Chapel, Ala., the family moved to Pell City, Ala., when he was a 9-year-old. His first interest in sports evidenced itself at the Tennessee Military Institute, Sweetwater, Tenn., where he played football, basketball and went in for track.

Came World War II, and his scene of operation changed. He toured the European theatre for three years as a member of General Patton's Third Army.

Returning to the States in 1947, he entered Howard College, Benningham, Ala., from which he received his Bachelor of Arts degree. Continuing on to the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Tenn., he received his Bachelor of Divinity, and subsequently his Masters in Theology.

• • • •

WITH HIS degrees accounted for he proposed to THE southern girl from Talladega, Ala., whom he had met at Howard College and was accepted. Mrs. Gunter is now a registered nurse and in-service instructor at Memorial Hospital.

• • • •

AFTER A year's residency at the North Carolina Baptist Hospital, Winston-Salem, N. C., he became a member of the permanent teaching staff in charge of marriage counseling.

In April, 1960, he accepted his present postion in Long Beach. His work here is non denominational and includes hospital visitation and counseling of patients. Extremely popular and well attended is his 20-week training course for young ministers, as is the class he conducts for seminary students during the summer. The students are given credits at accredited schools.

A Rotarian, Gunter serves on the board of directors of the Red Cross, the TB Association and the Long Beach Council of Alcoholism. He is past president of the Long Beach Ministerial Union.

With little time for hobbies, he concentrates on photography, both stills and movies. It's obvious he enjoys cooking. Otherwise he'd have chosen a real simple recipe, or, at least, given authorship of it to his wife. It's for pizza.

GUNTER'S PIZZA

2½ lbs. prepared pizza dough
2 lbs. Italian sausage (hot, medium or mixed)
2 small cans tomato paste
¼ tsp basil
Oregano
¼ tsp. soda
2 tsp. salt
½ cup diced onion
¾ cup diced green pepper
1 lb. Mozzarella Cheese
1 cup mushrooms, sliced

Let dough rise 1 to 1½ hours. Grease two-15" pizza pans lightly with olive oil.

Cook together: tomato paste, (add 2½ cans of water for each can of paste), soda, salt and 1 teaspoon oregano. Stir and let simmer.

Break up sausage in small pieces and brown lightly, with onion, in small amount of oil. Add to tomato mixture and simmer 1 to 1½ hours. When done, drain excess fat with gravy baster.

Preheat oven 375-400°.

Roll dough very thin. If lightly floured it rolls more easily. Press dough into greased pan and pour sauce, dividing equally. Sprinkle with diced pepper and mushrooms. Slice Mozzarella cheese over top and sprinkle generously with oregano.

Bake 20 minutes, or until crust curls away from edges. Excellent served with olives and cubes of Provolone cheese.

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

A Promise Is a Promise

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am so mad right now I am seeing red! I want to find out if my daughter did the right thing. She is 17 and her name is Annette. Three weeks ago Annette's best girl friend asked if she could borrow her floor length formal for the prom. Annette had just broken up with her steady and had no hopes of going to the prom herself, so she said yes. The night before the prom one of the nicest boys at school called and asked Annette to the prom. She said NO because she had promised her dress to her friend. I say she was a fool. She should have said YES and asked for her dress back. What do you say?—ANNETTE'S MOTHER

ABBY

DEAR MOTHER: I say you should be proud of a daughter who puts her promise to a friend above a date to the prom. Too bad Annette didn't think of "borrowing" a dress from another Cinderella who wasn't going to the ball.

• • • •

DEAR ABBY: Do you have any suggestions on how to handle a 16-year-old son who threatens to beat you to death with his fists? I am 52 and can no longer handle him. I have had to back down from several challenges lately and it is undermining my position of authority. He reads your column. In fact, I think it's the only part of the paper he reads.—DAD

DEAR DAD: Apparently when you were bigger and stronger than your son, you controlled him by the threat of your physical strength. You taught him well that might made right. Now he is reacting to your own harsh form of discipline. Or he might be emotionally disturbed. Consult a doctor on how to re-establish normal relations with him.

DEAR ABBY: There is a boy at school who asks the girls if he can kiss them to see how their lipstick tastes. He says he can tell if their lipstick is expensive or cheap. What do you think of such a boy? He is in the 9th grade—NINTH-GRADE GIRL

DEAR NINTH: When a boy wants a kiss, one excuse is as good as another. But if a girl lets an acknowledged "lipstick taster" get that close, the GIRL is cheap.

• • • •

DEAR ABBY: Please help me. I know what you will think of me when you read the unforgivable thing that I have done. I am married to a wonderful man. I have three beautiful children. They all favor their father. I have reason to believe I am expecting another man's child and I am sick with shame. So many innocent ones will be hurt by it all. Should I tell my husband the baby isn't his? He would surely know it because he and this man are as different as night and day. I have thought of leaving him and the children, but I have no place to go. I have also thought of taking my life and the little life to come, but I can't bear the thought of leaving my children motherless. Please tell me what to do. I am—SUICIDE BENT

DEAR SUICIDE BENT: Don't tell your husband (or anyone else). The baby could be your husband's. Stay home and resolve to be a good mother to ALL your children, and a good wife to your husband. Pray for forgiveness. (The Lord is merciful.) And ignore all alternatives except remaining where you are and doing your job.

DEAR READERS: If you have sent for the pecan pie recipe I offered and have not as yet received it, please be patient. I have had over 100,000 requests.

LONG BEACH

FIFTH DC-8 JETLINER for Iberia Airlines of Spain takes shape on the Long Beach Douglas Aircraft Division assembly line. Iberia recently ordered a sixth DC-8, one of a series of contracts involving six airlines in the last two weeks. Orders totaled 10 DC-8 Jetliners for a value of nearly $70 million. Iberia Airlines has been buying Douglas planes since the '30s.

DC-8 Orders at $70 Millions in 2-Week Period

By VERN ANTHONY
Southland Progress Editor

Plans are under way at Douglas Aircraft Division in Long Beach for production of the largest diversified series of orders for the DC-8 jetliner since the first flood of block orders when the program started in 1957.

Six airlines have ordered 10 of the giant swept-wing transports in the past two weeks for a total announced value of nearly $70 million, with necessary spare parts.

Latest in the purchase announcements which came almost daily during the phenomenal fortnight was the order by Delta Airlines last Wednesday for two Series 50 fanjet models to bring their fleet of DC-8s up to an even dozen.

• • • •

OTHER CONTRACTS announced by airlines and Douglas include two Series 50 DC-8s for Air Afrique, one Series 50 for Iberia Air Lines of Spain, two Series 40 DC-8s for Alitalia, one DC-8F for Capitol Airways and two DC-8F Jet Traders for the Flying Tiger Line.

Air Afrique, Capitol and the Flying Tigers had not previously operated Douglas jets and their orders raises the number of DC-8 purchases to 25.

Operated by a consortium of 11 African republics, Air Afrique is the national airline of Cameroon, Central Africa Republic, Congo Ivory Coast, Dahomey, Gabon, Upper Volta, Mauritania, Niger, Senegal and Chad.

• • • •

THE CONTRACT was signed at ceremonies attended by Cheik Fal, president of the airline; A. V. Leslie, vice president-finance, and M. E. Oliveau, Douglas European vice president.

The contract calls for delivery of Series 50, turbofan-powered Jetliners in October, 1963, and January, 1964. The DC-8s will be operated over routes linking principal cities of the 11 countries with France.

Purchase of a DC-8 by Iberia Air Line of Spain will be that company's sixth Douglas jet transport. The Series 50 intercontinental fan jet will be delivered in September, 1963.

• • • •

LT. GEN. JULIAN Rubio, president of Iberia, accepted delivery of the airline's fourth DC-8 last October at the Aircraft Division. The fifth Jetliner will be presented to Iberia in May, 1963.

Iberia's association with the company dates back to the 1930's and the DC-1, first of the famous commercial transports.

'CASTLE IN SPAIN' AT ORANGE

Dreams Come True for Area Restaurateur

By KEN KNIGHT

ORANGE — Elegant, sumptuous, luxurious, unique and different — all of these could be used to describe the Villa Fontana, Orange County's newest and most "posh" restaurant.

Situated in the swank 33-acre Town and Country Shopping Center on Flower Street just adjacent to the Santa Ana Freeway, the Villa Fontana is the realization of a dream for Cary Sinclair.

SINCLAIR

The 33-year-old restaurateur, born in Buena Park and reared in Long Beach, has incorporated all his ideas of what a fine restaurant should be into the "villa" — and it shows it.

• • • •

STRETCHED ACROSS one wall is a facing of 400-year-old hand carved Cordovan leathers and opposite it is an intricately formed gate of iron facing made 200 years ago to serve as the entrance to a castle in Spain.

Then, if this isn't enough, the walls of the two-part dining section are handsomely covered with a wallpaper pattern — one that was painted on by hand.

Gazing down on the diners are statuary collected by Sinclair during his world travels. And diners are served at their tables as they sit in shell-shaped chairs upholstered in antique gold leather.

• • • •

THE HALF-MILLION DOLLAR dining "spa" is based upon the experience gathered by Sinclair during his extensive restaurant experience.

After leaving Long Beach and graduating from City College, Sinclair attended Cornell University and while there became an executive of the nationally known firm of "Restaurant Associates."

While with the firm, he operated some of the organization's largest restaurants.

Returning to Orange County he planned and developed Villa Fontana imitating and incorporating ideas from restaurants he has seen and operated.

• • • •

THE CUISINE is continental and is prepared under the supervision of Rene Schmitt, a graduate of the L'Ecole Hoteliere of France, the top culinary school in Europe.

But despite all the ornaments, decorations and motif, Sinclair bases his success on three precepts:

'Hire the best people," "buy the best food," and "give the best service."

DINING OUTSIDE when weather permits, patrons are warmed by radiant heating and entertained by strolling musicians.

ANTIQUE GOLD LEATHER chairs and antique chandelier are features in Villa's grand salon. Hand-carved rosewood screen serves as room divider.

U.S. Plywood Names New L.B. Manager

William H. Petersen has been named Long Beach manager for United States Plywood Corporation.

Petersen comes to the position from the company's Los Angeles branch where he was an outside salesman. He joined U.S. Plywood in Chicago in 1952, moving to Culver City in 1958 and to Los Angeles in 1961.

Petersen replaces Ray Kelley, who was named assistant director of the company's West Coast Purchasing office in Eugene, Ore.

Economists Stress Tax Cut Factor

Leading economists in the nation expect 1963 will be only moderately good, unless there is a tax cut in the first quarter, according to the 16th annual economists' opinion poll conducted by F. W. Dodge Corp., New York City.

The 209 economists surveyed, representing business, government and universities, do not expect a recession next year, nor do they predict any real buoyancy in the economy.

The first half of 1963 is forecast as a period of no change and the second half as a period of moderate recovery.

THE ECONOMISTS polled in the Dodge survey favor such terms as "stall," "mark time," "dead center" and "sideways" to describe the opening months of 1963. They feel the upward movement in the second half will not be vigorous.

The majority of the economists replying to the survey indicated that their forecasts would be significantly raised if income taxes are reduced early in 1963.

The comment of one of the economists generally reflects the view of the 209 economists participating in Dodge's 16th annual survey:

"The possible reduction of federal taxes will play an important role in the 1963 economic picture. . . . A negative decision from Washington on lower taxes will have a depressing effect on the economy while a contrary decision will accelerate the key economic indicators to new highs."

• • • •

HIGHLIGHTS of the economists' replies follow:

GROSS NATIONAL PRODUCT . . . is predicted to rise to $572 billion in the fourth quarter of 1963. It will total $565 billion for the full year, up 2 per cent from 1962.

CONSUMER SPENDING . . . up 2.5 per cent for the year to $365 billion.

GOVERNMENT SPENDING . . . the fastest rising category of spending; $124 billion in 1963, up 5.5 per cent.

TOTAL CONSTRUCTION . . . another record year, with public projects up sharply offsetting weakness in residential building.

INDUSTRIAL PRODUCTION . . . no change in the yearly average, but a drop in the first six months followed by strong recovery.

HOUSING STARTS . . . down 4 per cent in 1963; private, non-farm starts totaling 1,325,000.

INVESTMENT . . . off 3 per cent at $74.3 billion.

UNEMPLOYMENT . . . per cent unemployed to average 5.9 in 1963.

PRICES . . . wholesale prices steady at 101; consumer prices edging up one per cent to 106.5.

INTEREST RATES . . . about the same or slightly lower.

The DC-8f Jet Trader, purchased by Capitol Airways, Inc., of Nashville, Tenn., will be used for private charter and for contract work for Military Air Transport Service.

Delivery of the plane to Capitol, a supplimental carrier operating 40 aircraft, will be in August, 1963.

The Jet Trader, only convertible cargo-passenger transport now flying, carries as many as 189 passengers or can be converted to all-cargo status to transport 95,282 pounds. Passenger-cargo mixes also can be made.

• • • •

FLYING TIGER Line, leading all-cargo carrier in the United States will accept its two DC-8F Jet Traders in January and March, 1964.

Robert W. Prescott, Flying Tiger president, said the long range, high-speed jets will be used as the airline's prime carrier in work for MATS as well as for commercial freight hauling.

Freight is loaded into the DC-8F through an upward swinging cargo door forward of the swept wings. Up to 13 cargo pallets, each 88x108 inches, may be carried in the all-freight arrangement.

$17 Million Project Slated by Del Webb at San Diego

One of the largest commercial projects in San Diego history will boost that city's economy beginning next July when the Del E. Webb Corporation launches a $17 million downtown hotel-garage-office building complex.

To be known as First National Center, it will bring several innovations in hotel and office building construction and operation.

One skyscraper will house a 700-car garage, a 300-room TowneHouse hotel, and a restaurant, convention hall and cocktail lounge in 24 levels.

Opposite the garage and hotel will be a 20-story office building with First National Bank as prime tenant.

• • • •

CONNECTING the two buildings across "B" Street will be 25-foot-wide pedestrian crosswalks at fifth and eleventh floor levels. Access will be provided from the project to both Marston's department store and the San Diego Athletic Club.

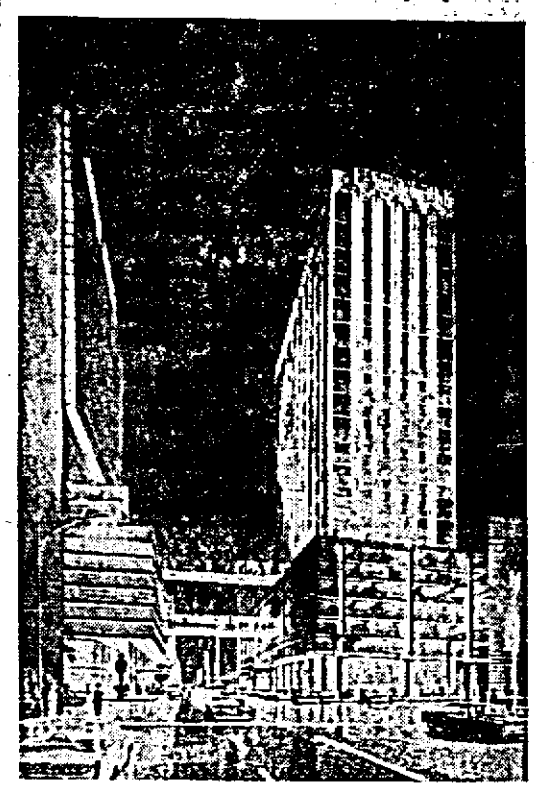

"The eleventh level, where a glass-enclosed concourse will connect plazas around both buildings, and where a restaurant, ballroom and cocktail lounge will be located, will become 'the place to visit,' predicts Webb vice president Richard M. Wartes.

Wartes, as manager of the firm's commercial division, made the announcement in San Diego with representatives of First National Bank and Broadway-Hale department stores, and Ewart Goodwin, leasing agent and president of Percy Goodwin Co.

SQUARE FOOTAGE of both buildings is 750,000. Highest point of the complex will be 279 feet above street level. The ballroom will seat 800, the dining room 250, and the cocktail lounge 165.

Before going to his hotel room on one of the top 11 floors, a guest will be able to register from his car at street level, where a coffee shop is also located.

Architect for First National Center is Flatow, Moore, Bryan and Fairburn of Phoenix and Albuquerque.

PLANNED BY DEL WEBB CORP.
Innovations in office buildings and hotel construction and operation will be incorporated into the First National Center complex to be built and operated by the Del E. Webb Corp. in downtown San Diego. Razing is expected to begin in July, with completion of the 24-story hotel and garage, and 20-story office building in mid-1965. This architect rendering shows pedestrian crosswalks connecting the two structures.

Garden Park Estates to Close Sales Offices for Christmas

MASTER BEDROOM OF HOME
Garden Park Estates offers a wide variety of home stylings, including an extra-large home which has a fireplace in the second-floor master bedroom.

"Hearty Season's Greetings and A Merry Christmas to All" is extended by officials of Garden Park Estates, who explained that this home community at Knott Ave. and Garden Grove Freeway, will be closed Tuesday, Dec. 25, so that all of the staff may celebrate Christmas Day with their families.

* * * *

A new unit of quality-built and luxuriously appointed one and two-story residences has just opened at Garden Park Estates, once again affording one of the most comprehensive selection of diverse architect-designed residences available. And, the spokesman said, this is not just a diverse selection of exterior elevations, it is also an exceptionally wide selection of floor plans.

* * * *

BECAUSE OF THIS, home shoppers have come from all over Southern California, it was explained. There are two-bath plans with two bedrooms and a convertible den, expressly created for those who want a spacious home but fewer rooms, and plans with three and four bedrooms plus dining and family rooms in the one-story designs.

For the really large family, there is Garden Park Estates handsome, Award-winning two-story series. These are very spacious homes encompassing two full stories, and designed with five bedrooms, three bedrooms on the second floor, and two on the first. These homes are further distinguished by two beautiful fireplaces: one in the living room and the other in the second floor master bedroom.

* * * *

BUT GARDEN Park Estates popularity as a residential community does not rest on variety alone. Among the top reasons for the peak sales, is quality construction. Garden Park Estates' homes are constructed with genuine lath and plaster walls and ceilings that are fire-resistant and "soundproof," rockwood insulated ceilings for comfort control, sliding glass doors with aluminum frames and sliding aluminum windows, custom selected lighting fixtures, roofs of red cedar or crushed rock and clean, durable concrete driveways.

"Easy to own" financing terms are another important sales incentive. Garden Park Estates homes, despite their luxurious appointments, are fully priced from $18,250 to $25,600. Veterans have terms of nothing down except impounds and closing costs on VA loans with monthly payments from $101.00 including principal and interest, or Cal-Vet. There are also good conventional loans, and there is choice of 30 or 35-year FHA loans.

With exception of Christmas Day, Garden Park Estates model home display is open seven days a week. From Long Beach, drive east on Seventh St. which becomes Garden Grove Freeway (Garden Grove Blvd.) past Long Beach State College, straight to Knott Ave.

Home Sale Boosted by Christmas Offer

According to Stan Rossi, executive sales manager for S. V. Hunsaker & Son builders and developers, 17 homes were sold last week at Huntington Beach Sunshine Homes. He attributes this favorable buyer acceptance to the fact that home buyers wanted to take advantage of the free gift of a completely fenced rear yard and front yard landscaped as Christmas present.

Huntington Beach Sunshine homes have been planned to meet every family need, stated Rossi, and offer the home buyer a choice of three or four bedrooms, family room, two full baths, and two-car garage. Unit 2 homes may be purchased with no down payment and unit 3 homes with $95 down plus nominal impounds. Immediate occupancy is available.

THE INTERIORS feature the best of West Coast thinking and have wall-to-wall carpet, ultra-modern kitchen equipped with built-in range and oven with hood and exhaust fan, Fabricon counter tops, vinyl tile, natural finish cabinets, and disposal. Specifications also include metal sliding windows with screens, floor to ceiling wardrobe doors, and many large clothes closets.

Located close to excellent schools, grammar school through junior college, Huntington Beach Sunshine Homes are rapidly accesible to industrial area via freeways. Shopping centers, churches, beaches, and recreational areas are nearby.

Furnished model homes are open daily for inspection from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Unit 2 homes are located on Golden West and Smeltzer Ave. Unit 3 homes, located adjacent to a park site, may be seen on Golden West and Edward sts.

BUDGET-PRICED HOME
Huntington Beach Sunshine Homes, Units 2 and 3, have been planned to meet every family need and convenience yet the residences are offered at prices within the average family's budget.

Tustin Bond Issue Sold to BofA Group

TUSTIN—A Bank of America N. T. & S. A. underwriting syndicate has purchased the $984,000 bond offering of Tustin Union High School District.

The bank group paid a premium of $199 for a combination of 3½% and 3¼% bonds. Net interest cost to the district was 3.34%. The bonds were reoffered to investors to yield from 2% to a dollar price of par on the 3½% bonds, according to maturity Jan. 1, 1964-88.

Proceeds of the issue will be used for various school purposes.

Tidewater Pakistan Drilling Is Failure

LOS ANGELES—Tidewater Oil Co. has abandoned its Kech Band No. 1 wildcat well in Baluchistan, West Pakistan, at a total depth of 10,987 feet, Thomas G. Kelliher, general manager of Tidewater's International Exploration and Production Division, announced Saturday.

Kelliher said the test had failed to find any indications of commercial oil or gas production.

With the abandonment of the well, Tidewater will phase out its exploration program in West Pakistan, Kelliher reported.

Tidewater is revamping its foreign exploration policy and intends to confine future efforts to areas which have proven to be productive of oil and gas, principally in North Africa, Kelliher said. He stated that the company will be interested in participating either in established production ventures, or in exploration concessions in areas of Algeria and Libya that have proven commercially productive.

Marineland's PR Man Leaves

Marineland of the Pacific announced that its public relations director, Clyde Tussey, will resign to join a new public relations and advertising company in Santa Ana.

He will leave the oceanarium at the end of the year to join Joseph P. Valen, Orange County advertising man, in forming the new firm of Valen & Tussey, Inc.

Offices will be at 1823 East 17th St., Santa Ana, where Valen has operated the past year.

Tussey leaves Marineland after five and one-half years at the oceanarium. He originally came to Marineland as an account representative from McFadden & Eddy Associates, which has been Marineland's public relations agency since 1956 and continues in the same capacity. Tussey lives at 732 Calle de Arboles, Redondo Beach.

Hyatt Chalet Opens Motel in Las Vegas

A deluxe 60 unit motel has been opened on the "Strip" in Las Vegas by Hyatt Chalet Motels, Inc., of Sepulveda. The half-million dollar installation is part of the same chain as the Hyatt Chalet Motel at 1121 Pacific Coast Highway in Long Beach.

The three story Las Vegas structure has a guest elevator.

Like the Hyatt Chalet in Long Beach, the new motel features an Alpine Swiss motif, with a bold red A-line roof dominating the exterior of the building. The motel is the ninth of over more than 200 planned by the parent company, a co-owner operated chain.

Employment Agencies Unit Stages Yule Party for Boys

Sixty boys at the Las Palomas Juvenile Hall Facility in Downey were entertained by the South Coast Chapter of the California Employment Agencies Association Thursday night.

Sally Haines, chapter president, lauded the committee chairmen, Dick Jones, Joe Filing and Claire Carmody, and other members of the Long Beach area group for helping with the party.

They were assisted in their efforts to play Santa Claus by generous donations from Mattel Toys, Inc., Revell Toys, Inc., McCoy's Markets, Helms Bakeries, Seven-Up Bottling Co., Frito-Lay, Inc., Ruchti Bros. Meat Co. and the All American Nut Co.

Entertainment was provided by Keith Houdyshell, public relations representative of the Bank of Belmont Shore, and the appearance of Ed Roebuck of the Los Angeles Dodgers, who autographed baseballs for the boys.

Pantry Markets Building in Los Coyotes Shopping Center

Pantry Markets will begin major expansion into the Long Beach and Orange County area, with construction of a store in the Los Coyotes Shopping Center in north Long Beach.

Ted. R. Wood, Pantry president and general manager, said the firm's 11th store would be its third outside of the Pasadena area and its first in the southern section of Los Angeles County.

The 18,600 square feet market will be built by Ernest W. Hahn, Inc. Design of the pre-cast concrete structure was by Quesada and Brown, A.I.A.

PANTRY'S Long Beach store will be located at the intersection of the Los Coyotes Diagonal and Palo Verde Avenue, and is part of a shopping center being developed by E. W. Mullins. Easily accessible parking will be provided for 135 cars.

The building will be of contemporary design with color highlights given by a glass mosaic under the front show windows and the light canopy structure.

Inside the structure will be six high-speed checkout stands, a 100-foot-long delicatessen section, a completely open meat market, an extra large frozen food section and an air curtain dairy box.

* * * *

HEATING for the market will radiate from the floor—a new Pantry feature. The store will also be completely air-conditioned.

Other features include terrazzo floors, pastel colored walls, three-dimentional counter markets and a 90 foot long and six foot high mirror to augment store guides.

Completion date of the structure is set for mid-April. Other locations for Pantry Markets in the Long Beach-Orange County area will be announced later.

UNDER CONSTRUCTION
Construction has begun on Pantry Market's first store in the Long Beach area, in the Los Coyotes Shopping Center. Ernest W. Hahn Inc. is general contractor on the project designed by the architectural firm of Quesada and Brown.

MEDALLION HOME LIVE BETTER ELECTRICALLY

"I build all kinds, but I live in a Medallion Home"

"I've been building homes for over 11 years for people who want to 'get away from it all.' Today, nearly every one wants a Medallion Home even as a vacation retreat," says Mr. Beck. "With the solid trend to electric living, people want all the modern electric conveniences they enjoy in their city homes.

"My own family is convinced anything less than a Medallion Home today would seem old-fashioned."

Experienced builders like Mr. Beck recognize the Medallion Home Award as a cornerstone for modern living—a solid basis for a home's lasting value today, and in the future.

Before you buy, compare the detailed electrical construction requirements for the Medallion Home Award with those of any other type of new home symbol. You'll discover that this is one award that requires a new home to conform to specific and rigid standards that mean important values for the buyer. Look for the Medallion Home Award. Here are just some of its qualifications:

1. A flameless electric kitchen equipped with major appliances, including range and oven.
2. Full "Housepower" wiring—provides capacity for at least twenty circuits, considered a minimum for modern living; large enough wires; 240-volt service for the electrical capacity every home needs.
3. Abundant lighting—planned for comfort, convenience and beauty.

A total-electric Gold Medallion Home gives you all these benefits plus:

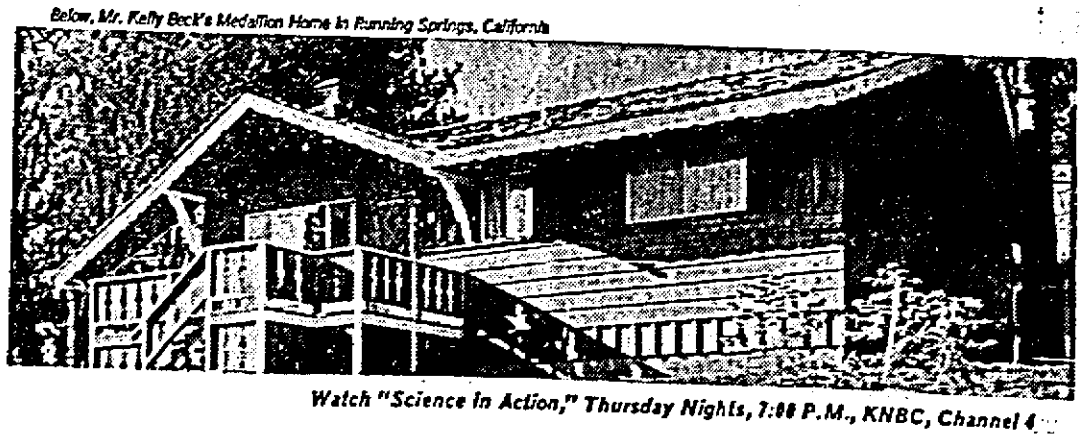

4. Flameless electric heating for clean, steady, even heat in every room.
5. Flameless electric water heating—there's no cleaner, quieter, quicker way to heat water.

LA REINA RULE

WHAT YOUR NAME MEANS

Send your name to LaReina Rule in care of Southland Magazine, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach 12, Calif., for origin, meaning and brief geneology, for reply only in this column.

DEAR MISS RULE: What is the source of TROWBRIDGE?—Mrs. J. T., Anaheim.

J. T.: TROWBRIDGE originated in the English county of Wiltshire, from a town by that name. "Treow-brycg," the Saxon source phrase, meant "treebridge or wooden bridge." The Trowbridge lineage includes Richard Trowbridgge, as well as William and John Trowbrugge, Somerset land owners in 1272. The family shield from Devonshire has a 3-arched bridge supporting a castle tower flying a pennant, on a gold background. Massachusetts records of 1718 list the wedding of Caleb Trowbridge and Hannah Walter.

DEAR MISS RULE: Please give the source of WRIGHT. —B. M., Los Angeles; Mrs. O. W., Garden Grove.

B. M., O. W.: WRIGHT was the medieval English designation for a specialized master-carpenter. This name was usually shortened from "wheel-wright," (wheel maker) or "cart-wright" (cart maker). The Wright shield granted in 1509 is blue, emblazoned with three gold leopard heads. Deacon Samuel Wright was among the honored 17th century founding settlers of Massachusetts.

DEAR MISS RULE: Please inform us on FARRELL and FERRELL. — H. H., Long Beach; Mrs. R. S., Lakewood.

H. H., R. S.: FARRELL and FERRELL began as the Irish clan O'Fearghail, meaning "sons of the most valorous one." This lineage originated in County Longford, where they ruled as barons for centuries. Family branches lived in Donegal, Tyrone and Wicklow. The clan shield is green, emblazoned with a gold rampant lion in the center. Nineteenth century records show four Ferrell families in Floyd County, Ind.

DEAR MISS RULE: Please give genealogy on MOONEY. —D. M., Lakewood; C. M., Long Beach.

D. M., C. M.: MOONEY is the modern spelling of the Gaelic Irish clan name O'Maonaigh. This family descended from Collade-chrioch, an ancient Irish ruler. Three branches of Mooney forebears are recorded in Erin, one from the shores of Sligo Bay, another from Roscommon and the third from southeast Galway. O'Maonaigh ancestors were prosperous, for their name translates as "sons of the wealthy one." An alternate meaning was "sons of the one without speech." The Mooney shield has a golden lizard placed across the center of a green holly tree as emblems on a shield tinted silver with a checkered pattern of green and silver bars around the edges.

DEAR MISS RULE: What is the history on OSBORNE—J. M., Garden Grove; M. O., Harbor City.

J. M., M. O.: OSBORNE is an English respelling of an ancient Norwegian-Viking baptismal name, "As-Beorn," meaning "divine warrior." Far back in British history Osbern, son of the Earl Siward, was killed in battle in A.D. 1054. He was part of the English army that fought Macbeth, the Scotch king famed from Shakespeare's play. The Osbornes were important south English land owners in Kent from 1460 into the 1800s. Their shield is covered with blue and ermine fur tails, emblazoned with a golden cross in the center. The Osborne motto "Pax in bello" deciphers as "Peace from war."

DEAR MISS RULE: Kindly analyze ROMERO. — C. H., Long Beach.

C. H.: ROMERO, a Spanish name, was handed down by a participant in the 12th century religious Crusades to Palestine. The family ancestor, followed his return to Spain from the Holy Land, was called a "romero" or "pilgrim." High ranking Romero descendants is Castile were granted a coat-of-arms, two standing wolves placed one above the other on a red shield. During the late Middle Ages some Romeros migrated from Spain to Italy where they also achieved prominence.

DEAR MISS RULE: Please give data on HEDTKE.—H. H. Long Beach.

H. H.: HEDTKE, traced to its 13th century German root word, is based on the archaic warrior name Hadu, simply meaning "warrior." Hadu was transformed to Hedt and later augmented with the nickname suffix "-ke" meaning "little," in this family's north German home district.

DEAR MISS RULE: Please give data on LeROY.—S. M., Long Beach.

S. M.: LeROY, an ancient French name, means "king," and was adopted by a villager who played the part of a "king" in an annual, popular religious pageant. Yearly usage of the term for an ancestor over a decade resulted in his being nicknamed "Le Roy." Eventually this phrase became his family name. The LeRoy shield is silver, emblazoned with a red chevron placed below three black heraldic birds and above a black lion.

Cover

For the past several years, Southland has been privileged to reproduce the appealing Christmas cover illustrations that helped make Norman Rockwell famous as America's most vivid portrayer of Santa Claus. But the tall, slender artist asserts that he is no Christmas buff. He likes Christmas but has never dared play Santa Claus, doesn't help with the family Christmas shopping, has never sung carols under others' windows, likes to be indoors when it's snowing and dodges carving the holiday turkey as too great a challenge. He portrayed Christmas for the first time in his career as illustrator 36 years ago. Since that time his magazine covers have won fame around the world and his Christmas cards for Hallmark have ranked among the best sellers, even becoming collectors' items.

This Week

In the explosion that is Southern California's development in recent years, homes that served the pioneers well are disappearing as progress commandeers new sites for expansion. So it is with Long Beach. Many of the homes of a bygone era, pretentious and otherwise, have already gone; more are going. One of these dwelling places that has played a major role in Long Beach is the central theme of Maymie R. Krythe in "Oldest Long Beach Homes, Going, Going . . ." in next week's Southland.

YEAR'S END ROUNDUP OF

Mirthful Moments in Sports

By Jerome Hall

IT'S TIME for those "Most dramatic moments of the year" stories. It's time to recap the 12 months and retell some of the incidents that are worth retelling.

But in the important recounting, there must be room for a collection of vignettes from the world of sports—just small slices of everyday life among the national heroes, and maybe even a peek at the goats.

Take, as a starter, the case of the anonymous gentleman who returned a wheelchair to Dodger Stadium when he read that the cripple he stole it from was penniless. He left a note pinned to the chair that said "I feel terrible. I thought it was Walter O'Malley's property."

A thief thought a wheelchair at Dodger Stadium belonged to Walter O'Malley, stole it.

BASEBALL came in for a long length of laughter. When Houston manager Harry Craft was asked before the past season where he expected his team to finish, he told the interviewer: "In San Francisco on September 30th." The interviewer protested. "No, I mean how high?" Craft was equal to it. "About 19,000 feet in a DC6," he said, and that ended the interview.

The 1962 World Series produced a wealth of mirthful conversation because of the long delay in completing the seven games. There was, for instance, the announcement over the loudspeaker by baseball commissioner Ford Frick during a rainstorm that was drenching Yankee Stadium: "It's clearing up in New Jersey."

When the rains came to San Francisco, delaying the Giants-Yankees inter-league playoff, Frick went to the ballpark one morning, surveyed the water-soaked diamond and said: "If it would stop raining and we'd get a real good wind, it would help." Before noon a gale hit San Francisco. It ripped roofs off some Northern California residences.

Basketball wasn't immune to mirth. When a San Jose State player was declared ineligible, causing the school to forfeit nearly all its games because he had played two years at USC which he neglected to admit on his entrance papers, the San Jose athletic director said:

"We still think he is a fine boy. We just wish he had a better memory."

FOOTBALL? Lots of laughs.

Minnesota Coach Murray Warmath, who coached in the past Rose Bowl, said this season, "It seems there's a strong tendency to want everyone on the campus to be a student."

And then there's the case of the football coach at Kansas State. He was hanged in effigy in front of the campus library and commented: "I'm glad it happened there. I've always stressed scholarship."

The quarterback at the University of Pittsburgh recently commented to reporters: "We've got the worst coaching staff in the country. I've made two big mistakes in my life. One was coming to school here. The other was staying."

Then there was the high school correspondent who rushed to the newspaper office after the big game and wrote how his team "ran up a 35-point lead at halftime and coasted to an impressive 40-36 triumph."

IT WAS NEVER recorded exactly what George Lee, veteran professional basketball player, said after an accident while posing for photographers on opening day of training. The picture-taker said jump higher. He did, and broke his toe.

Norm Van Brocklin, now coach of the Minnesota pro football team, was conducting a post-game interview with reporters after the Green Bay Packers had run up 48 points on his boys. Suddenly Van Brocklin stopped answering questions and bolted toward the door, cracking "Let's get out of here before the Packers score again."

Cassius Clay, the heavyweight boxer, is fast becoming the clown prince of sport. When champion Sonny Liston commented recently that Clay can't punch hard enough to break an egg, Cassius retorted: "Why don't he get in front of me and pretend he's an egg?"

Cassius Clay has last word in verbal duel with Sonny Liston over who's best fighter.

If the wind would just blow to dry out the field . . ." said Ford Frick. And then . . . !!!

Deck the Hall With Boughs of Holly

Deck the hall with boughs of holly,
Fa la la la la, la la la la.
'Tis the season to be jolly,
Fa la la la la, la la la la.
Don we now our gay apparel,
Fa la la la, la la la.
Troll the ancient Yuletide carol,
Fa la la la la, la la la la.

Joy to the World

Joy to the World, the Lord is come.
Let earth receive her King.
Let ev'ry heart prepare Him room,
And Heav'n and Nature sing,
And Heav'n and Nature sing,
And Heav'n, and Heav'n and Nature sing.

O Little Town of Bethlehem

O little town of Bethlehem,
How still we see thee lie.
Above thy deep and dreamless sleep
The silent stars go by.
Yet in thy dark streets shineth
The everlasting light.
The hopes and fears of all the years
Are met in thee tonight.

Away in a Manger

Away in a manger,
No crib for His bed,
The little Lord Jesus
Lay down His sweet head.
The stars in the sky,
Looking down where He lay,
The little Lord Jesus
Asleep in the hay.

Hark! The Herald Angels Sing

Hark! the herald angels sing,
"Glory to the new-born King,
Peace on earth and mercy mild,
God and sinners reconciled."
Joyful, all ye nations rise,
Join the triumph of the skies,
With th' angelic host proclaim,
Christ is born in Bethlehem!
Hark! the herald angels sing,
"Glory to the new-born King!"

Silent night, holy night,
All is calm, all is bright,
Round yon Virgin Mother and Child.
Holy Infant so tender and mild,
Sleep in heavenly peace,
Sleep in heavenly peace.

Jingle Bells

Dashing through the snow
In a one horse open sleigh,
O'er the fields we go
Laughing all the way,
Bells on bobtail ring,
Making spirits bright,
What fun it is to ride and sing
A sleighing song tonight!
Jingle bells, jingle bells,
Jingle all the way.
Oh, what fun it is to ride
In a one horse open sleigh!

O Come All Ye Faithful

O come all ye faithful,
Joyful and triumphant,
O come ye, O come ye to Bethlehem,
Come and behold Him,
Born the King of Angels,
O come let us adore Him,
O come let us adore Him,
O come let us adore Him,
Christ the Lord.

O Holy Night

O holy night, the stars are brightly shining,
It is the night of the dear Saviour's birth.
Long lay the world in sin and error pining
Till He appeared and the soul felt its worth.
The thrill of hope the weary world rejoices,
And yonder breaks a new and glorious morn.
Fall on your knees,
O hear the angel voices,
O night divine,
O night when Christ was born,
O night, O holy night, O night divine.

God Rest You Merry, Gentlemen

God rest you merry, gentlemen,
Let nothing you dismay,
Remember Christ our Saviour
Was born on Christmas Day;
To save us all from Satan's pow'r
When we were gone astray
O tidings of comfort and joy, comfort and joy;
O tidings of comfort and joy.

It Came Upon the Midnight Clear

It came upon the midnight clear,
That glorious song of old,
From angels bending near the earth
To touch their harps of gold,
"Peace on the earth, good will to men
From heav'n's all gracious King."
The world in solemn stillness lay
To hear the angels sing.

We Three Kings of Orient Are

We three kings of Orient are,
Bearing gifts, we traverse afar
Field and fountain, moor and mountain,
Following yonder star.
O Star of wonder, Star of night,
Star with royal beauty bright,
Westward leading, still proceeding,
Guide us to the perfect light.

He Acted With the Real Greats of Silent Films

(Editor's note: Jasper Likes, author of this article, was in motion pictures from 1915 until 1921. Then he served 31 years as a Superior Court clerk, the last 25 years in Long Beach. He retired May 1, 1952. Jasper does not mention it in this article, but he wrote several successful songs, including "Carmelita" and "Wake Up, Henry." The Long Beach Municipal Band arranged "Carmelita" and plays it every once in a while.)

IT WAS 1918 and I was working at the Lasky Studio in a night scene in a munitions factory. I wore overalls, a flannel shirt, a laborer's cap.

From the distance came the tinkle of a piano. In a secluded corner a young man, dressed the same as I, was playing a Chopin Nocturne on an old grand piano. Then he sang a couple of songs in Spanish. One was "Cielito Lindo."

He introduced himself as Ramon Samaniego. I remembered his name because it rhymed with San Diego. He said he was 17 and had come from Durango, Mexico, six months earlier. He was picking up a little money teaching music and hoped to get a start in pictures. He was a handsome boy with nice manners and I thought his chances were good.

He talked about Mexico that day. He was homesick and said the orange blossoms were sweeter in Durango than anywhere else.

Later I met him on the street in Los Angeles and he said with a wan smile he had a job in Cohn's grocery at Third and Broadway.

Shortly afterwards he got his first big break in the part of Rupert of Hentzau in "The Prisoner of Zenda."

Rex Ingram, director, changed his name to Ramon Navarro.

Later, when I saw him on the screen as a star in the silent version of "Ben Hur" and many other pictures, it was hard to realize he was the same wistful, timorous boy I had known so long ago.

YES, I REMEMBER Navarro. My memory often takes me back to the heyday of silent films—I played in many of them—and great stars like Bill (Hopalong) Cassidy, Wally Reid, Mabel Normand, Madame Nazimova, Louise Fazenda, and, among others, Monte Blue....

I once found a piano on a deserted set and played a few pieces on it. I looked up and saw the grinning face of Monte Blue above me. He reported his discovery to a director and thereafter I was the piano player in many western dance hall and saloon scenes, including "The Good Bad Man" with Douglas Fairbanks and "Burning Daylight," Jack London's great story of the north.

"Too Much Mustard," "Missouri Waltz" and "Maple Leaf Rag" were popular, and "The Moonlight Sonata" got its share of attention, too.

Monte and I were neighbors and used to wait for the street car together at Santa Monica Boulevard and Vine Street. He was under contract and I was still free-lancing. Usually he boarded the car first and paid the fare for both of us. Once I slipped in ahead of him and paid both fares. He made the conductor give the money back to me. That's the kind of guy he was.

I HAD A 6 a. m. call at the Lasky Studio. The studio entrance was locked. It was midwinter, dark and cold.

Another young fellow arrived. He was decked out in riding breeches and boots. I detected a bit of Oklahoma in his speech. He kicked the door repeatedly and merrily until the watchman let us in.

His dressing room was two doors from mine. His name was Bill Boyd. We were going on location to Santa Barbara. Bill and I piled into the same car. Good reason—it was the best one and two pretty girls already were seated in it.

On the way back, the moon came out and it was a lovely, cool California night. We were hungry and Bill suggested we catch up with the prop truck which was loaded with food. We had a grand time driving along the sea in the moonlight, eating sandwiches and drinking milk out of a bottle. I wonder if Bill remembers that.

He was 26, but his hair already was graying. His success in "The Volga Boatman" and many other pictures, his decline and then his phenomenal comeback as Hopalong Cassidy still were far in the future.

I WORKED more with Wallace Reid than any other star. He was a genial fellow with an unpredictable sense of humor. In "The Love Burglar" I played a waiter in a Barbary Coast saloon. Wally was supposed to order beer and in the run-throughs he did.

But when it came to the take, I asked, "What'll yo have?" Wally answered, "Bring me a couple of lady fingers."

I kept a straight face and brought him beer and the scene was saved. Somewhere I still have a photograph of that scene.

WITH MY MAKE-UP on, I strolled around the lot one morning to see what was doing on the other sets. A lady and gentleman sat in front of a clump of bullrushes on the bank of an artificial pond. They smiled pleasantly and invited me to join them.

The little lady—they both were rather small — produced a jar of stick candy and explained that it was her favorite candy. We chomped stick candy together and chatted.

The next day I repeated the performance and had another delightful visit with my friends. I seldom have met a more charming couple.

On the way back I stopped at the wardrobe master's window and asked who the nice people were.

"Mr. and Mrs. Harry Houdini," he said.

WHEN THE casting director at the Goldwyn Studio wanted me to play an elevator boy in a comedy scene with Mabel Normand, my enthusiasm wasn't kindled. I was fond of Mabel and liked to work with her and her director, Victor Schertzinger, but I always had felt that in comedy I was about as funny as an epidemic. The comedy was "Upstairs."

Geraldine Farrar, the Metropolitan Opera star; her husband, Lou Tellegen, star and director; Lawson Butt, English actor, came to watch, as guests. I was nervous in the rehearsals, and Miss Farrar nodded encouragement to me.

Then came the take. I still felt that Chaplin's laurels were safe. I expressed regret to Schertzinger that I hadn't done better.

He looked surprised and said, "Why that was fine, son. I'm satisfied."

When I saw it on the screen of a downtown

Stage Coach West

As the West developed, many forms of transportation and communication played major roles. Above, the artist Vincher portrays four of these systems: Pony Express, stagecoach, covered wagon, and new telegraph of 1860s.

By Hortense Hoffman

FAMOUS Concord coaches, brought by Clipper ships around Cape Horn, were reported June 24, 1850, on the streets of San Francisco. First governor of California, Peter H. Burnett, left for San Jose on one of Crandall's stages.

"On this occasion he drove and I occupied the top front seat beside him. The distance was some 50 miles, most of the route being over smooth, dry, hard prairie; and there was some of the most rapid driving that I ever witnessed. People flocked to the road and without slackening our speed, we took off our hats, waved them around, and shouted at the top of our voices, "California is admitted to the Union! Steamer news!"

The Concord was a coach built, from 1813, by the Abbott-Downing Co. in Concord, N. H. This historic factory covered four acres of ground, shipped to Mexico, South America, and even South Africa and Australia.

THE PRINCIPAL feature of its construction was that the body rested upon thorough braces, two stout leather straps attached to C-shaped braces fastened firmly to the front and rear axles, allowing the egg-like body to rock back and forth. There were usually upholstered seats for nine passengers inside and room for a dozen passengers on top of the coach. At the front and rear were boots, leather-covered triangular racks for mail, express and baggage. Directly under the driver's box was a chest for gold dust, bullion and anything of great value.

These coaches weighed about 2,500 pounds and sold in California for $1,200 to $1,500. Each wheel spoke hand-hewn from ash, body paneling of well-seasoned oak, iron from Norway, and 40 years of experience, attained excellent workmanship. On roads of unbelievable roughness, driven at breakneck speed, 10, 12, even 15 miles per hour, they needed little or no repairs.

Over heavy grades on mountains, and worse, a mud wagon was used. Also slung on thorough braces instead of main springs, this was built lower to the ground to reduce danger of overturning, and seated about a dozen passengers in the wagon, with or without a top awning.

THE STAGES were drawn by four to six horses or mules, controlled individually. The "expert driver, or "whip," was an heroic character of the Old West, the idol of the stableboys, a wizard holding ribbons, he careened down mountains, safely traveled unlit trails through the night, or stormy weather, foiled hostile Indians, outwitted hold-ups, and held profane but pronounced opinions on every problem of state, religion and life. The teams had been driven in by emigrants or agents, from Ohio, Kentucky and Virginia, and were valued at $2,000 to $4,000 apiece.

Mark Twain has left an entertaining description of his journey in "Roughing It" v.1 (Harper c1871). He left the states from St. Joseph, Mo., had to discard all but 25 pounds of baggage, and pay $150 to reach Carson City, Nev. His brother and he took blankets, canteens for water, five pounds of smoking tobacco and pipes, and a little shot-bag of silver coin to pay for uneatable breakfasts and dinners at stations.

"Our coach was a great swinging and swaying stage—an imposing cradle on wheels. . . . By the side of the driver sat the conductor, the legitimate captain of the craft, for it was his business to take care of the mails, baggage, express matter and passengers."

DURING the night a thorough-brace broke because of the overloading with three days mail. After it was mended about half of the mail was repacked and the seats turned down so the three passengers had a bed on mailbags, and the thorough-braces were protected. The mail that was abandoned beside the road would have to wait until someone came from the next station. They changed to a mud wagon and were afraid of being shipwrecked in the desert because of quicksands. When the mud-wagon broke down, they went on a buffalo hunt.

They saw the Pony Express rider carrying letters, from St. Joseph to Sacramento (1,900 miles, in eight days).

"In a second or two the speck against the sky became a horse and rider, rising and falling, rising and falling—sweeping toward us, nearer and nearer—a whoop and a hurrah from our upper deck, wave of the rider's hand, and man and horse burst past our excited faces, winging away like belated fragments of a storm."

"He rode 50 miles without stopping, by daylight, moonlight, or blackness, on a splendid horse, born for a racer. As he came crashing up to the station, two men were holding a fresh, impatient steed, the transfer of rider and mailbag being made in the twinkling of an eye."

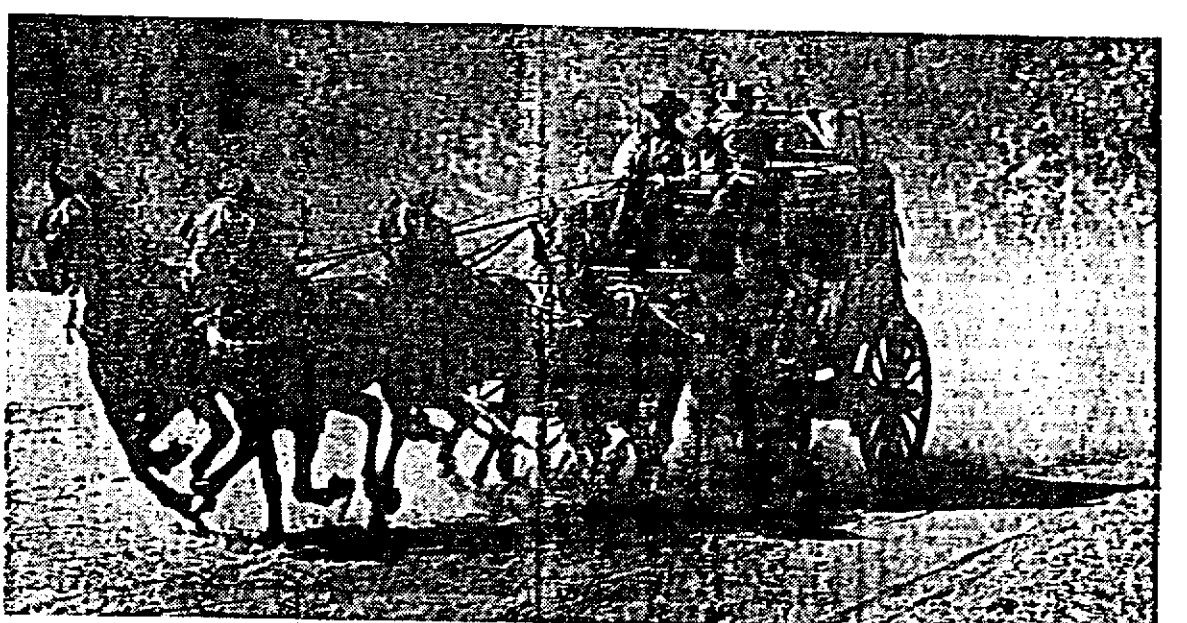

THE STAGECOACH could travel from 100 to 125 miles a day and the Pony Express about 250. There were 10 riders going east and 10 going west, using 400 horses every day in the year. The stage changed horses or mules 10 or 12 times in every 24 hours, requiring but four minutes for the hitch.

The stage had made 798 miles in eight days and three hours when they passed a Mormon emigrant train of 33 wagons, dozens of coarsely clad, sad men, women and children, who were walking as they had for eight weeks, over the same road the stage had been driven.

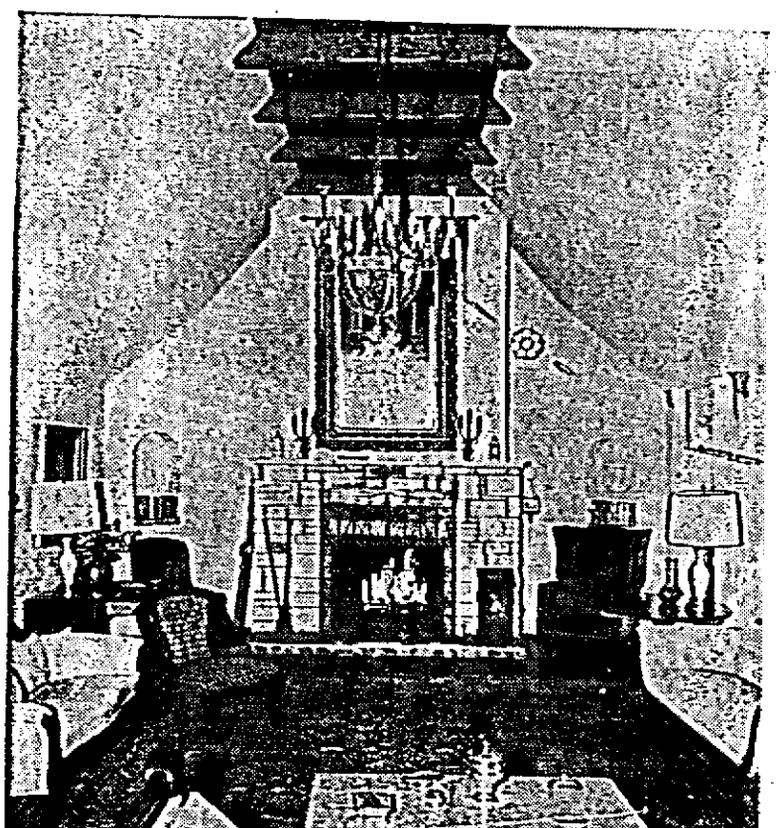

At one stop, they had time to bathe in a creek, and at another, their only memorable meal, a breakfast of hot biscuits, fresh antelope steak and coffee. On the 16th day, they met some Goshoot Indians; small, lean, scrawny, wretched creatures, bearing dirt accumulated on their miserable persons in months, years, even generations.

On the 18th day, 156 miles from their destination, they encountered the eastern-bound telegraph constructors, and sent a message to the governor of Nevada. Forty miles of sinking desert sand, and then, on the 20th day, in clouds of alkali dust, they arrived at the tiny wooden capital of the Nevada Territory, disembarked, and the stage drove on.

Only a century later, 501 traffic deaths, during a weekend and a holiday, gave proof that the wheels of progress turn swiftly.

In the settlement of the West, the stagecoach played a sturdy and prominent role, and left a romantic heritage that still stirs modern imaginations in pounding, dramatic performances as movies relive frontier.

This Man's Home Is a Castle

Exterior view of the C. C. Winslow home.

By Stella George

WITH THE AIR of a small castle and with the decor of French Normandy, the C. C. Winslow home at 5668 Naples Canal is intriguing without and surprising within. There's no match for its many unique qualities in Naples or, for that matter, anywhere in Long Beach.

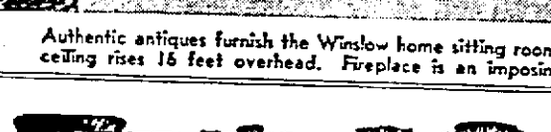

An initial entry hall in this home leads to a second entry hall straight ahead, the stairway to the right, and this, in turn, has a small area at the rear of the first landing. In reality, the landing area is a tiny sitting room where one person may sit to read or relax.

Unusual details in the home, for example, the windows alone are objects of art. Leaded diamonds include small pieces of colored glass here and there among the panes.

AN OPEN-WORK door of carved wood leads from the inner entry to the dining room at the left. An iron grill door leads from the hall to the living room at the right. Here, the slanted ceiling of the room is 16 feet high in the center which is beamed. The room is furnished in authentic antiques and carpeted with a Persian rug. A handsome and majestic fireplace dominates the far end of the room, with a large painting placed above its mantel.

Besides the butler's pantry and kitchen, there is a den downstairs.

THE MASTER BEDROOM upstairs is spacious, with twin four-poster beds taking up only a little room. Brocade is framed and used to cover the walls, each

Christmas Tree Decorations A Menace to Carpets

If you're planning big Christmas tree decorations involving the use of paint, paint sprays or soaping down the limbs for the holidays, look out for what can happen to your precious rugs and carpets. A few spilled drops left unremedied can lead to carpet disaster.

If paint is involved, the National Institute of Rug Cleaning recommends you take immediate action before the paint has a chance to set up and become hard. The materials you should use can usually be found in the home.

In the case of a latex, water resistant varnish, or oil stain accident on a rug, the removal procedure is to first remove the excess with a spoon and absorb with clean white tissues. Then, work a small amount of neutral detergent (one teaspoon of neutral non alkaline detergent to one half pint of water) into a small area and absorb into tissues. It is best to wear rubber gloves and use fingers to work solution in. Using the fingers lessens the mechanical agitation. Continue procedure until stain has been removed. Place one-half inch of clean tissues on area and weight down for four to six hours.

For accidents involving lacquer, wood varnish, wood enamel, metal enamel or alkyd resin—a lacquer thinner, brush cleaner, or turpentine will usually do the job.

Again—remove excess with a spoon and blot with clean white tissues. And, as before, continue applying small amount to area and blot. If turpentine is used, a dry solvent (dry cleaning fluid) will probably have to be used to remove the turpentine.

The following precautions should be observed:

Always test solution on inconspicuous area of rug to test for effect on fiber and dyes.

Work from the outside towards the middle of the spot.

Keep mechanical agitation to a minimum.

Blot. Don't rub.

Use small amounts of liquid.

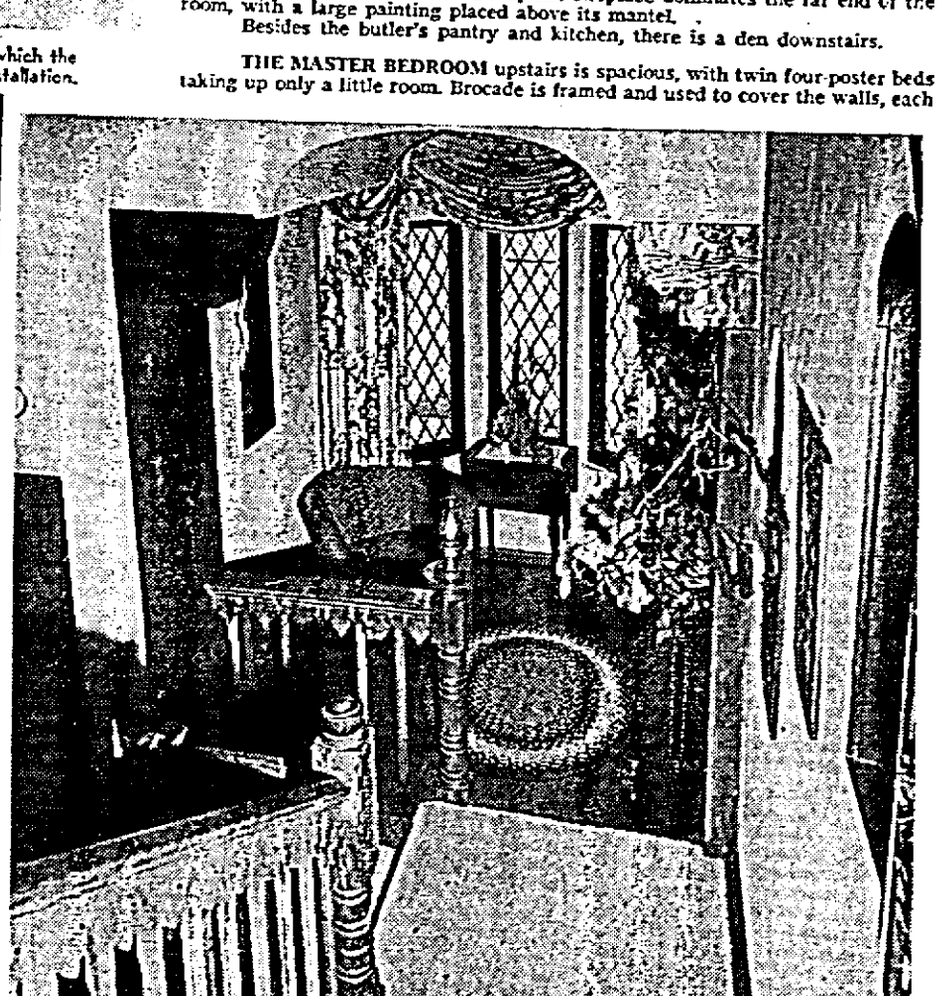

Keep solvents away from latex back.

Allow solvent spot to dry with lots of air.

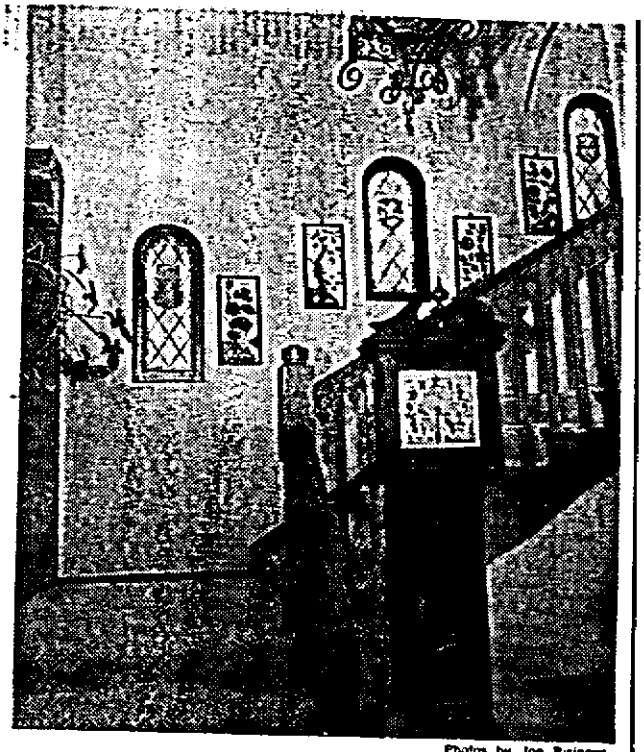

If the spillage is large or a problem arise, call WEINHEIMER RUG & UPHOLSTERY CLEANERS GE 3-9906 3720 E. Fourth St. Long Beach

Merry Christmas and Happy New Year!

Tiny sitting room adjacent to stairway landing is viewed here from the top of the stairs. Heavy beam treatment and detail of the hand railings are noteworthy features.

Another view of the stairway, showing the interesting wall treatment and a sturdy old clock standing guard.

frame customed to the size of the space it has to cover. This bedroom has its own entry hall and a walk-in closet that is almost a small room in itself.

The bathroom is deluxe both in size and decor. Jet black is the predominating color, very effective around the large sunken bathtub. Walls are covered with silk cloth. The wash basin is in the center of a large dressing table recessed in one wall.

The second bedroom also is large and has its own noteworthy details. Corners of the walls near the ceiling were curved to provide room for indirect lighting. A small, multi-colored glass window on one wall overlooks the stairway and front door below.

ONE DOOR in the long upstairs hall would appear to lead to a linen closet; instead, it opens to a tiny stairway at the left which, in turn, leads to a small, semi-circular room, completely private and hidden from view. It is used as a study, and decorated to serve this purpose well.

In this same area, is another surprise across the way to the right of the stairs: a playroom or den which, in every detail, is designed like a ship's cabin! There is metal instead of wood; portholes instead of windows, and bunks in place of beds or couches. And to top off the surprises in this area, there is still another small study or room with access from a ladder in the ship's cabin!

The home was built long enough ago to allow the foliage, trees, plants and shrubs to have attained full-grown beauty. Home and setting might have been transplanted from another country, to be sure, but the warmth and hospitality to be found in the home is as American as the newspaper which lands on the front step each evening.

Comforts of the home and the pleasure of waterfront living are shared by Winslow on weekends with his daughter, Miss Barbara Winslow, a teacher at Camp Hi-Hill.

Raisins Play a New Holiday Role

By Mildred K. Flanary

Southland Magazine Home Economics Editor

TRADITIONAL favorites and brand-new goodies are the epitome of gracious entertaining in the holiday season.

California raisins, a traditional ingredient in most holiday desserts, turn up in a cloud-like filling for tarts this season. These glamorous new desserts are the petite kind, just right to display on a tiered plate or silver platter.

Chop the raisins and cranberries before adding to the creamy sherry accented chiffon filling. Pile into flaky pastry shells and chill until set. For added flair, garnish each little pastry with sugary coated candies in a rainbow of colors.

Holiday Raisin Tartlets

⅔ cup dark or golden raisins
¼ cup sherry
2 teaspoons plain gelatin
½ cup orange juice
3 eggs, well beaten
⅔ cup sugar
1 tablespoon lemon juice
⅛ teaspoon salt
½ cup finely chopped raw cranberries
1 cup whipping cream
1½ dozen 3-inch baked tart shells

Coarsely chop raisins; mix with sherry and set aside. Soften gelatin in orange juice. Combine with eggs, sugar, lemon juice and salt. Cook and stir over moderate heat until gelatin dissolves and mixture thickens. Add raisins and cool until filling begins to jell. Fold in cranberries and stiffly beaten cream. Pile high into baked tart shells. Chill until firm. Makes 1½ dozen tarts.

Tiny Tart Shells

1½ cups sifted flour
¾ teaspoon salt
½ cup shortening
1 tablespoon butter
3 tablespoons cold milk or water

Resift flour with salt. Cut in shortening and butter. Add liquid mixing just until dough holds together; round up in a ball. Divide into 18 equal sized pieces. Roll each piece to fit the inside of a 3 by 1-inch tart pan (plain or fluted edge). Fit pastry into pans, prick with fork. Bake in very hot oven (475 degrees F.) until crisp and rich golden brown, about 8 minutes. Cool before filling. Makes 1½ dozen 3-inch tart shells.

Holiday raisin tartlets have eye and taste appeal and give raisins a new place in holiday desserts.

Decorative Eagle Plaque

By Lorena Fleissig

THE EAGLE is considered a noble bird, "high lord of the sky, master of mountain heights, powerful and enduring." It was chosen as the emblem of the United States and it is also decoratively used as an art symbol of high achievement.

The stylized eagle placque (above) matches a noteworthy ornament over a desk. It is very simple to make of white cardboard or index paper. The design is drawn in pencil, then retraced with black ink.

It is trimmed outside the inked lines and glued on a blue art paper shield that measures eight inches long and six inches wide. Three stars decorate the shield.

Mounted on a mat board, 7½x8 inches (gray), the shield and edge of the mat board are bordered with inexpensive gold cording. Six inches of the cord is attached to serve as hanger at the back.

Sneak Preview of California-Made Playtime Modes

COLOR goes to resorts

Red, White, Blue Continue to Hold Spotlight

California Contrasts: Rose Marie Reid's one-piece supple swimsuit, born and bred in test-tube Antron jersey, with tasseled belt, contrasts the trim, tailored two-piece pure cotton print suit by Mary Ann De Weese.

Future fashions begin right now in California, where colorful resort clothes spotlight trends for months ahead. What's worn in Palm Springs or exported to Palm Beach in the next few weeks might very well be a sneak preview of what will be worn next summer from Maine to Mexico.

Color and California are synonymous in the fashion sense. There are three favorite colors that return each year at this time to greet the opening of winter vacation spots—a patriotic triumvirate of red, white and blue. But not since the pink phases in fashion of several years ago, has any single color come so close to univeral acceptance as today's brilliant yellows that identify 1963 as a color-filled fashion year. From lemon-tinted pastels to yellow-leaf greens, from sun-kissed ivory to sunset coral, there's a hint of yellow distinctively present in all colors.

Next is what appears to be a paradox, but is really more evidence of contrasts, and it began with the coalition last season of camel and gray, now advances into spring with the teaming of two neutral shades like sand and slate, beige and navy.

More contrasts ahead are to be seen in the military milieu or "Safari" look that is clean of line, assiduously tailored and unyielding to the frills of femininity, the "Little Girl" look which is competitive within the frame of fashion.

"Sandal" dresses, those whose hemlines are southbound, and stop at ankle or instep, focus attention on the strong foothold gained in dressing up to the occasion of staying home.

Bib-topped, "Boston" bikinis are still another study in contrasts. The top gets the build-up, the bottom a cover-up, with skin between. Newsiest cover-ups are toe-touching skirts, but any-length skirted swimsuits are prevalent and protectively modest, more-so than the maillot.

Contrasts in "looks," in color, in fabric, and in silhouette are very 1963. They eliminate the sameness that fashion followed thirty years earlier. Today's smart and chic way of dressing is to find the best style for building your own individuality. California designers are currently contributing much to making this possible.

Under the Yule Tree

By Eleanor Avery Price

ARE YOU looking for last-minute gifts for youngsters? Visit your pet shop. Here you will find wonderful inexpensive books on all sorts of pets, fish and bowls and a world of underwater decorations, terrariums and occupants, wild bird houses, feeders and similar items, many gifts with pet motif, and usually some very interesting pets such as an inoffensive little cavy or Guinea pig. Remember, though, if you select a live gift, it should go to someone who will want it and will take very good care of it.

A cavy is a little tailless rodent with gentle disposition. It will play, likes to run in the yard, will ride on children's shoulders, and sit on their laps.

Several sows and a boar can be housed together without their behavior being publicly affected. An apple box makes a fine indoor house for the pet. If the box is not slatted, cut out little window openings and cover them with hardware cloth. Wood shavings such as cedar, or an absorbent cat litter, both of which are available at pet shops, should cover the floor of the box or hutch. Many cavies will not soil any place but in their box.

Most any child would be delighted to find a cavy, or Guinea pig, under the yule tree. Cavies are good pets.

IF THE PET is housed outside, it must have a roof for protection from the weather and other animals. A floorless box can be moved about on the lawn and the pet will nibble the grass.

Food for the cavy includes lawn clippings, carrot tops, green beans, endive, Brussels sprouts, dandelions, and other greens. Be certain there is no insecticide spray left on foods. If greens are kept chilled in the refrigerator, very little drinking water is needed. And don't forget that most pet stores sell special food for cavies.

Cavies, as a rule, carry their young for 70 days, and when the little ones are born they frisk about their box or pen with wide open eyes. They eat immediately and require little or no attention.

ONE LOOKING for show cavies—and they do make a fine hobby for adults as well as children—should select those with cobby bodies, rose-petal shaped, slightly drooped ears, and broad heads with no hollowness above the eyes. Eyes should be large and bold and placed on the edge of the face. Coats must be healthy and free of parasites.

There are several colors of cavies. An atractive one is the Himalayan, a white cavy with darker pigment at the extremities. He is sometimes called the dwarf of the cavy fancy. Altogether there are 17 "varieties" of American cavy.

You Ask, We Answer

By Haskin

Q. What is the origin of the proverb that a cat has nine lives? B.G.

A. In the Middle Ages, people believed that evil spirits were able to assume the form of black animals, particularly cats, and that a witch could take on the body of a cat nine times. This idea is traceable to the mythology of ancient Egypt, in which the cat-goddess Pasht was said to have nine lives. She was pictured with the head of a cat, and the cat was sacred to her. Pasht, also known under her Greek name of Bubastis, was the equivalent of the Roman goddess Diana.

Q. Does the Government publish a list of all U.S. postage stamps? If so, where can I get one? K.M.

A. The Post Office Department publishes successive editions of "Postage Stamps of the United States," an indexed book of about 230 pages which illustrates and describes all U. S. postage and special service stamps issued from 1847 to date of the edition. The current edition is sold by the Supt. of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington 25, D. C.

Q. Is an accidental killing of one person by another classified as homicide? D.M.

A. Yes. Homicide is the killing of one human being by another—and the act is classified as homicide even if the killing is found to have been completely accidental or justifiable. "Felonious" homicide is manslaughter or murder; "justifiable" or "excusable" homicide involves no legal guilt or punishment.

Q. What is the walking delegate of a labor union? M.L.

A. He is the union's business agent. He is a paid representative of a local trade union whose job it is to look after all outside interests of the union, particularly the relations of union members to their employers.

Story of the California Deserts

By Vera Williams
Southland Magazine Book Editor

THE DESERT . . . Inscrutable, cruel, inspiring, relentless, challenging . . .

His romance with the great Southern California desert that stretches from the Mexican border to the Amargosa range beyond Death Valley is told by Edward Maddin Ainsworth in "BECKONING DESERT" (Prentice-Hall, $5.95).

Ainsworth, a topnotch Los Angeles newspaperman, weaves his tale of love for the sometimes menacing, sometimes protective, always fascinating desert by presenting it in its complete role—a fearsome prospect to the plains-roaming Indians and the '49ers, a mecca for sun-loving vacationers and a shining promise in the future of the United States.

Tracing the history of man's attempts to conquer the arid wasteland, Ed Ainsworth opens his intimate chronicle of the desert with an account of the trials of the Spanish conquistador, Hernandez Cortez, and those who followed, as they tried to find the western passage out of the desert. He tells of the deeds and legends of fabled desert characters such as Death Valley Scotty and Peg Leg Smith who defied the desert's red heat and dust. He takes the reader to Scotty's Castle and to Punte Penasco, reputed to have been President Franklin D. Roosevelt's "wartime hideaway."

He considers the deadly sidewinder and the gila monster, the night-habitating packrat, the mouse and kangaroo rats and the now vanishing burro. He tells about the growth of the flourishing farm-studded Imperial Valley and the vacationland of Palm Springs.

The desert beckons, and everyone who reads Ed's book will understand why. Don't miss it.

AND HERE'S another book by a Los Angeles newspaperman:

The war in the Pacific and the exploits of the late Adm. William E. (Bull) Halsey are the basis for a power-packed novel by James Bassett, who was press-relations officer for the immortal Halsey from Guadalcanal to the Japanese surrender.

Halsey's fictional counterpart, Adm. Rockwell (The Rock) Torrey, fights back from the humiliation of Dec. 7 to buck not only the vastly superior Japanese fleet and firepower, but the political influence of an ambitious rival as he sails repeatedly into "HARM'S WAY" (World, $5.95).

Tough but humane old sea dog Torrey and the description of a crucial naval battle against suicidal odds give the novel wide popular appeal.

VANCE PACKARD

Author of "The Status Seekers" and "The Hidden Persuaders" takes on American business executives, their training, climbs, dead-ends and pitfalls in "THE PYRAMID CLIMBERS" (McGraw-Hill, $5).

EVERYTHING Steve Allen does—whether as a movie and TV actor or comic, song writer or lyricist, public speaker or pianist—is exciting, because of his popularity and versatility.

Already the author of seven non-fiction books and many collections of short stories, Allen has written his first novel, "NOT ALL OF YOUR LAUGHTER, NOT ALL OF YOUR TEARS (Geis, $4.95).

It's about a Hollywood song writer, Catholic, married and the father of three, who moves into a tortured triangle with another woman.

No master of his predicament, Don Scanlon commits bungles which cost him his wife, children and career, as well as the girl friend, and cause an accident fatal to two persons and almost himself. The achievement of peace is Steve Allen's philosophical message.

Kitti Lee and antique phone that really works

Old Idea New in Phones

JOE SEGAL is a soft-spoken, mild mannered rebel.

By profession a certified public accountant with his own firm, he has quietly set out on a project to help individuals break the "ugly phone" habit by making available antique phones that actually work.

Segal has organized a movement to make turn-of-the-century telephones popular in apartments and offices. He refers to his project as a "do-it-yourself revolution," in which the elegant phones of yesteryear become an integral part of today's living. He thinks today's phones are ugly-looking instruments and that the public has no choice or voice in what it uses in the way of telephones.

Segal has formed Western States Telephone Co., with offices at 368 Rodeo Dr., Beverly Hills, where he displays a wide assortment of Continental-type telephones from Paris, Copenhagen and Stockholm, available for use here.

THESE PHONES have been completely redecorated, rewired and equipped with dials and modern high-fidelity Western Electric transmitters and receivers, so that they work just as well as the newest phones. These imports sell for $40 to $225.

Each antique phone has a long cord with a four-pronged plug, which fits into the wall jacks found today in many new offices and apartments, to permit moving an extension phone from room to room. Segal says installing one of his antique phones is no more complicated than plugging a lamp into a wall outlet, where jacks exist.

"Interior decorators are among my best customers," says Segal.

The Hospitality That Is Mexico

By Fred Taylor Kraft
Travel Editor

CHRISMASTIME, just about everywhere, seems to inspire the best in people. Once in a while you find these very same gestures demonstrated daily, as common practice in life. And in some of the most remote spots on earth.

That's the way it was in the casa of Don Salvadore Gutierrez, his sweet wife Vicenta, and two of their sons, Nene and Poncho, in an unusual and out-of-the-way town called Patzcuaro, roughly 175 miles west of Mexico City.

My wife and I were on vacation with Lowell and Dorothy Weeks, a Long Beach couple on their tenth visit to Mananaland, and old friends of the Gutierrez clan. With our fine guide, Senor Rafael Aldeco, we had put Patzcuaro on our itinerary in order to see and take pictures of Lago de Patzcuaro and sample the famous white fish —pescado blanco — caught there by Tarascan Indian butterfly fishermen, and to visit one of the largest and most colorful open-air Indian markets in the entire western world.

WHEN THE GUTIERREZ family heard we were coming their way they reacted in true Mexican fashion by arranging what you might call a fiesta. Other friends came from Mexico City to join in the fun, and on arrival at Codallas 34 we got the traditional Mexican greeting—a handclasp followed by a warm hug and another handclasp.

To see the Gutierrez family greet their old friends in such a manner was entirely understandable, but the unrestrained pleasure our hosts displayed over my wife and I—utter strangers—being with them, and the friendship and hospitality they demonstrated to all their guests was an unforgettable experience.

Lengthy felicitious greetings were followed by a true Mexican dinner, completely unlike anything we had ever before enjoyed.

First came a huge bowl of chicken broth with a large leg of stewed chicken, followed by plates full of uchepos (fresh, green corn tamales), generous slices of tree-ripened papaya, rice prepared in a strangely different way with cream and bananas, warm and crisp tortillas, filete con chile—and pescado blanco! While smiling servants brought forth the various courses, Vicenta seemed to hover over all of us at once to keep our glasses filled with wine, her hearty gaiety and musical Spanish resounding pleasantly through the comedor.

WHEN DESSERT time came, we sat around the table sampling refrescos (pop), Uruapan coffee—a special blend made up by friends of the Gutierrez family—and helping ourselves to preserved (in sugar) cherries passed around the table in a large jar.

Nene and Poncho, seemingly as happy as their guests, strummed their guitars and sang such Mexican favorites as "Malaquena" and "La Barca de Oro."

When time came to go the traditional greeting—a handclasp followed by a hug and another handclasp—was repeated all around, even more warmly than on our arrival.

WE STAYED three days in Patzcuaro, quartering at the friendly Posada de Don Vasco, a comfortable hotel with a splendid dining room.

Evenings we watched the pre-Christmas season heralded by a strange ritual enacted nowhere else in the world—the Old Man's Dance—in which costumed natives with grotesque masks performed to the accompaniment of a septima.

In the early dawn we glided through water hyacinths and tules into Lago de Patzcuaro to photograph the butterfly fishermen and visit Janitzio, the lake's principal island. Later we took in the tremendous open-air Indian market on Plaza Grande, to which the many tribes of barefoot Tarascans had arrived earlier by burro and canoe with their delicate handiwork.

WE DROVE UP the steep, cobbled road to the Stirrup, a mountain overlooking the city, the lake and far out into the countryside where rows of peaks that once were volcanoes rose skyward in strange array.

We also drove through pines, scrub oak, wild crabapple and white-blossomed cazahuate to the neighboring village of Santa Clara del Cobre to watch native coppersmiths make beautiful products with the same methods they have used for a hundred years.

Patzcuaro (PAHTZ-kwahro) means "place of delights." We discovered that it truly lives up to its name.

Going Places

By SHIRLEY and BOB SLOANE

FROM its place above the entrance to the Church of the Reconciliation on Bernauerstrasse in Berlin, the statue of Christ spreads its arms and looks down in welcome.

But it no longer looks down on the flock, only at an ugly stone wall the top of which is embedded with jagged glass. There is no reconciliation at the church and there is no more flock. The wall that blocks the church from its congregation is the same the blocks freedom for half a city. And half a world.

The wall . . . the hated, heinous, hideous wall above which a man must climb to wave at his brother, or over which he must vault for almost sure death to touch him.

"In Tyrannos!" cries an angry scrawl on the wall in front of the sealed church. "Murder!" leaps in white hot letters further along the street. So do "Souvenir of Eichmann," and the once whispered, most dreaded of symbols "KZ" — Concentration Camp.

In front of the bricked-up windows of a tenement on this border street, where some of the shades are up and some down as they were when the police came to seal them, a funeral wreath marks where Rolf Urban fell to his death in a five-story leap. He lived through two wars and died in a third. Down the street an 80-year-old woman tried, too.

WE CROSSED the border twice, first by elevated, alone, on the all-but-boycotted S-train, the East German line which loops cursorily through West Berlin. From the train there were brief glimpses of the incredible wall, the barbed wire and tank traps that line the meandering Spree River. At the Friedrichstrasse Station it took an hour to unmesh the tangle of passport control red tape, a monument to inefficiency in this world of lowering borders.

We wandered briefly in the gray streets of this other world. Shop windows showed unfamiliar wares—Hungarian and Chinese wines (with English labels), dull magazines in Russian, once-familiar Havana cigars. In a book store was a work by Stephen Crane and a biography of P. T. Barnum.

The autos were Russian and Czech. Uniforms, disturbingly similar to those of Nazi vintage, filled the streets.

We took few pictures; the impression was too strong that we might be apprehended at any moment for doing so. When we innocently photographed the railroad station, a guard with a carbine over his shoulder whistled menacingly.

On our return one of our passports was held up at the control station for nearly an hour. There was no explanation, nor was one sought.

THE NEXT DAY we went over in the mass security of the sight-seeing bus, but there was the same dawdling at the barrier. We drove beyond the showplaces downtown, beyond Unter den Linden, Wilhelmstrasse and the other places whose names tickled memories dormant for nearly a generation now.

Most of Berlin's Imperial palaces, museums, and cultural centers were here, and most were bombed out. Unlike West Berlin, they remain largely untouched, weeds and trees growing out of them.

In East Berlin there has been money only for housing and necessary public buildings. Square and gross in the Russian style, they sprawl endlessly beyond Karl Marx-allee. Everywhere are plastered the glib slogans of communism.

THANKS. Always glad to boost the circulation.

"I was little distressed at your suggestions to career girls in the Sunday paper. . . . I had a grand, unusual and enlightening time. Had my hand kissed by a 70-year-old man, met charming people. Do tell career girls not to be so cautious."

Thanks. Don't be so cautious, girls. (But don't pick up the check either.)

That's why it's good. You can beach it up without falling all over everybody.

"It is not true that hotels in Lisbon take a percentage when they change your U. S. travelers' checks. . . ."

It is too true. I called four hotels to be sure and asked their exchange rates (three months ago). They quoted a rate that took $3 in every $100. That's the highest I ever ran into anywhere. The banks downtown will cash them for about 35 cents.

"As a former New Yorker, I resent your idea that you have to tip all the time. In my experience, etc."

IN MY experience, I did a check on tipping for three days. I found I averaged 15 tipping situations a day and it was costing me about $15. That's doormen at 25 cents; taxis at 25 cents—and don't tell me you get out of a New York hack and tip less. Hat check girls. The boy who gives your shoulder a whisk in the gentlemen's lounge. Fifteen percent on dinners. Bellboys with the ice. Newsweek magazine did a survey on this. They came up with $20 a day.

No Guarantee for Happiness

By Ben Zinser
Southland Magazine Medical-Science Writer

MENTAL HEALTH and happiness are not synonymous, says psychiatrist Judd Marmor of Beverly Hills in California Medicine.

Says Dr. Marmor: "Obviously even the most successful psychotherapeutic procedure cannot guarantee happiness for anyone. The world in which we live presents us with a continuous succession of real problems and difficulties."

"Even if our personal lives are momentarily free from stress, the world at large never is," he says. "We would be less than healthy if we did not all share some concern about, for example, the current state of our planet.

"One of the challenges which confront modern man, probably more than any of his forebears, is the necessity of living with continuous uncertainty and tension."

MOST AIRLINE stewardesses suffer from sore feet, says an orthopedic surgeon.

Dr. Robert P. Watkins, clinical professor of orthopedic surgery at Stanford University, gives this explanation:

When a plane rises or swoops, there are periods when the hostess weighs up to 400 pounds. All this weight goes to the front part of her feet because of the high heels she wears.

Dr. Watkins told the California Academy of General Practice that stewardesses should wear flat shoes with wide fronts.

A BATTERY-OPERATED thermometer, quicker and more accurate than the conventional mercury clinical thermometer, has been developed in Britain.

Trade-named Dependatherm, the new device takes about three seconds to register a temperature accurate to one-tenth of a degree. A conventional thermometer requires about two minutes to note a temperature accurately.

Dependatherm is small enough to be carried in the pocket. The manufacturer claims it can record 4,500 temperatures on one battery. In case of loss of battery power, a compensating element prevents an inaccurate reading.

IS THIS A record for blood transfusions for a single patient: 584 pints?

Some doctors think it is.

The patient is Jerry Ward, 31-year-old hemophiliac (victim of a blood disorder) from Borger, Tex.

Modern Medicine reports that up to early November, Ward had received 532 pints of blood, packed red cells or plasma in Baylor University Hospital. Earlier he was given 52 pints in a Borger hospital.

The patient has been hospitalized for more than two months with a bleeding ulcer. Three operations have been performed in an effort to halt the hemorrhage.

The blood given at Baylor has been valued at $20,740—but the bill will be absorbed by the Wadley Research Institute and Blood Bank.

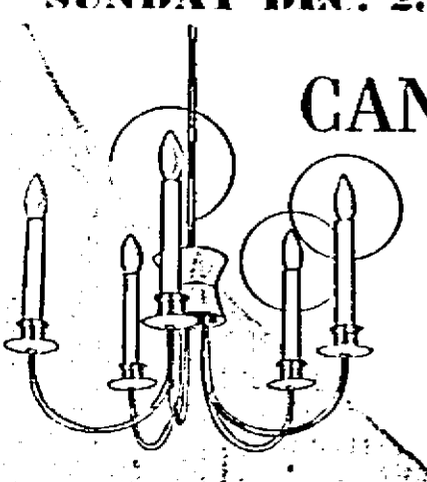

THIN SHEETS of polyvinyl sponge are valuable as a temporary but life-saving cover for widespread body burns in children, two researchers have reported to the American Academy of Pediatrics.

Two Buffalo, N. Y., doctors report that the covering aids in control of infection and protects severely burned areas from other threats until skin grafts can be placed.

Four children have been treated in this manner in Buffalo Children's Hospital. Their burned areas involved 20 to 45 per cent of the body surface. All recovered.

Camellias on Display

Early varieties of Sasanqua and Japonica camellias are now in flower at Los Angeles County's Descanso Gardenas, 1418 Descanso Drive, La Canada. The 1962-63 bloom season will continue through next March.

Among the Japonicas is an entirely new chance seedling, named Red Oak, which was found growing out of an old oak stump several years ago.

Red Oak has large, red, peony-shaped flowers. Descanso officials surmised that the seed probably had been deposited in the oak by a squirrel.

Some of the Sasanquas now in bloom are Brilliancy, Showa-no-Sakee, Narumi-Gata, the fragrant Camellia, and Papaver. Other early Japonicas are Daitairin, High Hat, Daikagura red and variegated, Kikitugi, Alba Plena, and Joshua E. Youtz.

About 100,000 camellias grow at Descanso, a facility of the County Department of Arboreta and Botanic Gardens. Admission and parking are free.

New Zinnia

Large, airy and ruffled, white blooms of Snowman (above) bring new interest to the zinnia family in the garden. Flowers measure from 5 to 6 inches in diameter and grow on compact plants which reach only about two feet in ultimate height. It's new for 1963.

By Dorothy Jonson

During the winter months when we can't be out in our gardens every day, we especially enjoy the plants we grow indoors. With a little special care, these can be kept healthy and luxuriant.

There is nothing better to use for watering house plants than the water saved from defrosting your refrigerator, and for most plants the rule is to allow the soil to become dry before watering.

For a fertilizer, my first choice is liquid fish; and every two or three months I like to give a treatment with a soil penetrant containing chelates. A little cottonseed meal (1 tablespoonful to an 8-inch pot) is beneficial to philodendrons, given 3 times a year.

House plants are tender and cannot stand the same insecticides you use to spray your plants outside. However, there is a spray especially for tender-leaf plants.

Tips on Gardening

Garden tips for the week. . . . Start your winter spray program for fruit trees. Ask your nurseryman if you're in doubt about the proper sprays.

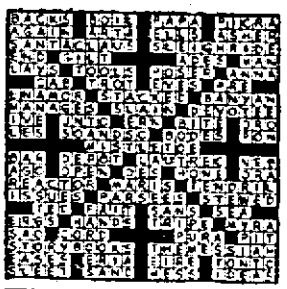

Most bareroot stock arrives on the market this week or next. Fruit and shade trees, as well as bareroot roses, are best planted during bareroot season.

Perennial vegetables such as asparagus and artichoke may be set out this month and next.

Deciduous fruit trees may be pruned now. So, too, may grapes.

Holly and other berried shrubs may be purchased now and kept in their containers for indoor decoration during the holiday season.

theater, sure enough, it wasn't bad, at all.

IN FEBRUARY 1919 I was called to the Metro Studio to play Madame Alla Nazimova's young cousin in "The Brat." She was a Russian star, tops at the time.

The character was a 17-year-old boy who had stolen some jewels and sought refuge from the police under a pile of dirty clothes in his mother's shantytown hovel. The rain beat down on the glass roof, we worked under lights that made us look green as shamrocks. And another boy waited at the edge of the set to replace me if I didn't make good.

The little Madame was very helpful and gave me some valuable hints. When two big policemen pulled me out from under the pile of clothes, it gave me a chance to cry and plead and emote quite a bit. After it was over, I heard Madame Nazimova tell the director general that I did very well. It was like an all-clear signal to me. When the picture was released, I was gratified when many strangers recognized me and spoke to me of my work in it.

"THE CLEVEREST Negro performer I ever knew was an actress named Nellie Conley whom I met at the old Griffith Studio in 1916. When she started out with a circus in early life she assumed the name Madam Sul-Te-Wan and used that name professionally all her life. I still have a photograph she gave to my mother.

She died recently at the age of 85. But she lived to see many of her hopes realized in her granddaughter, Dorothy Dandridge.

WHEN A news commentator on TV announced the death of Louise Fazenda, I looked up at the wall of my apartment and saw her face smiling down at me from an autographed photograph just as it has since 1918. It brought to mind the last time I saw her in person. I was working in court and just after quitting. I met Louise at First Street and Broadway. We stopped to talk and she filled my hands with lemon drops from a large paper bag she was carrying.

When I see Morris Ankrum play a judge in a Perry Mason picture, I wonder if he remembers the time I congratulated him on his first part in pictures. Lou Tellegen was the star and director. Lou played a priest who went into a saloon to pick up the protesting Morris and take him home.

BEN ALEXANDER is a great MC and when I see him on the screen I always think of the first time I saw him. He was 5 years old and had just created a stir by his realistic acting in D. W. Griffith's "Hearts of the World." I was playing a choir boy at the Brunton Studio and was sitting in the choir loft waiting for the shooting to start. Ben and his mother appeared on the set. With the freedom and spontaneity of childhood, little Ben made his way up the steps, climbed up on my lap and put an arm around my shoulder. From that coign of vantage he sat quietly watching the preparations going on below until it was time to shoot the scene. I have never seen Ben in person since he waved goodby to me that day.

Early in 1921, under pressure of a severe slump in the motion picture field, I became a clerk of the Superior Court. After serving for 31 years in that capacity, I now look back on the earlier period from the vantage point of happy retirement.

I know that Hollywood is still there, but I wonder if there is the same spirit of camaraderie and helpfulness that we all knew in the old days.

Praise vs. Fear

By Harry Karns

Education Research Associates

QUESTION: Does fear of punishment help a child learn a lesson?

ANSWER: Fear is probably more effective than no motivation at all. But why use it when praise of good work is vastly superior as an aid to learning?

A child in a state of anxiety will often try frantically to learn. This frantic effort may lead to achievement at simple tasks. If the problem is a difficult one requiring some fine distinctions, however, he will be easily defeated.

The child who is taught by fear learns one thing very well a resentment of learning.

QUESTION: "Will it help if I test my son at home in preparation for his exam at school?"

ANSWER: Such an exercise can prove very helpful—if properly conducted. Otherwise, you may succeed only in wasting the boy's time and throwing him into confusion.

Some guide lines:

Examine previous homework lessons and test papers to discover the kind of question the teacher will probably ask. With due consideration for the teacher's idiosyncracies, steer away from obscure details and touch mainly on essentials.

Cover only the material assigned. If the test is on the life of Shakespeare, don't expand the study effort to cover the entire Elizabethan period and all the writers in it. For the purposes of the test, such information is extraneous.

Finally, don't ask "trick" questions. They create suspicion in the child's mind and may cause him to see tricks in questions where none exist. Play fair; ask a straight question and expect a straight answer.

These suggestions will help you give the child a good test. But you will help him even more if you encourage him to go through the assigned work and write out the test for himself.

RODNEY DOVALIS
Mighty Restful, Podner

WHERE SHALL we go for Christmas dinner?

Why, to the azure, gold and red tints of the New Mexico desert, of course, where the restful atmosphere is conducive to pleasant dining. And to make it all the more restful it isn't even necessary to drive from Long Beach to New Mexico, because a restaurant located at 1735 W. Pacific Coast Hwy. provides all the charm of that southwestern locale.

This restaurant is called Currie's Santa Fe. Large and luxurious, with murals of New Mexico on display, Currie's is operated by Gabriel (Bill) Dovalis, his wife Goldie and their son Rodney, 25, a St. Anthony's School graduate who studied business administration at St. Edward's University in Texas and the University of Arizona.

On Christmas Day Currie's will serve a sumptuous special menu from 11 a.m. to 11:30 p.m. One of the highlights will be roast turkey ($2.95), served with giblet gravy, a mildly spiced dressing and all the pleasures of a holiday dinner, such as chilled appetizers, choice of cream of chicken soup or clam chowder, tossed green salad, whipped potatoes, baked potato or sweet potatoes, fresh garden peas, cranberry sauce, garlic toast, beverage, hot mince pie or apple pie. Other fine entrees on that dinner will include Currie's special steak, $3; Long Island duck, $3; whole broiled lobster, $3.60; baked premium ham with fruit sauce, $2.95, and fine New York cut steak, $4.75.

Currie's will serve its regular menu today, starting at 11 a.m., including such appetite teasers as broiled lobster stuffed with shrimp and crabmeat, loin pork chops, extra cut lamb chops and broiled half chicken ($2.50), all served on a large dinner.

Mary Martin Remembers Snow, Carols, Two Deer and the Joy of a Child

By MARY MARTIN
As Told to Bert Resnik

To me Christmas means family.

That's why last Christmas was one of my most thrilling —I spent it with my family.

Most of my Christmases have been devoted to doing two shows on the New York stage.

But last year was different.

We went to a log cabin in a place called Starling Forest. All my family was there, my son, my daughter-in-law, my grandchild, my daughter, her husband-to-be, my husband, his sister and her family.

It was an unforgettable weekend.

It snowed — one of the biggest snowfalls in years.

We all had the joy of going in the middle of those mountains and cutting down our own tree.

My grandchild, Heidi, cut her own little tree.

* * * *

WE SPENT a wonderful afternoon trimming the trees and the snow kept coming down.

We sang Christmas carols.

I played the "Little Donkey" and Heidi was Mary. She rode on my back.

On Christmas morning Santa Claus (my son Larry is six feet tall) came in front of the cabin's picture window.

I called to my grandchild:

She came running to the window and just at that moment—almost as if it had been planned—two deer came out of the forest.

It was just the greatest Christmas.

If you get one Christmas like that in your lifetime, you're forever grateful.

'CRAZY GUGGENHAM'

Fontaine Hit as Zany Character

By DOC QUIGG

NEW YORK (UPI)—"Jackie Gleason said to me last September, he said: 'Frank, you been raising a big family a long time.'

"I said, Yep, I sure had.' So then he said: 'It's time you were a big star. I'm going to do my utmost to make you one before this season is over.'

"Well, it was good to be on a television show with a buddy of 16 years—but to see him favoring the second comedian, this has been a delightful experience.

"You know, I've been doing a zany character since I was 15—I call him John L. C. Sivoneey—and Jackie said to me: 'Why don't you have John be the character called Crazy Guggenham on the (Joe the Bartender) skit on my show?' I said okay, and we did.

"Then after the third week of the show, Jackie heard me singing in the dressing room and he said: 'Frank, you gotta sing on the show.'

"Me, Frank Fontaine. I first went onstage with my father when I was 8, and I was traveling with a Major Bowes amateur unit doing imitations when I was 16—and I turned professional, doing vaudeville and night clubs, when I was 17—and I never sang on the stage before.

"I HAD ONE singing lesson—nine months ago. I had it because I realized that record companies were approaching the comedians. I never had a chance to continue the lessons, but now I've got my own album coming out Jan. 2 on ABC Paramount. It's titled 'Songs I Sing on the Jackie Gleason Show.' People who watch the show will know what type songs are on the record.

"My kids? Yes, I've got 11—nine boys and two girls—and they just can't wait to get in show business. My oldest boy, Frank Jr., —he's the one that has the two kids, and he's 24 and studying to be a radio announcer that makes me a grandfather, me with this big shock of blond hair.

"My second son, Robert, 20, he was a comedian—he imitated my zany act—before he got in the Marine Corps two years ago. He's at Guantanamo now, and that's one of the reasons everybody on the Gleason show was glad for me going down to Guantanamo with Ed Sullivan to be on the Sullivan Show from there (8 p. m. today, channel 2). It was my first reunion with Robert for 17 months —and a chance to bring him all the love from his Mom and brothers and sisters.

"YOU KNOW, it was Ed Sullivan who introduced me to the nation on his first three TV shows in 1948. In the early days I had this goofy character Sivoneey as a sweepstakes winner, and Sullivan had me do the sweeps bit three times in a row.

"I said, 'Ed, what're you doing?' He said, 'Frank, it's that good.' Then, after each performance, he'd tell the audience: 'This boy oughtta be in picturrrrs.' The fourth week I was in Hollywood doing it at M-G-M.

"I have a daughter, 21, going to TV and dramatic school in Boston, and the other daughter, 13, does ballet. The boys all imitate me. When Gleason heard about this imitation at rehearsal, he said, 'Pick one out of the middle and let's put him on the show tomorrow.' So I went and got Chrissie, he's 10, you may have seen the show.

"Anyway, you can just say that with all the nice things that have happened to me this year, it'll certainly be a merry Christmas and a happy New Year. A book? Yes, it's true I've always wanted to write about the people I've known in show business throughout the years.

"The most remarkable? I gotta say Jackie Gleason. What a hunk of talent that guy is."

FRANK FONTAINE . . . On Sullivan Show Tonight

OPERA STAR Rise Stevens sings Christmas songs during "Voice of Firestone" at 10 p. m. Sunday, channel 7. Also featured will be tenor Brian Sullivan and the Columbus Boys Choir of Princeton, N. J.

Young Stage-Screen Star on 'Steel Hour'

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — If the movies ever turn out another "America's Sweetheart" odds are she will be Patty Duke who blends the best qualities of Shirley Temple and Mary Pickford, 1962 style.

At 15 Patty is blessed with a compelling sweetness and vast talent. She also is startlingly unspoiled.

(Patty guest stars on the "U.S. Steel Hour" at 10 p.m. Wednesday, channel 2.)

Two years of stardom on Broadway in "The Miracle Worker," plus her Oscar-contending performance in the film version, were followed by an outright flop.

• • • •

REACHING the heights and bouncing to the depths have left Patty philosophical and optimistic.

"After 'The Miracle Worker' I thought it would be wonderful to be in another hit play," she said, grinning at her own wishful thinking. "So for eight months we prepared for 'The Isle of Children.' Our hopes were high. But it lasted only for eight performances.

"It hurt. It hurt very much. But I forced myself to think ahead.

"The hardest thing is to say goodbye to people you've grown fond of during the try-outs and rehearsals. But I've learned you must take the good things with the bad in show business."

• • • •

ONE OF THE good things coming up for the fair-haired youngster is a television series.

Peter Lawford's Chrislaw Productions has signed the diminutive actress to star in "The Patty Duke Show," the pilot of which will be filmed this fall.

"It will be aimed at teen-agers and situation comedy," she said. "I really like working in television."

Patty says the burdens of being a working teen-ager are slight indeed compared to the advantages.

"The majority of teen-agers don't have enough to do. They haven't got any responsibility," she said. "When they are out of school there is nothing to occupy them, except maybe trouble.

"In the afternoons, when I'm not actually working, I have interviews, read scripts and study. But I also have time to play.

• • • •

"I DON'T have any boyfriends, but I like to hang around with the kids who live in my neighborhood back in New York. They treat me just like anyone else. I'm not a star to my friends. In fact they sometimes take off for a movie or something and forget all about asking me to go along.

"I really like my life better than theirs.' And I hope I never have to return to being just a teen-ager. I'm having too much fun being an actress."

If Lawford and company decide to go ahead with the series for the 1963-64 season, Patty will be the busiest girl in New York.

"That's where they'll shoot the series," she said happily. "I can't think of anything nicer happening to a girl like me."

Musical Series

Bandleader Horace Heidt is planning a musical-variety series.

'THAT WAS WEEK THAT WAS'

Protest BBC Program But Show Goes On

By ROBERT MUSEL

LONDON (UPI)—Someone once said American television sponsors get a lot of their exercise bowing to pressure groups.

The British Broadcasting Corp., on the other hand, is apt to develop a case of instant deafness just when pressure groups are howling their loudest.

So the producer of a new Saturday night weekly program, "That Was the Week That Was," got the green light to continue with a satirical revue that has drawn a record number of protests in its first month.

An American producer who got 462 abusive phone calls, one threat of legal action and a request by a government official for a look at the script after a single show would be moodily scanning the "Help Wanted" advertisements.

BUT PRODUCER NED SHERRIN, 31, whose show got just that reaction, is delighted that "That Was the Week Thas Was" has aroused so much interest. Besides, among the phone calls in praise—there were 619 of these—was one from his boss at the BBC, Alastair Milne.

Sherrin has been given what he describes as "tremendous independence" through a genial bit of manipulation at BBC headquarters. If "That Was the Week That Was" was a revue it would be subject to the BBC rule that revue and variety shows must not deal with politics, religion or royalty.

So although it has sketches, songs, monologues and music —in fact everything a revue has—the BBC insists with a straight face that it is a "talk." And BBC "talks" can be on almost any subject under the sun.

"PEOPLE SAY THAT it's a satirical revue," said Sherrin, who was a lawyer before he joined the BBC. "But that's not how we look at it. We try to provide an intelligent commentary on the week's events in the form of sketches, musical interludes and comment."

He admitted that "some of the people we have attacked haven't been too happy about it. But, touch wood, there have been no writs—yet."

The show's immunity from writs may not last long at the rate it is going. In the first show a month ago it dug so deeply into various practices on Tin Pan Alley that one well-known musical figure was said to have taken legal advice.

Fifteen writers, working right up to Saturday morning, produced the script for the last show. It attacked British food, distorted a speech by Prime Minister Harold Macmillan to show what might happen if a sound track went wrong (the prime minister appeared to be advocating war). There was a comment on the end of the Ecumenical Council—a chorus of cardinals singing "Arriverdeci Roma" (Goodbye Rome)—and at least one of the skits was rather blue.

The willingness of the government-owned broadcasting corporation to let Sherrin name names, even when it may mean antagonizing prominent personalities, is new to television here.

FCC Warns on Lotteries

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Communications Commission has warned that radio and television stations face possible fines or license revocation if they broadcast lottery advertisements even where permitted by state or local laws.

The FCC notice apparently was issued after the commission received reports that some stations were broadcasting lottery information "in the mistaken belief that it was permissible." The commission, however, named no specific violators.

* * * *

IT SAID broadcasting lottery advertisements or information was subject both to criminal prosecution and administrative crackdowns under the Communications Act and FCC rules.

Pan and Fan Mail

What kind of a jacket was Arlene Francis wearing on "What's My Line?" on Dec. 2?

Part of it was mink, but I don't know what the other material was.

Can I get it? What is the approximate cost?

Mrs. Virginia Martin, Buena Park

The part that wasn't mink was velvet. It was made especially for Arlene by Scaarsi Inc., 550 7th Ave., New York, N. Y. Cost not revealed specifically but termed "very expensive." As to whether you can get it, Virginia, why don't you discuss it with Santa? Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus.

* * * *

Won't you please tell Desilu—or whoever—not to terminate "Fair Exchange?" It's delightful. It's absolutely wizard.

Why do they always take off the best programs?

I guess I know the answer to that one, but surely there are enough viewers with discrimination to give this show a fairly reasonable rating—or isn't that enough?

Charlotte Hull, Long Beach.

"Fair Exchange" should come back in late spring in half-hour form—half- wizard.

* * * *

I have just finished reading that the Roy Rogers-Dale Evans show is being canceled because of ratings.

This, in my opinion, is a good show. No one ever called me asking what program I was listening to.

This is the opinion of one woman and that of many others. I am sorry that Roy and Dale are to be taken off the air and I hope that TV moguls are happy.

Merry Christmas.

Mrs. C. F. Bales, Westminster

Same to you, Roy, Dale and the moguls.

Q. I am told that the most exciting new ballet dancer in Russia is an American named Edward Villella. Can you tell us anything about him?—Maria Dunnison, New York, N.Y.

A. Villella on tour in Russia with the New York City ballet was described by Moscow dance critics as "one of the most exciting new male dancers of our time." A native New Yorker, Villella is a former boxer who trained for the merchant marine, gave it up for dancing.

Q. Is it true that Premier Stalin planned to exile the entire Mikoyan family to Siberia during World War II? —J. Palmer, Wheeling, W. Va.

A. There was some talk of it. Eventually one or more of Mikoyan's four sons were exiled to Siberia, which is why there was never any love lost between Stalin and Mikoyan.

Q. Raymond Massey, the actor, has a daughter, Anna, 25, who is extremely talented. I saw her on the London stage. Is she married and if so, to whom?—Lillian Plant, Denver, Colo.

A. Anna Massey, alleging misconduct by her 29-year-old husband, English actor Peter Huggins in London, recently was awarded a divorce and custody of their 3-year-old son.

Q. Where will the 1964 and 1968 Olympic Games be held?—Anthony M. Ford, Chicago, Ill.

A. 1964 in Tokyo—1968 as yet undecided but probably Lyons, France, or Detroit, Mich.

Q. Is it true that most of the world's great financiers end up unhappy, miserable suicides? How about men like Insull, Hopson, Kreuger, Livermore and others?— J. Christopher Stallings, San Francisco, Calif.

A. It is true that many, but not most, of the world's financial giants have come to an unhappy end. Jesse Livermore and Ivar Kreuger were suicides. Insull died a fugitive. Howard Hopson died insane. Money frequently brings unhappiness.

Q. Republican National Chairman William Miller said recently that the Republican Party in his opinion did not have "anything to worry about." In the last 32 years how many times has the Republican Party controlled Congress?—T. L., Tucson, Ariz.

A. Twice—in 1946 and 1952.

Q. I understand that C. P. Snow, the author-scientist, recently died on the operating table. Details, please.— Anna Gold, New York, N.Y.

A. Sir Charles Snow is very much alive. During an operation on the retina of his eye, his heart suddenly stopped beating. Dr. Lorimer Fison, the ophthalmic surgeon, opened Snow's chest, massaged the heart by hand. After two minutes it began to beat again. Snow recovered, but lost the sight of one eye.

Q. Does anyone know how much money Khrushchev has poured into Cuba?—Stephen M., St. Louis, Mo.

A. An estimated $1,000,000,000 in arms; an estimated $912,000,000 in economic aid, for Castro's Cuba.

Q. Is Senator Hubert Humphrey the only pharmacist in Congress? What are his degrees?—Janet Mollifson, Minneapolis, Minn.

A. Humphrey, 51, is the only pharmacist in Congress. He attended the Denver College of Pharmacy, but got his Bachelor of Arts degree from the University of Minnesota and an M.A. from Louisiana. He was elected mayor of Minneapolis at the age of 34 and a United States senator at 37.

Q. Is it true that Yehudi Menuhin, the great violinist, is now in the food business?—G. Kirk, Springfield, O.

A. Yes, the health food line in London.

Q. I would like to know the minimum wage for members of the Screen Actors Guild who work in Hollywood.—Susan Leonard, Evansville, Ind.

A. $100 a day or $350 a week, but work is so scarce in films that last year 70 per cent of Guild members earned less than $2500 from motion picture work.

Q. What is the relationship between President Kennedy and pollster Lou Harris?—J. Leylan, Dallas, Tex.

A. Lou Harris, 41, of Louis Harris & Associates, is a close friend of President Kennedy's. His samplings of public opinion have helped guide Kennedy since he was a U.S. senator. Harris is known figuratively as the President's private pollster. He employs 25 assistants and 3,000 part-time interviewers. Reportedly the Democratic National Committee paid Harris $76,000 in the first 5 months of 1962.

ON PARADE

The first Christmas—what was it really like? What if we could go back in time, taste the crisp air of that winter's eve in Bethlehem, listen to the creaking carts and the voices in the narrow streets, watch the people of the town as they moved about their business on the night of the birth of Our Lord?

In an attempt to recapture a sense of that moment, PARADE's Jack Anderson made a recent journey by plane to the Holy Land. There, in Bethlehem, he found much that had not changed. He even discovered a mother and her new-born child near the very spot where, scholars believe, stood the manger that sheltered Mary and Joseph. From these ordinary people of today, he gained a vivid insight into what it must have been like to be present at that other birth long ago.

Anderson's inspiring story of Aida and Tofick Canavati and their new son appears on page 8. It reminds us once again how richly human, how timeless and ever-pertinent, were the miraculous events that took place, nearly 2,000 years ago, among the simple townfolk of Bethlehem.

DON'T YOU READ BEFORE YOU BUY?

Most people do.
They not only read about products in print but they study and compare. They clip and they save and they show to their friends. They make notes, choose colors, pick designs, consider styles.

And then they buy.
They, like you, count on print advertising for information about all kinds of products that interest them. Cosmetics and clothes, cars and cash registers, groceries and garbage disposers, barbecues and boats.

So if you and your product are in close competition with other advertisers and their products —better put part of your advertising in print. Better put it where the clippers and savers and ready-to-buy buyers can get their hands on it.

Print makes sense, because print makes sales.

'PEOPLE ARE GOOD'

The amazing experience of a stunt man who died three times

BY LLOYD SHEARER

HOLLYWOOD.

THERE ARE NO MOTION PICTURE STARS who do all their own stunts.

There are several reasons for this: 1) Many stars are not particularly courageous; 2) many stars are foppish and physically weak; 3) many stars enjoy a realistic sense of values and see no point in endangering their own photogenic faces.

When a script calls for dangerous feats, a breed of strong, athletic man is hired to perform them.

Hollywood pays these stunt men a minimum of $400 a week. They risk their lives in action scenes which generally are filmed from a distance so that the audience will not detect the substitution of the stunt man for the star.

One such stunt man is Bob Morgan, 47, husband of screen actress Yvonne De Carlo.

In 17 years, Morgan, a former Navy pilot from Mt. Carmel, Ill., has performed stunts for Burt Lancaster, Humphrey Bogart, John Wayne, Gary Cooper, Jim Arness, dozens of others.

This past April, Bob was stunting in a film, How the West Was Won, on location near Globe, Ariz. His hair was bleached blond so that he looked like actor George Peppard. The script called for him to ride a flatcar loaded with 6,000-pound logs (see photo).

Bob was supposed to hide in the coupling that connected two cars and to hold on to the slipping logs while the train was in motion. It was part of an outlaw scene.

He performed the stunt, and the Cinerama cameras filmed it. Morgan then moved out of the shot onto the coupling. Suddenly some assistant shouted, "Logs!" The logs were hydraulically released. They crashed down on Bob, throwing him beneath the speeding train. Two flatcars and a caboose passed over him.

This once-tall, lithe, handsome athlete, 6 feet 2, 200 pounds, lay like a limp, boneless, tattered rag doll tossed aimlessly from a train window. The few remaining sparks of life in him seemed about to flicker out.

Morgan refused to die. He was carried into a station wagon and driven to a hospital in Superior, Ariz. En route, still conscious, he asked Hayward, "How bad am I?"

Said Hayward, expecting his friend to die momentarily, "Not bad, just a little skin lost." Then Hayward took some gauze out of the first-aid kit, bandaged Morgan's eye "to keep the eyeball in."

At Superior the doctor began blood transfusions, announced quickly: "We can't save him here. We don't have the equipment. You've got to get him to Phoenix."

They loaded Morgan, bone-broken and bleeding, into an ambulance, raced 70 miles to Phoenix where 7 doctors took turns trying to save him. Says Bob: "They tell me I died twice, that my heart stopped beating, but somehow they got me going again. The doctors were wonderful. They performed miracles. And so were the people in Arizona.

80 Pints of Blood

"Some radio announcer went on the air and said I needed blood, lots of blood. I think they pumped 80 pints into me. The response was magnificent. You think people are selfish and hardhearted? Well, they're not. When the chips are down, when another human being is in trouble, it brings out the best in people. You know, I had so many volunteer blood-donors they had to stop them from coming to the hospital. Talk about the brotherhood of man. I'm going to have Christmas dinner with my family this year because of that very same brotherhood. Perfect strangers—guys I never heard of—they gave their blood. They offered money. They wrote letters of encouragement.

"And my wife, Yvonne—what guts! You think I look like a mess now? You should've seen what I looked like when she first saw me after the accident. I was a horrible freak. But she came into that hospital room and when I opened one eye, there she was, standing above me, smiling, telling me over and over again that I was going to make it.

"You hear a lot about actresses, how they're selfish

On the mend after his catastrophic accident last spring, and with high hopes for the future, former stunt man Bob Morgan is seen with wife, screen star Yvonne De Carlo, daughter Bari Lee, 15, and sons Bruce, 6, and Michael, 5.

Minutes before his accident, Morgan performs stunt for film How the West Was Won.

egomaniacs, thinking only of their beauty, how they're ready to ditch a guy as soon as he can't help them. Not my Yvonne. She's stayed by me; and the truth is that without her encouragement I couldn't have made it. I drew my strength from her. I can tell you—for her, it wasn't easy. It isn't easy now because I still have a long way to go. But now I know I'm going to make it."

Yvonne De Carlo's recollection of what happened is graphic. "I had just gotten in the front door from Hesperia," she says. "That's a little town not very far from Los Angeles where I'd gone to break in my new night-club act. I had just kissed our two little boys hello—Michael, 5, and Bruce, 6—when the phone rang. It was a friend calling. But the operator broke in and said, 'I'm sorry. This is an emergency.'

A Few Hours to Live

"Then I heard Chuck Hayward's voice. He told me Bob was dying and to charter the first plane I could get. The doctors didn't expect Bob to live more than another few hours. You can imagine how I felt.

"Bob has a teenage daughter by his first marriage who lives with us," Yvonne explains. "A delightful girl, Bari Lee. She's 15 now. Bob's first wife was Helen Crlenkovich, the national diving champion. She used to be under contract to Larry Crosby, Bing's brother, when they were staging water shows—which is how Bob came to Hollywood in the first place. She died in 1956. After that, I met Bob and we got married. Anyway, in getting ready to go to the hospital in Phoenix, I said to myself: 'If he's dying now, his daughter has a right to see him so I'd better take her with me.'"

Bari and Yvonne flew to Phoenix. At the hospital, the actress suggested to her stepdaughter that she wait outside her dad's room.

"I'm glad I did that," she says, "because Bob was so mutilated. He looked so bad that I knew it would have a terrible effect on Bari. If her father was going to die—and it looked that way—I didn't want her to remember him in such a state.

"Besides, he was just about to go into shock, and did, which was an awful thing because it meant they couldn't operate on him. He grew more and more toxic, because all his elimination apparatus had been crushed, and there was no way of getting the poison out of his body and, of course, contamination and fever set in, and eventually gangrene.

"I stayed in Phoenix for a month, because I expected that every day with Bob would be the last, but the doctors—they were just wonderful—kept him alive. And after a month they told me he had a chance, that I could go back to Los Angeles—which I had to do, because, after all, somebody had to earn a living and keep the family going. I hadn't been doing much film work, just a picture in Rome (Mary Magdalena), and I had to perfect my night-club act. I'd already been booked into one club, and I'd had to cancel that date. But this second date I could keep."

Yvonne was singing at a small club across the highway from Disneyland, doing three shows a night, trying to be funny with a comedy routine, when one evening a phone call from Phoenix interrupted her act. It was one of the doctors. "You must fly here immediately," he declared. "Your husband's left leg is gangrenous. We want you to sign for immediate amputation or we're going to lose him."

Yvonne flew to Phoenix. At the hospital she found her husband a deathly white, completely toxic, cold as ice.

"I said to myself," she recalls, "that this was it, because poor Bob, he was hardly alive. He was just hanging on. They took him up to surgery, and for two hours they couldn't do anything. They told me he died once on the table before they could get more blood into him. But somehow they went ahead and even after the amputation, the toxemia wouldn't go away and it looked as if we were going to lose him after all.

'It's a Miracle'

"But I prayed and I prayed, and he held on—or God let him hold on. I'm sure it was God, because it's a miracle that he's alive today, a miracle that God can give surgeons and doctors and nurses such skill, such goodness, such power, such understanding.

"Take the psychiatrist whose job it was to tell Bob that his left leg was gone. Bob wouldn't accept it for days. He's a golf fiend, you know—has always played golf and loves the game more than almost anything else. Of course, after the operation Bob was still drugged. It's not like they show it in the movies. After screen amputation, the patient looks down and sees his leg is missing and screams. It's not that way at all.

"Bob's reaction was not to look down or to accept it. The doctors who performed the operation tried to tell him, but he wouldn't accept it and finally they called in this psychiatrist—and it even took him two or three times, because how do you tell a man who is primarily physical that his left leg and thigh have been amputated?

"But this psychiatrist was wonderful. 'Well, Bob,' he said, 'it looks as if you're out of the woods, boy. As you know, we had to take it off.' Bob said, 'What do you mean? Take what off?' The doctor replied simply, 'Your foot.' Bob said, 'Oh, no, not on your life. I made a bet with Doc Hartman. We both made a bet that I'm going to keep my leg. And by golly—I'm going to keep that old leg! Yes, sir—I'm going to keep that leg.'

"But the psychiatrist was determined to tell Bob the truth. I was standing outside the door, tears streaming down my face, my heart breaking, but I could hear the conversation and the moment of truth had come. And the doctor wasn't going to be turned away. God—what a man! He said to Bob, simply and gently and matter-of-factly, as if he were talking to Michael or Bruce or any little boy, 'It's done. It's over. We had the choice, life or death. You helped us make it, Bob. The leg is gone, but we're getting you another one. You're going to be all right.'

"There were a few moments of silence. I didn't know what Bob was going to do—accept it or scream or faint or go into shock or what. Then very slowly, very softly, Bob said: 'Tell me the truth, Doc. Will I ever be able to play golf again?' The doctor replied, 'You've got my word for it.' And then—big, brave wife that I am—I dried my eyes, knocked on the door and walked in."

Today, 9 months following his accident, Bob Morgan is working on his golf game and hopes soon to be shooting in the 80's. He's become adjusted to his artificial leg, has devised with pro golfer Tommy Bolt a stance chart for balanced golf which should be on the market any day now. The chart shows the beginning golfer how to stand and swing with each different club.

The Future Is Bright

Morgan is cheerful, optimistic, ebullient. Plastic surgeons plan to repair the left side of his face and have him "almost as good as new" within the next few months. Furthermore, doctors expect him to regain full sight in his right eye.

The motion picture industry, for the most part, has been exceedingly kind to him and his family in a basically practical as well as spiritually encouraging way. John Wayne, for example, when he was casting McClintock, his latest film, dealing with the life of a cattle baron, said: "I don't care who else goes into this picture. Bob Morgan's wife gets a fat part."

The result is that Yvonne De Carlo shares star billing in the production with Wayne and Maureen O'Hara. It's her first film job in a long time, but now other offers are coming in.

Morgan has also been told that if he'd like to go into film editing or second unit direction, union rules will be waived and he'll be given the opportunity to earn a good living.

"I don't know why it should've taken a near tragedy for me to learn it," he says, "but the truth is that people are essentially good, essentially kind. And that's not too easy to be in this competitive world of ours. Many of us are so busy making a living that we forget or lose our basic sense of values. What's important in life—I mean really important and lasting? It's love and kindness and decency and helping your neighbor or, for that matter, a perfect stranger.

"I owe my life to I don't know how many people—maybe 200. 'No man is an island unto himself.' How true! From here on in, I'm determined to pay back in kindness and consideration what other people have shown me. Matter of fact that's gonna be my message to the kids this Christmas. Try to fill the world with a little kindness." ■

Lighting candles, Mildred and Don Maxon and girls of "Mildred's Happy Home" wait for Christmas. They'll spend the day doing good deeds.

'NOBODY CAN OUTGIVE GOD'

An inspiring story for Christmas about one woman's loving-kindness

by SID ROSS

PHOENIX, ARIZ.

MILDRED MAXON, 38, is one of America's most remarkable women.

At a given moment, you might find her in the Phoenix slums, giving out groceries to hungry families. Or she might be in a clothing store, buying shoes for needy children.

You might meet her on Skid Row, aiding a derelict; or in a hospital waiting room, providing a sympathetic ear for a tearful family; or in a utility office, paying the bills of a jobless man.

Or you might find her at "Mildred's Happy Home," one of the nation's most unusual institutions—a refuge for teenage girls which Mildred founded and operates in her own home.

The most remarkable thing about Mildred, however, is that she does all this on practically no money. Mildred's husband, Daniel, a schoolteacher, is sick and lives on unemployment compensation.

But Mildred does have faith—the kind of faith that moves mountains. And she uses it to help those less fortunate than herself and to provide an object lesson for the Christmas season.

Not long ago, for instance, Mildred heard about a desperate widow in the nearby town of Surprise. The woman was sick, had no medicine and no money to buy any. Her five children needed milk; her oldest son wanted to drop out of high school because children made fun of his tattered clothes. Mildred went to their home and promised everything would be taken care of. She charmed food out of grocers and farmers, got emergency milk rations, bought the boy a pair of trousers at a rummage sale. She bought medicine and gave the boy spending money.

Mildred wasn't worried about being paid back. "When you have faith," she says, "you live for today and let tomorrow take care of itself.

"Besides, nobody can outgive God."

This is the philosophy that makes people call Mildred "a perfect saint"—and helped to establish the chief of her charities, Mildred's Happy Home. The Home, where the Maxons also reside, is a flourishing institution here in Phoenix—an eight-bedroom, one-story ranch house now shared by five girls from broken homes and the Maxons' own two daughters, Margaret, 16, and Marcia, 13. In its unique family setup, Mildred and Daniel dispense family love in large doses. Dozens of girls who have been kicked around for years learn to feel wanted again.

What Neglected Girls Need

"There are so many young girls who are homeless, neglected and unhappy—products of divorce and broken homes," Mildred says. "They should have a wholesome family environment to help them grow up in a normal manner. They need not only the closeness of family life but education in things they've never had—manners, grooming, cleanliness, self-respect. They need to know that a family can live together without fighting and quarreling."

Mildred seems to answer some secret longing in every human heart. She is cheerful, tender and kind—and people gravitate toward her. Not long ago, in a poor section of Phoenix, she provided clothing for a raggle-taggle of kids who would have put the Pied Piper to shame. On the same day, she called at the gospel mission. Minutes later, an old man was crying on her shoulder, telling her he was sick and pleading for comfort. Mildred dropped everything and got him into a hospital.

Mildred dotes on her girls and glories in little triumphs. Not long ago, she took in a shy, scared, withdrawn rabbit of a girl who had never known her own mother. She always held back, avoided contact with Mildred. Then one day, very hesitatingly, she called Mildred "Mother." Mildred threw her arms around her and cried.

And there was the time recently when Mildred was visiting Susie's school during Open School Week. Product of a broken home, Susie met Mildred at the door and seized her arm. "Please walk down the corridors with me," she said, "so everyone can see what a wonderful mother I have."

Actually Mildred's Happy Home has roots in the founder's own girlhood. As a child, Mildred often went barefoot and hungry because her watchman-father couldn't support 11 children. Once she wanted to go to a party and couldn't afford a dress. A kindly shopkeeper gave her one. Mildred determined then and there to do things for others.

It wasn't until 1949, however, that Mildred went into philanthropy on a grand scale. It came about, oddly enough, because she was overweight. Her doctor advised her to "do something to take your mind off food."

So Mildred volunteered to help at the local hospitals. She started by teaching patients at Arizona State Hospital to cook and sew. Next she went to Maricopa County Hospital, where she sought out patients' distressed families and tried to cheer them up.

The Price of a Suit

The poor people of Phoenix have a grapevine which spread the word about Mildred. Soon she was paying bills, buying clothes, giving out groceries—and charming others into helping her do it.

Meanwhile, her own family cheerfully learned to live on a shoestring. They ate pancakes and macaroni. Mildred's husband Dan never bought a suit that cost more than $8 second-hand. Marcia and Margaret wear dresses bought at rummage sales.

It was inevitable that Mildred's charities would bring public attention. And that, in turn, brought Roy Michell to Mildred's door.

Michell is a Detroit manufacturer who winters in Phoenix. One day he read about Mildred and came to see her. He looked over her home, also listened to her dream of a "real home for forgotten girls." The next day the mail brought his check for $500.

That was the start of Mildred's Happy Home. (Daughter Marcia gave it the name.) Michell helped the Maxons incorporate as a child-care institution and underwrote some expenses. Later, when the Home bought its present quarters at 5844 N. Second Ave., he and local businessmen put up more money.

The Home today bubbles with joy and laughter. Its present "family" consists of Sherri, 16; Susie, 16; Peggy, 15; Frances, 17; and Grace, 19; and the Maxon girls. Mildred treats all her "daughters" equally.

As a mother, she is both strict and gentle. She "reaches" each girl by a different route. For instance, Susie, who had been raised by lenient grandparents, came to the Home arrogant, abusive and lazy. One day she sassed Mildred and was hauled off to the kitchen and spanked. "Thank you," Susie sobbed afterwards. "That should have been done long ago."

On the other hand, Sherri arrived a wild and unmanageable creature, who promptly got into trouble at school. Mildred was called to the school where she declared, "I'm Sherri's mother and I love her. Please help me to help her." Sherri was so moved by the defense that she never misbehaved again.

Mildred's girls lead a demanding life. They have housekeeping duties, must follow a schedule and are restricted in what they can wear and when they must go to bed. They are allowed to date, but must answer a 10 o'clock curfew. They are told to abide by the Mildred's Happy Home Ten Commandments, which cover personal behavior and decorum and also stress "Go to church faithfully." And if they do not keep up their school grades, their privileges are revoked.

As of this writing, the Home has problems. It is threatened with a shutdown, because it is operating in a residential zone. In addition, the treasury is low and has only enough for a few months' operation. Finally, there is Dan. His unemployment compensation is about to run out. His health is not improving.

But Mildred just goes on giving. Perhaps the best testimonial comes from her daughter, Margaret.

"I'm a better person for the kind of mother I have," says Margaret. "She's brought us happiness and taught us the satisfaction of living for others. When I grow up I know the kind of mother I want to be—a mother just like mine." ■

Sympathetic Mildred consoles one of girls—Grace, 19—about a dating problem. Girls call her "Mommy," always seek her for advice.

Charitable Mildred and girls visit Phoenix Gospel Mission, Skid Row. They bring presents to derelicts, and also try to cheer the men up.

A child is born in Bethlehem

by JACK ANDERSON

BETHLEHEM, JORDAN.

WHEREVER A CHILD IS BORN, whether among the uncounted millions of Africa and Asia, on the lonely icecaps of the Arctic, or in the teeming cities of Europe and America, it shares something of the miracle of the child who was born in Bethlehem nearly 20 centuries ago. Even behind the curtains of Communism, where Christmas is celebrated only in secret, a birth brings joy.

Such joy came this year to Tofick and Aida Canavati. Their story is moving not only for its simplicity but for its similarity to that other glorious story of old, spanning the ages with a baby's first cry. For the Canavatis live in Bethlehem, across an alley and around the corner from the manger where Jesus Himself first drew breath.

Bethlehem remains much as it did when Mary and Joseph first halted before the inn and, finding no room, sought shelter in the stable. It is a huddle of flat-roofed stone houses, clinging to the bleak Judean hillside. Its narrow streets still echo to the clattering heels of heavily laden donkeys. In daytime, the little town of 8,000 people, mostly Christian Arabs, shimmers in the heat. In the evening, it becomes a jewel sparkling amid the velvet browns and purples of the ancient hills.

It is peaceful in Bethlehem. For gentle people live here, and the memory of Jesus is fresh and breathing. When darkness falls, the stars shine brighter than anywhere on earth. There is a star, goes a belief, for every child in the world.

On such a night of peace and serenity, with the stars sparkling above like the spear points of a heavenly host, Aida Canavati was delivered of her first born, Saliba, a son. (They are shown on today's cover at the site of the manger where Jesus was born.) Aida did not lie in a manger but in the humble home of her husband's parents. After the babe had been wrapped in swaddling clothes, wise men came with gifts: bearded, black-robed fathers from the Church of the Nativity next door. At their head stood the Rev. Saliba Canavati, the child's grandfather and namesake.

Mother and newborn son, Aida Canavati and Saliba, stand in front of grotto leading to manger where Jesus was born.

As she heard her baby cry, Aida must have thought how like the story of Mary was her own story. She, too, had come to Bethlehem, almost in despair, and had found happiness. A beautiful girl with the sweet, sad, majestic face of a madonna, Aida had come to Bethlehem as an orphan and refugee from Lydda, where St. Peter once cured the palsied man, Aeneas. She had known hunger and hardship.

Tofick Canavati had come from a strange and wonderful land called Texas. There his father, the Rev. Canavati, a Christian Arab, had spent several years in the Greek Orthodox ministry. But in 1935, he was recalled to serve in his native Bethlehem, and young Tofick returned with the family.

The Church of the Nativity, one of the world's oldest, was built in the fourth century over a grotto which most authorities believe to be the true site of the manger where the Christ Child was born. It is administered by Catholic, Greek and Armenian priests.

The great pile of gray stone might be mistaken for a fortress, except for the three cupolas from which the priests ring their separate Bethlehem bells. But the grotto, hung with rich drapes, lighted by candles, surrounded by shrines, is shared by all three sects.

It was here that Tofick first saw Aida attending the Greek services. He was as shy as she when their eyes first met in the gloom of a nave, and there were many glances before he summoned the courage to speak to her. Thus began the courtship that was to end in their marriage.

It was also to the grotto that little Saliba, dressed in his finest white gown, was brought to be blessed and baptised where his Savior was born. In Aida's eyes, Tofick had never looked more handsome, her son more like a cherub. To Tofick, Aida was the Madonna.

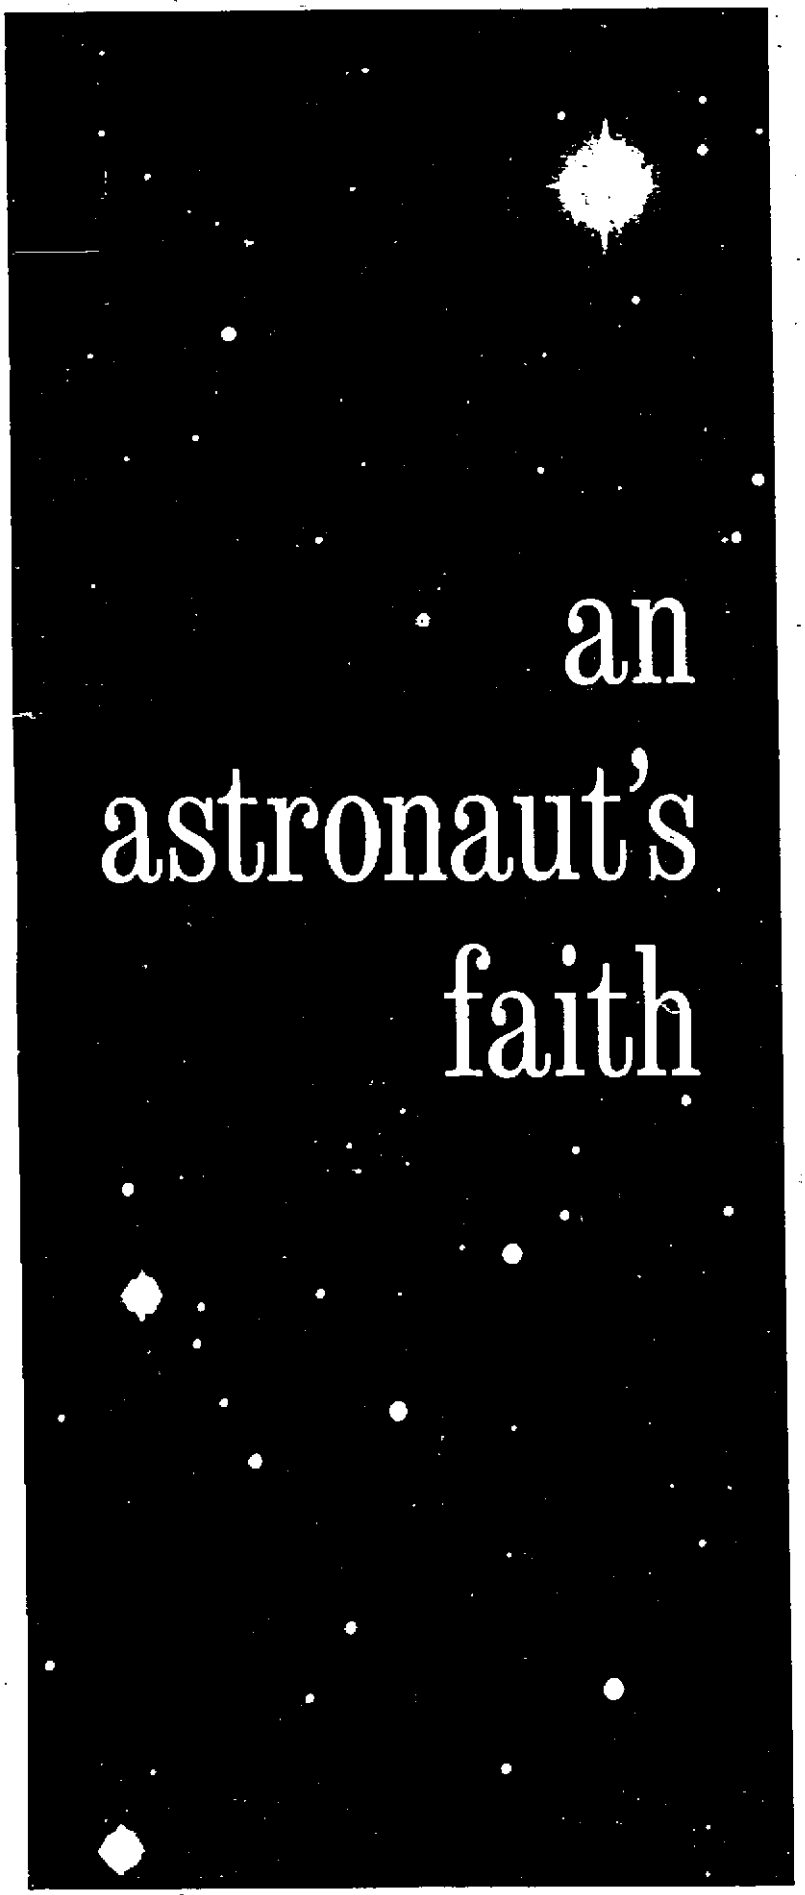

And gathered around them, once again, were the wise men, led by the Reverend Canavati. He might have been a prophet of old, but for the proud grandfather's smile that divided his ferocious black beard.

You do not have to travel to Bethlehem to see such a doting group. You have but to remember that Bethlehem is anywhere a child is born, wherever human hearts rejoice over the miracle of birth. For did not the Master say: "Suffer the little children to come unto me . . ."? ■

an astronaut's faith

One of the most widely acclaimed magazine articles of 1962 was "Why I Know There Is a God," by Astronaut John Glenn. It first appeared in PARADE, April 1. Many readers have since asked that it be reprinted. Here again—for the Christmas season—is Glenn's stirring message:

"WHY DO YOU WASTE YOUR TIME going to church?"

I was asked this question at one time by a fellow pilot in a Marine fighter squadron on Guam. This fellow's name was Sam, and Sam made no bones about the fact that he had been in church exactly twice in his life. One time was when he was baptized, and the other time was when his wife insisted on being married in church.

Well, by various devious means, we got Sam into church for the third time on Guam. I'm sorry to say this doesn't have a happy ending as far as Sam's becoming a practicing Christian. But the question posed by Sam—why do we waste our time going to church?—might be one for all of us to back off and answer once in a while.

Another way of asking the same question is probably to say, "Why do we believe in God?" I think it follows that if we believe in God, we probably will wind up in church. Is there a power greater than we are? Is there really a God that we worship, or are we just wasting our time? Have you ever doubted there really is a God?

I certainly have many times, and I admit it freely. I think perhaps this is part of our growth pattern in Christian life—that we do doubt sometimes. We may doubt that there is a God, and we search our minds for signs that we really believe and that we should believe in Him. Through such questioning of ourselves, I think we may be better Christians.

When I was selected for the space program, one of the first things we were given was a booklet. This booklet is a space handbook put out by the Government Printing Office, and it contains a lot of information about our space program. But there was one paragraph that concerned the hugeness and enormity of the universe that impressed me very much.

There is only one technical fact that you have to know to be able to understand this particular paragraph. You have to understand what a light year is, a light year of distance.

Probably you remember that light travels at about 186,000 miles per second, about 7 times around the earth every second. Now if you start that light ray out straight and let it continue on out for a year's time, then that distance is a light year of distance.

Let me quote now on the subject of how big our universe is: "When we recall that our galaxy is some 100,000 light years in diameter, the sun being an insignificant star some 30,000 light years from the galactic center, circling in an orbit of its own every 200,000,000 years as the galaxy rotates, we realize that even trying to visualize the tremendous scale of the universe beyond the solar system is difficult, let alone trying to attempt physical exploration and communications. Nor is the interstellar space of the galaxy the end, for beyond are the millions of other galaxies, all apparently rushing from one another at fantastic speeds. The limits of the telescopically observable universe extend at least 2,000,000,000 light years from us in all directions."

This shows us a little bit about how big our universe really is. It's tremendous. Still, we come back from something of this size to what we know of atomic structure, the smallest particles we know of. They, too, have a great similarity to our solar system and to the universe in that they have electrons rotating about a nucleus in regular patterns.

Now what's the point I am making? It's the orderliness of the whole universe about us from the smallest atomic structure to the greatest thing we can visualize: galaxies millions of light years across, all traveling in exact prescribed orbits in relation to one another.

Could this all have just happened? Was this an accident that someone tossed up a bunch of flotsam and jetsam, and it suddenly started making these orbits all of its own accord? I can't believe that's really true. I think this was a definite plan. This is one big thing in space that shows me there is a God, some Power that put all this into orbit and keeps it there. It wasn't just an accident.

Let's go on to compare some of our Project Mercury speeds to some of these things we've been talking about. We get to thinking sometimes that we're pretty good in this project and that we're really going out with some tremendous speeds. But when you think about the tremendous areas of space and speed, our efforts from earth here really are pretty puny. We will get up to about 18,000 miles an hour in orbit, which is about 5 miles per second. This is pretty fast by our earthly standards. We'll be at an altitude of a little over 100 miles. But thinking in terms of what's already going on in space, this is really a pretty puny effort.

We are used to dealing in scientific terms in all the measurements that are taken in science. But you can't reach out and say, "I would like to be a 110-volt Christian, and I am only a 5-volt Christian this morning. I'll have to go get pumped up some place."

YOU CAN'T MEASURE God in that way. We can't see, feel, smell or touch our religious power. It's an intangible something.

The same thing is true if we are getting ready to test a new airplane. It may have the most powerful engine in the world. It can have the finest aerodynamic design. It can go the fastest. But for the airplane to fulfill its mission, what do we have to do? We have to give it a direction. And how do we do this? We do this by reference to our compass in the airplane.

Now the force that runs the compass, you can't see, feel, touch, taste, smell. It defies all of our senses. But how do we know it's there? We know it's there because we see the results. We can look on an instrument here in the cockpit, and we can see that our compass is pointing a certain direction. And we have faith that the force making that compass work will continue to work. All of us who fly have staked our lives literally thousands of times on the fact that this compass will give us the proper reading and will guide us where we should go.

The same thing is true of the Christian principles in our lives. If we will let them guide us, our senses don't have to pick them up. We see the results of it in our lives and in the lives of other people. So we know it's there. There's no doubt about it. We see the results of it. We're going to believe in God and the teachings of Christ. But what was this man Christ like whom we're going to follow?

He's revealed to us in the Bible. As far as physical characteristics go, we don't know too much about Him. My impression of Christ physically is not the popular impression, I'm afraid. Somehow the idea of Christ the weakling. Christ the one on whom everybody heaped abuse, has never been an appealing one.

The emaciated Christ we see in the pictures is not my idea of Christ. I think He was a real man's man. I think He's someone we'd all be proud to follow. I read an article in which some place in the Bible said that Christ led His disciples from one spot to another spot in a day's time. They had measured this distance, and it turned out this was some 32 miles, I believe it was, in a day's time. How many of us could start out this morning and walk 32 miles by tomorrow morning, leading a group of men? I doubt if I could do it. I think Christ was a real man's man. He was someone really to follow.

THIS IS BORNE OUT to a degree, too, in one of my favorite passages. The Jewish Passover was approaching, and Jesus made the journey up to Jerusalem. In the temple, He discovered cattle and sheep dealers and pigeon sellers, as well as money changers sitting at their tables. So He made a rough whip of rope and drove the whole lot of them, sheep and cattle as well, out of the temple. He sent the coins of the money changers flying and turned their tables upside down.

The important thing is not the physical strength that Jesus used, in this example. The important thing is that Jesus had His beliefs, and He had the courage of His convictions to act upon them, to live by them. He believed, and He acted. These guidelines guided Christ in His everyday life when He was here on earth. The guidelines He used are available to us today, and they are just as timeless today as they were in Jesus' time.

These guidelines apply just as much to one business as they do to another. But the choice is ours. We are the ones who have to make the choice. God hasn't said, "You will do this." We have been placed here as free agents to decide whether we will or will not live by these guidelines. The choice is ours. ■

my favorite jokes

by JIM BACKUS

Shortly after working on a film in Alaska, I was on a New York-bound jet. I was seated next to a Texan. He started bragging and, among other things, told me he owned thirty acres. "Thirty acres," I exclaimed, "that doesn't sound like much for a Texan!" "Downtown Dallas," he retorted.

This man wouldn't stop talking about Texas. I then started telling him about Alaska, how high the mountains were, how large the salmon were, how a friend of mine had sold No-Cal blubber to the Eskimos, and topped it by needling him with the fact that Alaska was now our biggest state. "Oh, yeah? Alaska bigger than Texas?" he drawled. "Just wait till it melts!"

In my far-flung travels, I'm often asked just what is Hollywood. Actually, I'm still looking for the precise answer. But for now, I lean toward identifying it as a place where every actress thinks she's under 30 and every woman under 30 thinks she's an actress.

A Hollywood sob sister found the mother of a well-developed screen princess unusually modest. "My little girl," admitted the mother, "is like any typical American young lady who earns more than two million dollars a year."

Christmas parties in Hollywood are a real institution, and naturally I love them. There's always plenty of mistletoe and a chance to meet Hollywood's most wonderful stars. Last year I went to one party where a big redhead rushed up, grabbed me and planted a kiss. But who wants to be kissed by Red Skelton?

I know one kid in Bel Air who is getting a set of trains for Christmas—the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe.

Overheard at a Hollywood restaurant:

Actress: I think I'm getting a new cigarette lighter for Christmas.

Starlet: Ronson?

Actress: No, I believe his name is Smith.

And there's one Texan who's so rich, he's sending J. Paul Getty a CARE package for Christmas.

I'm giving my wife a diamond bracelet. You know what diamonds are, don't you?—tranquilizers for women!

The difference between a male pancake and a female pancake, in case anyone should ask you, is in how they're stacked.

Anecdote of the week

AT MGM IN HOLLYWOOD, as in other film studios these days, a few of the executives over lunch were discussing the feasibility of taking old movies and adapting them to new TV series. That's the vogue at the moment, i.e. Gene Kelly in Going My Way and Fess Parker in the video version of Mr. Smith Goes to Washington.

In the course of the discussion one fellow mentioned the possibility of making a Western-type TV series out of the old film, Viva Villa, in which the late Wallace Beery played the Mexican outlaw Pancho Villa.

A hungry actor at a nearby table overheard the discussion. When he had finished lunch, he raced to a phone booth and rang the executive who'd made the suggestion.

"Sir," he began, "if you make that TV series on Viva Villa, you've got to use me. I was in Mexico for years. Matter of fact, Viva and I were personal buddies."

Two beams in one: With this new movie light (above) you can throw either a flood or concentrated spot beam at the flick of a switch. Especially useful with zoom cameras, the 2-filament lamp matches light coverage to varying viewing angles of the lens—flood for close and medium distance shots, spot for long. Complete with lightweight, ventilated hood and a bracket that adjusts for lighting angles from direct to 90° bounce: $17.95. Flex Electric Products, Dept. PP, 39-08 24th St., Long Island City 1, N.Y.

Table-top golf: Here's fun for the whole family—a 9 hole miniature golf course in a 22¼" x 23½" plastic case you can set on floor or table. It incorporates bridges, tunnels, sand traps, other hazards—and a 5"-tall mechanical golfer. You dial angle from which golfer makes his shot to each hole—work a lever to control length, speed and touch of stroke. Result: a game of skill with some of the fun of real golf. $17.98. Schwarz, Dept. PP, 745 5th Ave., New York, N.Y.

Rechargeable radio: You never have to replace batteries in a new pocket-size, 6-transistor radio. Plug into any AC outlet and it recharges overnight, plays up to 15 hours on each charge. With black leather carry case, earphone jack. $29.95. Gulton Industries, Dept. PP, Metuchen, N.J.

Ice tray caddy: No need to chip and chop to remove ice trays with this caddy (above). It's made of steel rod with a thick white plastic coating to help keep frost from forming so trays are easier to remove. 5¼" wide, 9" high, 10" deep; fits most cross-top freezers; holds 4 trays. $3.50 postpaid. Leslie Creations, Dept. PP, Lafayette Hill, Pa.

Step de-icer: Put a new mat outside on a house step and it helps solve a dangerous winter problem—icing after snow or rainstorm. Its ¾" layer of special foam and rubber yields enough as you step on it to crack up ice so you can clear away pieces with a few broom strokes. Stays springy in all weather, makes efficient mud mat, too. 8" x 24": $2.49; 10" x 24": $2.98; 16" x 24": $4.98; 20" x 24": $5.98. Outdoor Step De-Icer, Dept. PP, 246 Washington St., Weymouth 88, Mass.

Battery checker: You can tell instantly whether any cell in your car battery needs water with new plastic caps that replace the originals. Each has a float rod in its center that shows water level at a glance. 6 for $1.19. Andott, Dept. PP, P. O. Box 7637, Riverside, Calif.

FOR NEW YEAR'S EVE

Special buffet treat

by BETH MERRIMAN Parade food editor

After the last note of Auld Lang Syne bids the old year good-bye, surprise your guests with a midnight supper, featuring Hot Chicken Salad Pie, made the day before and heated at the last minute.

HOT CHICKEN SALAD PIE

5 cups diced cooked chicken*
1 teaspoon monosodium glutamate
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup mayonnaise
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon dry mustard
1/16 teaspoon cayenne
1 10-inch baked pastry shell
3 tablespoons melted butter
2 cups tiny bread cubes
1 cup grated American cheese

Sprinkle chicken with monosodium glutamate and salt. Combine mayonnaise, lemon juice, Worcestershire sauce, dry mustard and cayenne; mix well. Add to chicken; toss to blend. Turn into prepared pastry shell. Combine butter and bread cubes; sprinkle over chicken. Sprinkle with cheese. Bake at 350°, 30 to 35 minutes, or until heated through. Makes 8 servings.

*Put 2 broiler-fryer chickens in kettle with tight-fitting lid. Add 2 cups water, 2 small onions sliced, 2 celery tops, 2 bay leaves and 2 teaspoons each monosodium glutamate and salt. Bring to boil; reduce heat; simmer 40 minutes. Remove from heat; pour broth through strainer. Remove skin from chicken; discard. Remove meat from bones in as large pieces as possible. Refrigerate meat and broth at once. When cool, dice chicken. Makes about 5 cups chicken.

FROM PARADE'S TEST KITCHEN

FIDGET MYSTERY. Why do people fidget so much? A group of British doctors are determined to find out. They are conducting a series of experiments at the Graylingwell Hospital, Chichester. Volunteers are being wired to electrical machines which record their every twitch. Thus far doctors have found that "anxious" people fidget to avoid nervous tension; in many cases the nose-pullers, skin-scratchers and finger-drummers suffer from frustration and marked mental conflict. The doctors have also proven that emotions can produce so much muscle tension that people find the pain unbearable. There is also evidence which leads to the belief that fidgeters are primarily thin people who burn up most of their excess energy by constant activity.

BOOTLEGGING. One of the biggest and most dangerous U.S. rackets today is the bootlegging of poisonous moonshine liquor. In the past decade production of illegal liquor has averaged 50,000,000 gallons a year. Approximately 20,000 stills are raided each year. Reason for moonshine is to avoid federal tax on liquor, which is $10.50 per gallon, one of the highest taxes in the nation on any commodity. Consumers who patronize bars are warned to suspect any bartender who either demands payment in advance for a drink or turns his back on the customer while filling his shot-glass.

HOSPITAL EMPLOYEES. Four out of every five hospital employees in the U.S. are women.

FILM DRUNKS. In Colorado drunken drivers are frequently filmed from the moment they arrive at the police station. This produces an irrefutable record of their behavior. As a result, Colorado drivers accused of intoxication have raised their guilty pleas in one year from 20% to 85%. Other states and countries are thinking of using the same procedure.

SUPERSONIC AIRLINER. An Anglo-French supersonic airliner flying at twice the speed of sound — New York to London in three hours — will shortly go into the planning stage. The joint project is an attempt by British and French aircraft manufacturers to capture the lucrative civil aviation market from the Americans. First supersonic airliner should be completed by 1969, cost $750,000,000. Undoubtedly U.S. manufacturers will join the production race.

ITALIAN WOMEN. Long considered homebodies, Italian women no longer are. Approximately 300,000 women in Italy are currently managing businesses, pointing up the massive intrusion of females into that country's postwar industrial complex. There are now more than 6,000,000 women gainfully employed in Italy, outnumbering men in three major industries — textile, clothing and paper. Faster and faster, Europe is becoming Americanized.

Film actresses Claudia Cardinale...

Sophia Loren (shown with Tony Perkins) and...

Gina Lollobrigida are among Italy's working women.

COMEDIENNES. What show biz needs most: comediennes. Women who are genuinely funny, who can make the audiences laugh, can earn $5,000 a week and up. Jackie Gleason and Garry Moore are both desperate for comediennes. So, too, is Hollywood. Newcomer Carol Burnett, who starved a few years ago, is now good for $250,000 a year.

STARTLING REPORT. Dr. John Scott, medical officer of the London County Council, offers some amazing facts about the intelligence of British children relative to their physique and the size of their families. In the British Journal of Preventive and Social Medicine, Dr. Scott reveals that children of large families are smaller and less intelligent than children of small families. After studying 6,200 boys and girls age 10 and 11, the doctor claims that children from large families tend to mature later physically and mentally.

DEATH RAY. Government scientists the world over are searching for a death ray. Writing in the British scientific journal, Discovery, C. M. Cade, a crack English engineer, points out the possibility of beaming man-made thunderbolts or bolts of lightning on specified enemy targets. War weaponry becomes more frightening each day.

GLASS HOUSES. So many adults and children have crashed through the sliding glass doors in today's modern houses that revised standards for glass doors and picture windows have recently been announced by the Federal Housing Administration. Recommended are markings or insignia on the glass to distinguish the interior from the exterior of the house — also the use of safety glass, wired, tempered or laminated so that it doesn't shatter. By April, 1963, builders will be required to comply with minimum-thickness specifications.

TEACH OR RESEARCH. One of the most perplexing problems in the education field is to determine the primary function of teachers. Should they teach or do research? Most college faculties are being pulled two ways. The glory and the promotions lie in research and specialization, but the institutionalization of research eventually threatens the survival of the liberal arts colleges since expert professors tend to regard teaching undergraduates as nuisance work.

WHAT WAS THE FIRST CHRISTMAS LIKE?

LONG BEACH, CALIFORNIA—SUNDAY, DECEMBER 23, 1962

GEE! WITHOUT SNOW AN' SLEIGH BELLS IT'S HARD T'REALIZE THAT CHRISTMAS IS NEARLY HERE AGAIN!

IT IS EVEN HARDER TO REALIZE THAT, FOR MANY HERE, THIS WILL BE THEIR FIRST CHRISTMAS!

"IT IS NOT THE WEIGHT OF JEWEL OR PLATE, OR THE FONDLE OF SILK OR FUR; 'TIS THE SPIRIT IN WHICH THE GIFT IS RICH, AS THE GIFTS OF THE WISE ONES WERE, AND WE ARE NOT TOLD WHOSE GIFT WAS GOLD, AND WHOSE WAS THE GIFT OF MYRRH." —EDWIND WENCK COOKE—

Y'MEAN KIDS DON'T HAVE CHRISTMAS, WHERE THEY CAME FROM?

OH, MOST OF THESE FOLKS BELIEVE IN WHAT CHRISTMAS IS MEANT TO CELEBRATE, BUT THEY NEVER HAD SANTA CLAUS AND CHRISTMAS TREES!

LEAPIN' LIZARDS! AND NO PRESENTS IN THEIR STOCKINGS ON CHRISTMAS MORNING?

IT'S BEEN A LONG TIME SINCE MANY OF THEM HAVE EVEN HAD STOCKINGS!

WELL, THEY'RE CATCHIN' ON QUICK T' OUR WAY O' CEL'BRATIN' CHRISTMAS! HAVE Y'NOTICED?

THE SECRET: LITTLE SMILES, THE SHINING EYES, THE SMALL, HALF-HIDDEN, BRIGHTLY-WRAPPED PACKAGES? YES, ANNIE!

BUT WHEN FOLKS ARE SO AWFUL POOR WHAT CAN THEY POSSIBLY HAVE TO GIVE?

EVEN THE POOREST HAS SOME ONE POSSESSION, PRICELESS TO HIM OR HER ALONE!

A BRIGHT BUTTON, PERHAPS; A SPECIAL MARBLE; A LITTLE PICTURE; A BROKEN COMB, SET WITH COLORED GLASS! WORTHLESS? NOT TO THE CHILD WHO TREASURES IT!

Y'MEAN TO SAY THEY'D GIVE THINGS LIKE THOSE FOR PRESENTS?

GEORGE ELIOT WROTE: "ONE MUST BE POOR TO KNOW THE LUXURY OF GIVING". YES, ANNIE! THEY'LL GIVE THEIR ALL TO THOSE THEY LOVE THE MOST!

GUESS WHEN Y'VE GOT TH' MONEY T'BUY 'MOST ANYTHING, Y'DON'T THINK HOW MUCH GIVIN' CAN MEAN!

IS IT TRUE THAT EVER'BODY IS INVITED TO TH' HACIENDA FOR CHRISTMAS DINNER? EVER'BODY?

YES! IT HAS BEEN SO FOR 150 YEARS!

ALL BRING GIFTS AND ALL RECEIVE GIFTS, IT IS THE TRADITION OF THE HACIENDA SEVILLE!

WOW! EVEN LITTLE GIFTS T'HUNNERTS O' FOLKS MUST RUN INTO AN AWFUL LOT!

TH' WAY IT IS WITH DONA ISABEL —ER—THAT IS— HOW CAN SHE SWING IT?

THAT IS A SECRET ONLY A TRULY GREAT LADY OF SPAIN COULD KEEP SO WELL!

BUT ONE THING THAT IS NOT A SECRET! IT'S GOING TO BE A VERY MERRY CHRISTMAS HERE AT THE HACIENDA!

Y'BET IT IS! AND WE HOPE IT'LL BE THE SAME OUT THERE AT YOUR HACIENDA, TOO!

ARF!
